97-Degree Heat Arrives Before Summer

Summer heat beat the season's official June 21 arrival by a week Wednesday as the mercury soared to 97 degrees, highest temperature of the year.

The 97 reading eclipsed the one-day old previous high of 93 recorded Tuesday. Prior to the current heat wave the hottest temperature was 92 May 25.

Temperatures are expected to continue above normal through the weekend.

Escorts, Winner at Malden, in State Event

The Escorts, 15-year-old junior high school students, advanced to the state finals by winning a Junior Chamber of Commerce Battle of the Bands contest at Malden in April.

They will compete in the state event at the rodeo grounds Saturday afternoon.

The Escorts, Geoffrey Comer, organist; Ted Watkins, bass guitar; Mont Mitchell, drummer; Tim Chambers, lead guitar; and Doug Lambert, rhythm guitar, began their climb by winning the Kiwanis club talent contest in Charleston in 1966 and appeared at the Midsouth Fair in Memphis, as contestants for the Ted Mack Amateur Hour.

Playing for the Mississippi County Rescue Squad Talent show, private parties, Boy Scout and Girl Scout functions, the group has made appearances in the Sikeston and Charleston area.

The Escorts give a weekly program Saturday over a local radio station. They are scheduled to appear at a Jaycee Splatter Platter party at the Jaycee swimming pool July 1.

DEXTER - Dr. H. Tudor Westover, president of Three Rivers Junior College at Poplar Bluff, explained the roll of the junior college in education at the Chamber of Commerce meeting.

Dr. Westover stressed the roll the junior college will play in the area.

It was reported to the Chamber that the industrial committee had met and set up objectives. The committee elected Bud Davis chairman.

Bob Blankenship reported on last week's meeting at Bloomfield concerning the promotion of a county health center.

It was reported that the retail merchants committee had met and made plans for a sales promotion.

Two visitors, Art Collins, president of the Poplar Bluff Chamber of Commerce, and Joe Palozzola of the International Hat Company, were present.

Stennis Unconvinced by Dodd's Denial of Charges

By JOHN CHADWICK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Stennis said today he failed to see how any impartial person could go through "this morass of money" involved in Sen. Thomas J. Dodd's affairs and conclude "that a grievous wrong has not been done to the Senate."

Stennis, the Mississippi Democrat who is chairman of the Senate ethics committee, said he would never come to the conclusion that a senator should be censured unless he were strongly and firmly convinced that "a wrong has been done to this institution."

The ethics committee found that Dodd, a Connecticut Democrat, had converted political funds to his personal use and had billed both the Senate and private organizations for travel expenses.

It submitted a resolution to the Senate to censure him for conduct that "tends to bring the Senate into dishonor and disrepute."

Stennis, in a rebuttal to Dodd's dramatic and emotional denial Wednesday of any wrongdoing, said the Connecticut senator had claimed but failed to offer proof that $150,000 in debts represented political rather than personal indebtedness.

Referring to the committee's hearing last March when testimony was taken under oath, Stennis said that "we were hungry for proof that these were political obligations."

Earlier today, Stennis said

House Puts Off Remap Issue Again

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House got a respite today from congressional redistricting problems after a day of wrangling failed to solve them.

The issue was put off until Monday after a hasilty called Democratic caucus which drew criticism from Negroes, Republicans and dissident Democrats who had joined forced in an attempt to adopt the Senate reapportionment proposal.

It would put most St. Louis Negro voters in the Democratic 1st District of northern St. Louis now represented by veteran Rep. Frank M. Karsten.

Rep. DeVerne Calloway, D-St. Louis, one of the 12 Negroes in the House, was bitter about the delay. She said the Negroes were committed to the Senate bill because it would give them a chance to elect Missouri's first Negro congressman.

She said they would continue to vote with the Republicans if they also wanted to go along with the Senate version.

She said the purpose of the Democratic caucus was to get together on a bill that could close the Democratic ranks and send the whole problem to conference committee for settlement.

In committee action the House constitutional amendments committee approved two Senate measures to change Missouri tax laws.

One would allow the legislature to adopt federal income tax definitions in order to simplify state income tax forms. The legislature would still control state rates and deductions.

The other would permit a special equalization tax for St. Louis County school districts which would benefit the poorer districts but not help the richer ones.

Lull in Fighting Breaks

By GEORGE MCARTHUR

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Marines battled Communist troops today at two points south of Da Nang. The war's tempo rose again after a lull reflected by the fact American combat casualties last week were the lowest in nearly two months.

A Marine spokesman said a battalion of the 5th Marine Regiment fought a Communist force of undetermined size that had pounced on two or three Leatherneck platoons with heavy mortar and automatic weapons fire 25 miles south of Da Nang.

There was no announcement of casualties on either side.

Elements of the 7th Marine Regiment battled about 60 uniformed Viet Cong in Operation Arizona, 14 miles southwest of Da Nang. The Marines, saying nothing about any losses of their own, reported killing 15 of the Viet Cong.

A hard-core Communist battalion of about 500 men was cut to pieces in the Mekong River delta Wednesday by U.S. helicopter gunships and artillery and a crack South Vietnamese division.

The South Vietnamese said 211 of the Communists were killed, 17 were captured and many more wounded in a blistering battle in which the Red commander was bested by the battle-tested Vietnamese 21st Division.

As the two-week lull in the ground war broke, another Red battalion of about 500 men fell on an American company in the

Hearnes to Talk to Electric Cooperative

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes will address the Scott-New Madrid - Mississippi Rural Electric Cooperative at its 30th annual meeting at the Armory June 27. Four directors will be elected.

A crowd of 1,500 to 2,000 is expected for the meeting which will begin after registration at 10 a.m., with President Ernest Moxley, Charleston, presiding.

Hearnes will speak at 2 p.m.

In addition to the three counties, parts of Cape Girardeau, Bollinger and Stoddard Counties are served by the cooperative, which has a membership of 10,500.

In the morning session the minutes will be read by the secretary, Mrs. Mary Lou Schneider of Matthews.

The nominating committee will recommend re-election of four board members, whose three-year terms will expire. They are Jesse Bennett, Bloomfield; Alwin Gasser, E. S. Nelson, Wyatt, and Tom Moore, Matthews.

Members of the committee are, Orval Shoe, Wyatt; Robert Crow, Dexter, chairman; Mrs. Schneider, Gilbert Spears, Bell City; William K. Blue, Bloomfield; Roy Burke, Charleston; and Henry Voshage, Jackson.

Stands will be provided on the grounds for sandwiches and refreshments.

In a business meeting at 1 p.m. new federal legislation affecting rural electric cooperatives will be discussed. The purpose of the legislation Manager James C. Stephenson said, "is to provide banking credit for the cooperatives and expand the lines to take care of additional air-conditioners, irrigations, irrigation and other electrical loads." Loans would be made from a federal electric bank under the proposal.

Warren E. Hearnes

Afternoon entertainment will include Glen Hall at the organ; the Austin acrobatic family; the globe-trotting Grimaldis family with clown acts, and Billy Papon, master of ceremonies, pantominist and harmonica player.

The entertainment will be furnished by the Missouri Electric Caravan, which will supply gents, chairs and stage as well as the entertainers.

A refrigerator and air conditioner as well as small electric appliances will be given away as door and attendance prizes.

Displays of appliances, farm implements and automobiles will be on the grounds.

Following adjournment, the board will meet at the cooperatives' office on East Malone, to reorganize and elect officers.

Thant Begins Poll

By WILLIAM N. OATS

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — An emergency session of the U.N. General Assembly, requested by the Soviet Union to discuss the Middle East war, appeared assured today on the basis of early replies to a poll being taken by Secretary-General U Thant.

The session was expected to begin this weekend.

By noon, 22 of the 122 member nations had replied and all were in favor of the session, a U.N. spokesman said.

Sixty-two affirmative replies are required to call the meeting, but no major opposition is expected.

U.N. diplomats expected the session to become a high-level affair, attended by a number of heads of government.

Secretary-General U Thant began polling the 122 U.N. members on the Soviet request for the session after the Security Council refused Wednesday to approve a Soviet resolution condemning Israel's "continued occupation" of Egyptian, Jordanian and Syrian territory taken in the war last week.

The Russians wanted the council also to demand that Israel troops pull back to the lines they held before fighting began June 5.

Thant must call the assembly session within 24 hours after receiving affirmative responses from a majority of the members — 62 nations. Diplomats generally believed that a majority would agree by Friday and that

Woman Injured As Cars Collide

Mrs. Barbara Yount, 32, Granite City, Ill., a passenger in a 1967 Ford, driven by Robert Yount, 38, also of Granite City, was injured in a two-car collision yesterday at 5:35 p.m. on highway 72, five miles east of Patton in Bollinger county.

A 1947 Chevrolet, driven by Ardell Seabaugh, 30, Sedgewickville, attempted to make a left turn when the cars collided, the state patrol reported.

Mrs. Young was taken to the Madison County hospital, Fredericktown, suffering cuts and bruises.

Seabaugh was given a summons for defective equipment.

At 11:30 a.m. yesterday on highway 60, five miles east of Charleston, a 1964 International tractor-trailer, driven by Harold Dick, 53, Melvindale, Mich., collided with a 1965 Buick, driven by Loren Parks, 72, Welesco, Tex.

The Parks car started to pass the truck in the face of oncoming traffic. It cut back into the line of traffic and struck the truck's left front fender.

Mariner 5 Soars Toward Venus

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Locked firmly onto the light of Canopus, Mariner 5 soared on toward Venus today on its 212-million-mile journey through space.

The spinning spacecraft, launched early Wednesday from Cape Kennedy, Fla., settled into a firmer position, scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said, after Mariner had found its guiding star.

The 540-pound craft by error latched onto the sunlit face of earth before its sensors picked out Canopus as ordered by its tracking station in California.

"It was still so close to earth that it locked on the earth's bright reflection," a scientist explained.

When it was blasted aloft by an Atlas-Agena D rocket, Mariner was aimed within 42,600 miles of Venus.

Two Men Guide Raft Down Mississippi

Rocky Sapp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Sapp, and Skip Crumpecker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Crumpecker, left Bird's Point, near Cairo, yesterday continuing a raft trip down the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers.

The two left from a point on the Missouri River between Jefferson City and Booneville Tuesday and had traveled approximately 169 miles on the Missouri River and 195 miles on the Mississippi River to Bird's Point.

In four days they expect to reach Memphis and conclude the trip.

The raft is rigged with a seven and a half horsepower motor, a rudder, a sail, rarely used because of the south wind, and three days' supply of food.

The boys built the raft from scrap lumber and 55-gallon oil drums. When they reach Memphis, they plan to give the raft to a friend.

Flood Crest Nears Glasgow

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Missouri River flood crest neared Glasgow, Mo., today, leaving a series of breaks in smaller levees along the stream.

The water reached 29.5 feet this morning at Glasgow on the east side of the river in Howard County. A crest of 30.5 feet is expected later today.

Major levees in the area are expected to handle crests of 30 feet or more, but workmen were out early today shoring up danger spots.

Meanwhile, the Grand River began falling slowly at Chillicothe after reaching a crest of 33.10 feet, the fourth highest on record. This morning the level there was down to 32.50.

Most of the levees along the Grand in the Chillicothe area were breached.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
NEWSPAPERS, THEIR USE AND PRESERVATION

The first of five workshops designed to help elementary and secondary schools improve their instruction through regular use of the daily newspaper in the classroom will be held at the University of Iowa, June 18-30. The two-week sessions are sponsored in this country by the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the National Council for the Social Studies.

The second will be held at the University of California, Los Angeles, June 25-July 7; the third at Syracuse University, July 9-21, and the fourth at the University of Georgia, July 23-Aug. 4. A fifth, sponsored by the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association, will be held at the University of Waterloo, Ont., July 23-29.

These will not be journalism seminars. Stanford Smith, general manger of the ANPA Foundation, says: "The focus of this program is to develop critical readers and better citizens, rather than to train writers."

In a somewhat related development, the proposed "Failing Newspaper Act" (S 1312) is beginning to move in the U.S. Senate. This would partially relieve newspapers from the antitrust laws by allowing two of them to use the same plant and business offices so long as they remained corporately and editorially separate.

The measure arises from a Justice Department suit against two Tucson newspapers which have been operating jointly since 1940. Papers which have combined plants in other cities are threatened - the cities include San Francisco, Honolulu, Evansville, Ind., Fort Wayne, Shreveport, Albuquerque, Tulsa, Franklin and Oil City, Pa., Nashville, El Paso, Salt Lake City, and Charleston, W. Va.

Hearings by the Senate Antitrust subcommittee are slated for late June. In 1954 there were 106 cities with separately owned daily newspapers. In 1964 there were approximately 66 such cities.

'DISTINCTION' FOR MISSOURI

Missouri now has the "distinction" of being one of two states in the nation with a United States Senator under investigation by the Senate Ethics Committee.

It is a most dubious distinction.

The Ethics Committee has already started a check into the wondrous ways of our junior Senator, Edward Vaughn Long of Bowling Green, a sometime-lawyer who has represented this state in the Congress since the death of Thomas C. Hennings.

But Missouri has not been all that Senator Long represented, for as a lawyer, he has also represented some law clients in close cooperation with St. Louis criminal attorney Morris Shenker.

So valuable were Senator Long's legal talents that the Shenker law firm, which represents such luminaries as James Riddle Hoffa and Lawrence Callahan of the St. Louis Steamfitters union, paid our junior Senator $48,000 over just one 24-month period.

Most lawyers outside of Congress would be happy with such fees and most would have to spend every waking moment to earn this kind of money.

But Senator Long literally earned the fees with one hand tied behind his back, as supposedly he was also serving in the Congress, assisting the nearly five million citizens of Missouri, and at the same time serving as chairman of a special wiretapping subcomittee. In addition, he spent his spare moments writing a book, "The Intruders," that has just been published.

Our junior Senator is, indeed, a busy man.

But now the citizens of Missouri must watch as the Senate Ethics Committee investigates the activities of one of their elected representatives. And now we know how the citizens of Connecticut felt as Thomas Dodd was under investigation.

Putting it mildly, the investigation does not give Missourians much room for state pride in one of its elected representatives to the federal Congress.

Esquire Harrison observed that an interruption is the best way to make a long story short.

With spring brightening the countryside in most of the nation, more and more cars will be taking to the open road in the months ahead.

Driving for pleasure is probably the nation's most popular pastime, with good reason.

But that inviting and peaceful-looking country road may be a highway that leads straight to the cemetery.

Rural two-lane highways are the most dangerous in the nation, accident statistics show.

The reasons are many: narrow lanes; poor pavement; inadequate, unsafe design of the roadway, and the absence of standard, well-maintained and uniform traffic signs.

Recently, safety experts have zeroed in on yet another cause of accidents on rural roads. High-speed autos often share the roadway with slow-moving vehicles, chiefly tractors and other farm equipment.

There are, by conservative estimates, 12 million slow-moving vehicles that operate regularly on the nation's highways. A slow-moving vehicle (SMV) is defined as one that travels at speeds of less than 25 miles an hour.

In a typical year, such vehicles are involved in 7,000 to 8,000 accidents, including about 100 fatalities and 1,600 to 1,800 non-fatal accidents. The total cost of such mishaps is estimated at $9 million annually.

Researchers studying the problem have concluded that the drivers of other vehicles need a unique warning device to alert them to the presence of a slow-moving vehicle.

To solve the problem, professors at Ohio State University developed a SMV emblem that now has been adopted as a standard by the National Safety Council, the American Society of Agricultural Engineers and other safety groups.

The emblem consists of a 16-inch-wide triangle with a yellow-orange fluorescent center and a red reflective border. The center portion "glows" in daylight. After dark, the border, the same material used on reflective license plates and traffic signs, is visible at 2,000 feet in the headlights of a car.

"See this - slow down - that's the simple message explains one safety expert.

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks that bald men get tired of hearing:

"Hi, there, cueball!"

"Have you read any good hair-raising mysteries lately, Elmer?"

"Cheer up, old man. They say that in a million years or so everybody will be bald. If you can just hold out until then, you'll have plenty of company."

"Don't tell me that's Elmer K. Bugby. Why, in high school he had the longest, curliest hair in our class. All the girls envied him."

THE CHOICE IS OURS

No editorial embellishment is needed for the following program for combatting "crime and chaos in our land," set forth in a recent issue of the F.B.I. Law Enforcement Bulletin. The author was J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Bureau.

"I sincerely believe:

"That we must reawaken in every citizen a fierce devotion to supremacy of law and equal justice;

"That we must forever renounce the idiocy that associates glamor and heroism with law-breakers;

"That all criminals must be brought to the bar of justice for realistic handling, not merely maudlin sympathy;

"That means must be provided to defeat the enemies within our borders who are puppets of enemies from without;

"That we must insure by every lawful means that differences are resolved in the courtroom, not in the street;

"That we must adamantly insist that each individual is held responsible for the natural and probable consequences of his acts.

"Let the hoodlum, the racist, the demagogue, and the exponent of anarchy know that the great, quiet power of this Nation lies in her law-abiding citizens, and they will stomach no more. The choice is ours. The time is now."

Precisely because he holds these views, the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been Number One on the Hate Parade of the bubbleheads and eggheads, Communists and mobsters for many years. Together, the Hoover-haters exercise tremendous influence. They have destroyed a lot of good people in our time.

The fact that they haven't been able to get J. Edgar Hoover is cause for thanksgiving. And reason for hope.

It certainly is not because those communications media which "associate glamour and heroism with law-breakers" haven't tried.

THEY WERE THERE

Two U.S. pilots who have flown many missions in Vietnam have publicly accused the Pentagon of sending combat pilots on missions against worthless targets, and with far less than a full load of bombs and ammunition, just to give the "statiscal" impression that a great deal of pressure is being put on the enemy regime in North Vietnam.

One of the pilots, whose letter was published in the authoritative magazine Aviation Week, remains anonymous, presumably because he is still on active duty and flying such missions. The other identified himself as Navy Lt. Norde Wilson, who resigned from the service after flying 125 missions in Vietnam.

In a letter to Congressman William E. Minshall, of Ohio, Lt. Wilson said that many other pilots are planning to quit because they are fed up with the "weak wills" and "blundering" of civilian officials in Washington, and because many of the targets assigned for attack are not worth "any one of our lives or planes."

It isn't only pilots who are called upon to risk their lives on pointless and futile missions, and evidently it is not only pilots who are fed up. The Marine Corps announced on October 17 that "about 500" resignation requests from commissioned officers were being "deferred" because the officers have skills which are vitally needed in the Vietnam war.

What good does it do to retain in service men with "vitally needed" skills of war, if they are not permitted to use those skills to the fullest?

The sending of a combat pilot on a mission which may cost his life, without fully equipping him to influct the greatest possible injury upon that enemy, has to be a crime. For the sending of ten planes - and crews - to do the job that five could do, means exposing crewmen and planes needlessly to the flak and rockets of the enemy. Somehow it seems like a court martial offense, though it is quite conceivable that the people are beyond the reach of a court martial.

We've seen no more eloquent indictment of the conduct of the war in Vietnam than the report that 500 Marine Corps officers want to resign.

And if that doesn't shake you too, then tell it to the Marines.

Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, NATO Supreme Commander, one of America's most brilliant military figures, arrived the other day in the Belgian village of Casteau, outside Brussels, to lay the foundations stone of the new NATO headquarters.

The village band, on hand for the ceremony, opened with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Thinking he was listening to the Belgian national anthem, Lemnitzer came to attention, snapped off a quick salute. Immediately others in the ceremony followed suit. Orders have now gone out to all NATO officers to recognize the Belgian national anthem and to familiarize themselves with Beethoven's works.

The clubhouse boy replied, "Mr. Thomas, you might just as well have sent a lettuce leaf by a rabbit."

"Stupid!" he yelled at me. "Stand on top of the table and make a speech with your hands."

H. L. Hunt Says

U.S. ALLY IN VIETNAM

It is significant that the nation giving the United States the most help in resisting communist aggression in South Vietnam is an Asian country which itself has been the victim of such aggression. This is the Republic of Korea, the southern half of the Korean peninsula.

South Koreans know from first-hand experience intentions in Southeast Asia. South Korea accordingly has sent some 46,000 troops and 10,000 technicians to South Vietnam. This is an impressive contribution for a nation of only 28 million people. The Korean troops have proved themselves brave fighters in Vietnam.

There is nothing unfashionable about being an anti-communist in South Korea. Homes bear signs on the doors showing that the residents are members of the Anti-Communist League. The Asian Freedom Center in Seoul, the capital city, is an anti-communist training school. School children are given courses in "moral education," in which the evils of communism are made abundantly clear.

The people of South Korea know that the communist threat to their property and lives is very real and very close. Just across the Demilitarized Zone dividing the country, the communists of North Korea look with envy and hate on the economic growth of the southern area where private initiative is encouraged. South Korea has to keep up its guard. The country maintains a strong military defense. The people are determined not to lose the freedom won at the cost of great suffering. They are anti-comminist all the way. HLH.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON - As a result of the Dodd censure debate and the Bobby Baker scandal, the American people is inclined to think that Washington is riddled with corruption and conflicts of interest. My own observation, over a period of many years, is that the United States Senate can stack up in honesty with the directors of any business corporation and that our Federal government has one of the highest standards for honesty in the world.

In no country, with the possible exception of some British and Scandinavian nations, is there such a high standard of honesty among government bureaucrats as exists in the Johnson administration today.

The General Services Administration is a case in point. These officials handle billions in government contracts, millions in the purchases of land and building construction. They negotiate with private enterprise, are completely frank and honest, get the best deal possible for the United States government. They cannot be influenced, and most private businessmen who work with them don't dry.

Not long ago a group of government officials in the District of Columbia, several of them Negro, considered filing for a public service television license in order to promote education and better race relations in the nation's capital.

They knew that more than 100 members of Congress owned radio and TV stations and that there was no clear rule against a government official going into the TV business. After all, the president of the United States, when a senator, was very active in television.

NEW ETHICAL STANDARDS

But as a precaution they checked with John Macy, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, to see if there was any conflict. Macy saw no direct conflict but advised that the officials lean over backward and not make the TV application. They followed his advice.

This reveals the fact that the Johnson administration, without fanfare, has set up a tough and unprecedented system to prevent conflicts of interest. When a Federal appointee takes office, he files with the Civil Service Commission a list of his property, stocks, bonds, etc. This can be checked against his net worth when he leaves office to see if he has benefited during public service.

This is the first time in history that such a system has been carried out by the executive branch of the government. It was a similar proposal, made in the Truman administration, that caused Attorney General Howard McGrath to resign. Such a system has also been proposed in the House and Senate, but always turned down. A few senators and congressmen do file their net worth voluntarily, such as Wayne Morse, D-Ore., and about 20 members of the House. But the great majority do not.

However, the Johnson administration has very quietly put the system into effect.

JACK-THE-ADMENDMENT MILLER

Sen. Jack Miller, R-Iowa, is such an eager-beaver in amending pending bills that he keeps his own typewriter in the Senate Republican cloakroom just off the Senate floor in order to dash off amendments with greater facility.

This has caused frowns from some Republican colleagues because it prolongs debate. They also consider some of his amendments irrelevant, and have dubbed their colleague from Iowa "Jack-the-amendment Miller."

On June 6 when the Senate Republican policy committee met at luncheon, someone called attention to the fact that it was Sen. Miller's birthday, and moved to express the felicitations of the Senate Republican Policy Committee.

But Sen. Thurston Morton had another idea.

"Let's offer an amendment that his birthday shall be on June 7 instead of June 6," proposed the Senator from Kentucky.

ARAB SOCIAL WHIRL

Nasser's campaign to persuade Arab nations to sever diplomatic relations with the United States will put quite a dent in the Washington social whirl.

There was a time when Arab envoys didn't rate socially. They just weren't seen at the best parties. But in recent years they have almost led the social swim. Their shish-kabob and belly-dancing parties have been the talk of Washington. The Ambassador of Kuwait, Talat Al-Ghoussein, and his beautiful wife gave some of the Capital's swankiest parites, and the Ambassador was also famous for taking poker money away from such redoubtables as Art Buchwald and David Brinkley.

Ambassador Ahmed Osman of Morocco and his wife, Princess Lalla Nouzha, threw their embassy open to raise money for many charitable causes.

Many of these embassies will not be closed. In fact, Shen Ambassador Amin Ahmad Hussein of Sudan scheduled an art exhibit last week, suddenly he got word that diplomatic relations were severed. He was being recalled. So he tacked a note on the door of the exhibit: "In view of the Middle East war, the reception planned for this evening will not take place. Visitors are welcome to come in and view the exhibit and discuss the present crisis."

The dapper and brilliant Algerian Ambassador, Cherif Guellal, a bachelor, also is being recalled.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

THE HOSTS WITH THE MOST

No Social List Complete Without Its Bevy of Labor Leaders

Washington, D.C.: -- It's a good life some labor chiefs are leading in high society among poor and rich millionaires alike. These labor leaders are proving that politics can be a great social leveler and that they can be good mixers in any great society -- Democratic or Republican.

Just the other Friday night peppery Dave Dubinsky, the ladies garment workers animated symbol, was rushing out of the White House. He bumped into an old friend -- Nelson Rockefeller -- who asked "Dave" whither was he hastening. The needle trades' "D.D." ebulliently greeted Nelson and "Happy" Rockefeller and replied he had to catch the last air shuttle back to New York.

Nelson observed as how he had his own plane waiting. So the three good comrades flew back. The governor and his lady were bound for Westchester airport (N.Y.), but did put down in New York City so Dubinsky could get off.

They had spent that evening, June 2, as President Johnson's guests, along with some 125 others at the State banquet honoring Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson. When Dubinsky, on the receiving line before dinner, got to Mr. Wilson, the President began introducing the veteran union chief to the Laborite Prime Minister. But Mr. Wilson grinned and said, "Oh, we're old friends." The only other labor leader at the White House that evening was another old friend -- George Meany. But still another of the Prime Minister's friends, Walter Reuther, was among those who did not come to dinner. He was not invited.

And so it goes. The previous night the President had invited folks in to break bread with a good ally, Australia's Prime Minister Harold Holt. That night the building service employees president Dave Sullivan and the shipbuilding union's Johnny Grogan mixed with the great society.

Labor is part of the establishment now. No president would think of a soiree or state affair without them. It's just a matter of matching rank with rank.

When, some days later, America's African friend, Dr. Hastings K. Banda, president of Malawi, came to lunch, so did a bunch of the labor boys from across the tracks -- Bill Buck of the firemen, Bill Gillen of the insurance workers, Bill Pachler of the utility workers, Al Heaps of the retail and wholesale workers, and Al Rohan of the printing pressmen.

They come, of course, to mix with the great, and because the White House is where the action is and because it is politic to accept and politic to invite them. They have come of age here in the great halls of London and never is it forgotten that one of them speaks for the U.S. in the congress of the world -- the U.N.

Nor is it the White House alone in which they mingle with high society or, rather, society joins with them. Exactly a week after the White House banquet for the Queen's First Minister, Governor Nelson Rockefeller and his lady threw the party of the year up at the family estate in Pocantico Hills. The governor later said he had invited in mostly his own personal friends from the arts, the sciences and the rest of our classless society to help Mrs. Happy Rockefeller celebrate her 41st birthday on the lawn under a vast tent.

There was the rough-hewn Pete Brennan, leader of New York State's Building and Construction Trades. He enjoyed every bit of it in black tie, sitting there alongside Mrs. Ethel Kennedy, Laurance Rockefeller and Sen. John Sherman Cooper. And there was the perpetually motioned Harry Van Arsdale, the labor leader's labor leader, head of the 1.2 million-member New York City Central Labor Council. He sat with the head of a national radio and TV broadcasting chain, Mrs. Robert Wagner and some Broadway talent.

Only the night before, the New York State Republican Party had virtually taken over the Waldorf-Astoria for a victory celebration of some 5,500 guests willing to pay $150 each. Hundreds of labor officials from some 40 unions crowded into the special labor reception room to shake the governor's hand and be photographed with him.

Of course, the national nominating conventions and the presidential campaigns are but a year off. But the labor leaders would be coming to dinner and surging into the soirees even if no one was running for anything.

It's a long way from Pearl Mesta. The host with the most is the party-giver with the new class -- the men of labor -- amply represented. Even the poorest millionaire knows that.

Miss Judith Griffey Pledges Vows With Gary Williams

Miss Judith Griffey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren H. Griffey, 300 Broadway, became the bride of L/Cpl. Gary Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil D. Williams, 722 East Kathleen, May 28 at 8 p.m. at the home of the bride's parents.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edward Fowler, Methodist minister from Bernie. Arrangements of Queen Anne's lace and daisies graced the fireplace mantle, the background for vows.

To the strains of "The Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin", the bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of French designed scalloped Chantilly lace. The close fitted bodice featured a sabrina neckline. Tapered sleeves came to lily points over the hands. The bouffant skirt featured cascades of scalloped lace ruffles and was worn over a hoop.

A double tiara of seed pearls secured her elbow-length, two tiered veil of silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of roses and orange blossoms with white satin streamers tied in lovers' knots.

Miss Lana Becking of Bernie, served as maid of honor. She wore a sheath frock of navy blue trimmed with white lace and carried a nosegay of miniature tangerine colored roses. Attending Williams as best man was the bride's brother, Thomas Griffey.

Miss Griffey, mother of the bride, wore a tangerine sheath dress with tucks adorning the front and wore a corsage of yellow roses tinged with tangerine. Mrs. Williams, mother of the groom, wore for her son's wedding an aqua and white jersey dress with a short jacket and her corsage was tangerine colored roses.

Men of the wedding party wore white rose boutonnieres with their suits except the groom who wore his Marine uniform.

A reception was held. The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a three tiered wedding cake decorated with red roses and white bells and topped with the traditional miniature bride and groom. On each side of the cake were white candleholders with red candles. Red punch was served from a crystal punch service by Miss Pat Gray and Miss Becking served the wedding cake.

The bridal couple left for a short honeymoon then left for California where the groom is serving with the Marines.

Pat Nugents Awaiting Arrival of First Child

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Luci Johnson Nugent shopped at a supermarket for family groceries and her mother says she's "singing like a lark" as the birth of her first baby approaches.

"Luci has everything in readiness," Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson said today.

She said her 19-year-old daughter even went shopping for Father's Day presents.

Luci's father, the President, is expected here this weekend to join members of the family who are stork-watching. And, of course, there was Luci's husband, Patrick J. Nugent, 23, expecting to be a father by Father's Day, June 18.

The date the baby is expected is Saturday, June 17, but there are some doubts that the birth would come that soon.

Luci isn't acting as though the birth is imminent, and spokesmen for the family are beginning to suggest a later date for the birth.

A steady stream of cars at the Nugents' fashionable pink brick home at 2706 Macken Drive Wednesday brought workmen, a piped music firm representative and a stream of Secret Service men.

Luci, herself, finally emerged late in the day to be driven off by a Secret Service agent to do the family shopping.

When she emerged from the supermarket about a half hour later, the President's daughter, wearing dark glasses, and a green and white polka dot tent dress, was carrying a hefty bag of groceries. She was followed by a clerk with a bagful in his arms, too. The Secret Service agent followed, watchful but empty-handed.

Mrs. Johnson said she was keeping in touch by phone and would divide her time between Pat and Luci in Austin and tending to household duties at the LBJ Ranch 65 miles away where the President was to entertain Australian Prime Minister Harold Holt this weekend.

The First Lady flew here from Washington Tuesday night and said she had dinner and "a wonderful evening" with the young Nugents.

But while Mrs. Johnson was relaying comments to the press, Luci was bent on privacy and her husband, Pat, was refusing to take any phone calls.

The main thing the Nugents and the Johnsons wanted to keep secret for now was the wedding anniversary: "This year, let's give each other sensible gifts - like neckties and sable coats."

first grandchild will be born.

Insiders now say Luci and her team of doctors — there probably will be six, including two anesthetists—prefer Seton Hospital, a five-story red brick general hospital, run by the Catholic order of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul.

In case of emergency, they will go to Brackenridge, a sprawling red-brick, city-owned hospital, the only hospital in Austin with a resident staff of doctors on 24-hour duty.

Officials at both hospitals denied they were in a stork race.

Sale Planned

The Woman's Society of Christian Service of Wesley Methodist church will sponsor a bake sale Saturday beginning at 9:30 a.m. in the Midtowner Village shopping center.

Proceeds will be used to buy choir collars.

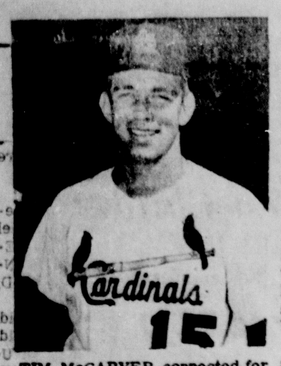
Mets Unload Against Cincinnati

Birds Flock Home As McCarver Connects



TIM McCARVER connected for a grand-slammer in the first inning of last night's baseball game against Pittsburgh, starting the St. Louis Cardinals off to a 7-4 victory. It was his sixth homer of the season.

Let's play baseball manager. It's early in the game, there are runners at second and third with a tough hitter at bat and a lesser threat on deck. You issue an intentional walk, right? Wrong.

Harry Walker of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia's Gene Mauch played the obvious strategy of the deliberate base on balls Wednesday night and both regretted it later.

Walker ordered Mike Shannon passed in the first inning against the Cardinals and then watched Tim McCarver wallop a grand slam home run that triggered St. Louis' 7-4 victory over the Pirates.

Atlanta's Joe Torre got the intentional treatment from Mauch in the fourth inning and then trotted home behind two other runners when Clete Boyer unloaded a grand slam that helped the Braves to a 16-7 triumph over the Phillies.

In other National League action, New York's Bob Shaw shut out first-place Cincinnati 4-0, Houston downed San Francisco 7-4, and Los Angeles ended an eight-game losing streak with a 4-3 victory over Chicago.

Left-hander Billy O'Dell was working for the Pirates so after Orlando Cedpda's double put runners at second and third with two out in the first, Walker ordered Shannon, a right-handed hitter, walked to pitch to lefty swinging McCarver.

The homer, on an 0-1 pitch, was McCarver's sixth this season and his third career grand slam. Cepeda drove in two more Cardinal runs later and Bob Gibson survived an 11-hit Pirate attack to go the distance for his eighth victory.

Hank Aaron's one-out double following an error put Mauch on the spot in the fourth inning of the Phillies-Braves game. He had Larry Jackson walk Torre, a much tougher hitter than Boyer, who was on deck.

The slam was the fourth in Boyer's career and his ninth home run this season. Aaron added his 17th later and Tito Francona, traded by Philadelphia to Atlanta only Sunday, socked his first against his exmates.

Shaw scattered six hits and Tommy Davis drove in three runs as the Mets defeated the Reds.

New York pushed across an unearned run driven in by Davis' sacrifice fly in the first against Jim Maloney and Shaw made it stand up until the eighth when consecutive doubles by Ken Boyer and Davis produced three more.

Houston jumped on Gaylord Perry for five straight hits and five runs in the first inning and then held off the Giants.

Jim Wynn's two-run triple and a two-run single by Bob Aspromonte were the key blows in the Astros' spurt. Aspromonte drove in two more runs with a sacrifice fly and a single as Don Wilson scattered eight hits and struck out 13 Giants.

Ron Perranoski, the Dodgers' fourth pitcher against the Cubs, got Lee Thomas to ground into a bases-loaded double playchoking off a Chicago rally in the ninth inning.

Len Gabrielson and Dodger starter Claude Osteen homered in the fourth while Ernie Banks and Ron Santo connected for Chicago.

Potlatch Wins League Opener 7-0

Manley Whitewashes Fisk

Rudy Manley hurled the Potlatch Forest Connie Mack team to its opening season baseball victory over Fisk last night at VFW stadium, pitching a no-hit, 7-0 victory.

Potlatch, in defense of its Black River conference baseball title, got into the scoring column in the first inning after Manley set the side down in order in the top half of the inning.

The Potlatch right hander beat Fisk, striking out 12-batters and issuing two walks in seven innings.

Manley did not allow a Fisk base runner to advance past first base and had only two on base all night. Both were retired, one on a double play and the other on an attempted steal. Gary Owens, Mike Garner and Manley supplied the power, Owens had a three for four performance at the plate with a double and Garner and Manley poled two hits each.

It was Fisk's second loss of the season to go along with one win, over Puxico.

Sikeston meets Poplar Bluff at 8 p.m. tonight at Poplar Bluff.

Bruce Farris and Garner will make up tonight's battery.

Last nights win puts Sikeston in first place in the league, with one win and no defeats. All other league teams have been defeated.

Golf Boycott Imminent

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — There appears no immediate solution to the bitter fight between the Professional Golfers Association and tournament players for control of the $4.5-million tour.

Predictions in informed golf circles today were that Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Bill Casper and some 150 other touring pros would strike out on their own next month after the PGA National Championship Tournament, scheduled at Denver.

The question is: Can these transient pros run their own show?

The players gave the PGA until today to accede to their demands for greater control of the tour, including the privilege of setting tournaments, handling television proceeds and naming administrators for the tournament bureau.

The PGA insists it won't give in. "We can't live with that kind of arrangement," said PGA President Max Elbin of Washington, D.C., who has given golf lessons to three presidents at the Burning Tree Golf Club.

The PGA has issued an ultimatum of its own — effective also today. Under it, the 150 players who have signed a protesting petition must remove their names or be subject to possible suspension and withdrawal of playing privileges.

The players say they won't do it.

So the U. S. Open Championship, not affected by the feud because it falls under the jurisdiction of the U. S. Golf Association, will proceed as scheduled with the player revolt temporarily shelved.

The day of accounting may not come until the PGA Championship at Denver July 20-24, although Elbin and the PGA Executive Committee have invited the players to air their grievances at an open meeting in Cleveland next Tuesday.

The players indicated they may boycott it. "We have asked for meetings before and they won't listen to us," Doug Ford, a member of the four-man tournament committee, said.

If the players boycott the PGA Championship, as threatened, they will face suspension under an ethical provison of the PGA constitution.

Then sponsors of subsequent PGA events, with hundreds of thousands of dollars invested, will face the dilemma of playing outlaw competitors or canceling the tournaments.

"We have assurance from most sponsors they will stick with the players," Ford said.

Every prominent tournament player except Doug Sanders has signed the petition threatening a boycott and an independent association. Arnold Palmer and Julius Boros signed Tuesday. Bill Casper added his name Wednesday. Jack Nicklaus was one of the more than 130 who signed two weeks ago at Memphis.

It is a strange war of control, but one that has flared off and on since the tour was started on peanuts back in 1929 by Tommy Armour, El Espinosa and J.J. Patterson. They were the first tournament committee.

There are 5,895 members of the PGA. Of these, only 200 are tournament players. The others are the club professionals, who tend the pro shops, manicure the courses and run their courses.

7 Occasionally they venture onto the tour. The players insist that these so-called shop keepers have too much voice in their affairs.

That's the crux of the problem, which appears far from being resolved.

NCAA Championships Begin Tonight At Provo

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Rain sprinkled the Brigham Young University stadium as a number of top collegiate athletes warmed up for tonight's start of the NCAA championships.

The Weather Bureau said it expected a clearing trend by the start of field-event qualifying at 5 p.m. MDT. The temperature has been in the mid-50s much of the week.

Distance star Gerry Lindgren was expected to give Washington State the early lead in team competition, which again shapes up as a battle among West Coast powerhouses such as Southern California, Oregon and defending champion UCLA.

Lindgren won both the three-mile and six-mile runs last year, and is superior to all competition this year on the basis of times. the six-mile is the only final tonight. The others will be Friday and Saturday nights.

The 4,500-foot altitude, which causes many distance runners to suffer from aching lungs and heavy legs, was mentioned by some as a possible hope for Lindgren's competition.

It was little consolation, however, to Ambrose Burfoot of Wesleyan, who ran in the NCAA College Division meet at a similar altitude in Ogden, Utah, last week. Burfoot said "smart distance runners like Lindgren" would handle the altitude.

The rain, while understandably bothersome to the practicing athletes, had no harmful effect on the all - weather, rubberized asphalt track. If anything, the surface appears to suffer more from softness in hot, dry weather.

Vern Wolfe, the Southern California coach who got world record-breaking performances last week from his 440-yard relay team and pole-vaulter Bob Seagren, said he expected Oregon and UCLA to be USC's main challengers for the team title.

He also listed San Jose State, Kansas and Villanova as possibilities.

Southern California's strength rested with Seagren, its relay teams, and other standouts such as hurdlers Earl McCullouch and Geoff Vanderstock, sprinter Lennox Miller, discus thrower Gary Carlsen and half - miler Dennis Carr. All are at or near the top of their respective events on the basis of entry performances. Southern Cal also has a number of unheralded competitors who could score decisive points.

Oregon, team champion or co-champion in three of the last five NCAA meets, beat both UCLA and USC in the Pacific-8 Conference meet and has entered men in 26 spots for this meet.

Ironman Tommie Smith could bring San Jose State into contention, if he follows the entry sheet that lists him in the 100, 220, 440 and mile relay. However, it was doubtful he would actually run in all of those.

Smith, Lindgren and weightman Randy Matson, the world record-holder in the shot put and a rapidly improving discus thrower, appear to have the best chances for individual point honors.

Jim Ryun, world record-holder in both the mile and half-nuke, is not expected to try for a double. The finals of those events are only 40 minutes apart, and the competition is such that he could not afford to coast in either.

Twins Rise to Third Place Tie As Kaat Pitches 7 - 0 Shutout at Detroit

Associated Press Sports Writer

About the firing of Sam Mele, "I have nothing to say," Jim Kaat says over and over, but he's doing plenty of talking on the mound since Mele left.

The Minnesota left-hander beat Detroit 7-0 Wednesday night with a five-hitter, his second straight complete game victory since new Manager Cal Ermer took over last Friday. The 25-game winner of last year had won only one game and lost seven under Mele and failed to complete any of his first 12 starts.

Kaat insists it's just a coincidence — and it probably is — but whatever the reason, he has the once-sluggish Twins in a third-place tie in the American League.

They share third with Baltimore and Boston after Kansas City belted the Orioles 9-2 and the Red Sox split a doubleheader with first-place Chicago, losing 8-7 before winning 6-1.

The New York Yankees split with Washington in another twinbill, winning 7-1 and losing 3-2, and California nipped Cleveland 3-2 on Bob Rodgers' two-run single in the ninth inning.

Katt resumed his turnabout before former Twins' pitching coach Johnny Sain, the man whose firing last fall at the request of Mele prompted a controversial letter by Kaat praising Sain and criticizing Minnesota for letting him go.

Sain, now the pitching coach at Detroit, felt Kaat "looked like the same old Kaat to me.

"He's too good a pitcher not to bounce back," Sain said.

"I've always felt like my old self, "Kaat said, "but earlier this year, I couldn't get any consistency with my pitches. And the main thing is we've gotten big leads in the last two games and tonight we made five or six great plays that took away hits."

Katt struck out six and walked none as he allowed only two Tigers to second base. Harmon Killebrew, Jerry Zimmerman and Rod Carew supplied the power, each with two-run homers. Zimmerman also singled home a run.

Chuck Dobson, also coming on strong for Kansas City, stopped the slugging Orioles on one run before a jammed finger on his pitching hand forced him out in the seventh inning. Entering the game with two straight shutouts, he allowed only five hits in six innings to raise his record to 4-2.

The White Sox won their opener on home runs by Tommie Agee, Dick Kenworthy and Walt Williams, but Wilbur Wood had to strike out George Scott with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth inning to end the game. Scott and Rico Petrocelli had homered earlier for Boston.

Scott also homered in the nightcap, along with teammate Carl Yastrzemski, and Reggie Smith's pinch hit triple drove in two more runs as Lee Stange won his first game with seven innings of five-hit pitching.

Mike Epstein doubled in two first-inning runs and singled to set up the decisive marker in the fifth, giving the Senators a split on the five-hit pitching of Phil Ortega. Steve Whitaker homered for the Yankee runs in the ninth inning.

Al Downing hurled a seven-hitter in the opener for New York and was aided by Charlie Smith's two triples which drove in two runs and led to another.

Mickey Mantle broke Lou Gehrig's Yankee record for games played when he appeared as a pinch hitter in the second game, his 2,166th.

Rodgers delivered the Angels with his hit off relievered George Culver following one-out singles by Don Mincher and Jimmie Hall and a walk off starter Sonny Siebert. His homer had given the Angels their first run in the fourth after Rocky Colavito hit a two-run blast for Cleveland in the first.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Huseim Erkmen of Turkey, trainer of the Mexican National amateur wrestling team, suffered a heart attack Wednesday. His condition was termed serious.

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Ron Clark, rookie third baseman of the Minnesota Twins, had fluid drained from his right elbow Wednesday at the Mayo Clinic and doctors said he should be able to play in about two weeks.

The sore elbow had impaired Clark's throwing, and Monday the Twins placed him on the disabled list for three weeks.

MOSPORT, Ont. (AP) — Garry Congdon of Gardenia, Calif., escaped injury Wednesday when his Harrison Chev Special went off the track in a practice spin for Saturday's 200-mile auto race.

$478 Million Produced From Gas Tax Sharing

JEFFERSON CITY - Missouri's gasoline tax sharing plan has produced $478,459,911.33 in five years for the state highway department, 668 cities and 114 counties, the Missouri Oil Council reported today.

"This is nearly $78.5 million more than was anticipated," Sam Overfelt, executive director of the council, said.

Overfelt called the road and street program "the best bargain drafted for all taxpayers" and declared many attempts to change it "should encounter vigorous opposition."

The gasoline tax sharing plan was adopted by Missouri voters at a special election on March 6, 1962. It provided a five cent state tax on each gallon of gasoline with 80 per cent of the proceeds to be used by the State Highway Department; 15 per cent by all incorporated cities with more than 200 population; and the remaining 5 per cent by Missouri's 114 counties.

Overfelt said the Highway Department was promised in five years it would receive no less than $320 million; the cities were told their share would be no less than $60 million; and the counties were pledged no less than $20 million.

He reported gasoline tax receipts in this period have "supplied $34,939,495.88 more than the guaranteed amount to the State Highway Department; allocated $6,434,811.63 over the amount promised to cities; and provided $2,144,603.82 additional for the counties."

Cost of collections and refunds during the five years totaled $34,950,000.

Another guarantee written into the sharing plan and approved by the voters was that no city with its own gasoline tax would receive less than the city's own levy produced in 1960.

There were 106 cities which had their own gasoline tax abolished. The guarantee for five years amounted to $42,817,419.60. "Actually, these 160 cities have received $49,735,884.05," Overfelt said.

"Of the 106 cities with a guaranteed 'floor' 87 have had these promises exceeded -- some by several hundred per cent. Even the prsent day cost of living doesn't exceed this record," the Oil Council Director declared.

Overfelt pointed to such cities as Florissant, Bellefontaine Neighbors, Independence, Jefferson City, St. Joseph, Overland, University City and Webster Groves as communities which had their own gasoline taxes repealed only to reap larger amounts.

Florissant's city gasoline tax in 1960 produced $39,076.32 or a promised $195,381.60 in five years. Overfelt said Florissant's share of the gasoline tax in five years has been $768,417.95 -- a $573,036.35 bonus.

Bellefontaine Neighbors has realized $242,882.69 more than was promised. Independence has received $267,651.25 additional. St. Joseph's share has been $453,463.86 more than was promised. Overland has been allocated $203,478,71 in excess of its pledge. University City's share has topped the $1 million mark or $271,286.52 above what was pledged. And Webster Groves has received $270,585.61 over estimates.

Overfelt said the 19 cities still receiving their "floors have actually received the best of the bargain. Because the gasoline tax sharing plan for cities is based on population and 1960 city gasoline tax guarantees. When consumption of gasoline is low in the winter months other cities suffer. But the floor cities get their guarantee regardless of the amounts of the collections."

The Oil Council director also pointed to the 562 other cities sharing gasoline tax receipts. "This has been new money for all of these cities and has amounted to $16,698,927.57 in five years," Overfelt said.

Joplin has been the greatest benefactor in this category, receiving $784,363.73. Other cities receiving funds from gasoline taxes for the first time and their five year totals include: Cape Girardeau, $502.272.13; St. Charles, $426,610.14; Hannibal, $403,235.06; Poplar Bluff, $320,647.09; Sikeston, $277,133.85; Moberly, $265,159.00; Kirksville, $264,212.65; Carthage $266,784.32; and Warrensburg, $190,073.98.

Of the 668 cities, St. Louis City has received the biggest amount- $16,168,569.51 as compared with a pledge of $15,300,772.20. Kansas City ranks second. It was promised $11,043,079.20 and has received $11,179,055.80.

"The counties have fared equally as well," Overfelt said. "St. Louis County has been the greatest benefactor with $2,508,464.67 deposited in its account in the past five years. This is $563,248.67 more than St. Louis County was expected to receive when the program was presented to voters five years ago.

"Greene County has been allocated $206,658.32 more than was ancitipated. Jackson County has received $152,874.14 over original estimates and even Worth County -- the least populated in Missouri -- has topped its expectations by $5,293.66."

Overfelt said, "almost without exception the plan has provided more money for the State Highway Department, the cities and counties than was anticipated."

He also pointed to the 4 cent Federal tax on each gallon of gasoline which s an estimated $382,767,929.04 in the past five years.

"The grand total for gasoline taxes paid by motorists in Missouri in the past five years is $861,227,840.37," Overfelt declared.

Allocations by counties with the first figure representing March, 1967, allocations which were placed in each county's special account in May, 1967. The second figure shows the amount each county has in its account as of May 17, 1967, and the third figure shows the amount allocated each county in a five year period:

Butler - $3,460.25; $26,633.41 and $171,218.89.

PERKINS: Miss Mary Louise Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Davs, Oran, and Robert Stanley Woolf, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Woolf, were married on Saturday morning at 10 at the Baptist church with the Rev. troy Haupt performing the double ring ceremony. Baskets of white mums and pink carnations graced each side of the alter. Gail Bumgardner of Perkins was accompanist for Brenda Jones who sang "I Love You Truly."

Miss Davis, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of imported silk organza and chantilly lace. The lace bodice featured a scallopped sebrenia neckline with long close fitted sleeves that came to points over the hands. The bouffant skirt had double-soft pleats at the waiste forming the fullness that swept into a full chapel-length train, which was accented with a lace insert in the center back and bordered with a wide band of scalloped lace. The skirt front, covered with lace was also bordered with wide scalloped lace. Her elbow - length bouffant veil of important English illusion was attached to a cap of lace coverec florettes outlined with pearls and centered with a crystal. She carried a bouquet of white carnations centered with a purple throated orchid.

Miss Myra Woolf, sister of the groom, served as maid of honor. Miss Sue Davis, sister of the bride was bridesmaid. They wore formal gowns of turquoise chiffon over satin with an Empire wasiteline with a Watteau train. Their nosetip veils of turquoise net was attached to a cabbage rose of self material. They carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Raymond Stanley was best man with Jim Davis, Chaffee, brother of bride, serving as groomsmen.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church basement which was decorated with white wedding bells. The sefving table, covered with a white cloth was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake with crystal punch bowls at each side. Servers were the Mrs. Norman Eftink, sister of the bride, Mrs. Raymond Stanley and Miss Susan Woolf, sisters of the groom.

The new Mrs. Woolf is a 1967 graduate of Oran High School and the groom is a 1962 graduate of New Madrid high school and has served in the armed forces. They will reside in Indianapolis where he is employed by Westinghouse.

Cut Eating Time

Anthropologists believe that before man began cooking he must have spent most of his waking hours chewing food. Once having learned to cook and thus break down the tough fibers of meats and roots, he was able to cut his eating time to about two hours a day.

Man Wishes He Had Lawn To Mow Now

RICHMOND, B.C. (AP) — Curtis Eystone decided replacing some of his lawn with concrete would cut down on his mowing. Now he has a lake and wishes he had some lawn left to mow.

Eystone planned to fill in a big chunk of his half-acre lawn with a large, curved driveway leading from a new bridge over a ditch in front of his property.

As the last load of concrete arrived Tuesday, the old wooden bridge collapsed under the 21-ton truck.

Firemen arrived and began trying to wash out the six tons of hardening concrete.

A crane tried to lift the truck and the cable snapped, plunging the truck, nose down, deeper into the ditch.

Two more cranes came and moved the truck. But in the process they chewed up the driveway, knocked down fences, uprooted trees — and broke the water main leading to the house, creating the lake.

When Eystone's wife and 2-month-old son Michael got home, they found about 200 spectators outside and no water inside. They moved to a hotel.

The lake in Eystone's front yard still was growing Wednesday night, fed by water from the main flowing down foot-deep ruts.

"We don't know where the main broke," Eystone said, "so we're going to have to dig about 170 feet from the main to the house, and there goes what's left of the lawn.

"My yards looks like a second world war battlefield. Damage is about $5,000 to the place, and $25,000 to the truck, but the trucking firm says to go ahead and have repairs made, so that's one problem off our minds.

"I don't like mowing grass, and I don't like concrete any more, either, but I haven't figured out which is worse."

Better Tea

Altitudes of 3,000 to 7,000 feet produce the finest quality of tea. The moderate temperatures at these heights produce a smaller leaf with less water content and more flavor.

About Our Schools

By Lynn Twitty

The Board of Education is scheduled to receive bids on the first unit of the schools' building program on June 29th. Included in this phase are the enlargement of the library, the kitchen and cafeteria at Senior High, the construction of two additional classrooms of the science-math complex and eight new shops and classrooms for the trade-technical school.

These were given priority as they are most needed in our educational program and as these particular facilities are most crowded at present. The preparation of plans for the second and/or third phase of the program are proceeding with the expectation that they will be completed and ready for prospective bidders possibly in August. This phase will include the elementary school, planned for the Ables Road location, and the field house to be placed on the Senior High School campus.

Reports from other schools indicate that building prices continue to advance. Several schools have had the lowest bid to come in 20-25% above their original estimates. The primary reason for this increase is the continued escalation of labor scales, especially in this area controlled by St. Louis labor union jurisdiction. The labor scale is set by the state and federal governments and even though union rates for labor are lower in our immediate area, St. Louis rate scales must be met. We can only hope that our costs are within the amounts of money we have available for the building program. When the bond issue was voted, our estimated were well within our resources, but later labor cost increases will, of course, affect our program.

Bill Sikes, who is in charge of our Manpower Development Training Program, and who has other administrative assignments in our schools, was a featured speaker and consultant at a meeting on post-school programs held at Topeka, Kansas recently. He appeared on both a morning and afternoon sessions and spoke on the topic: Comprehensive Adult Education Programs, followed by a lengthy question and answer session.

The program of adult education conducted by our Board of Education, under several different full or partially federally financed titles, is one of the largest and most comprehensive in the nation and those of our administrators and teachers, directly concerned, are becoming in demand for advice and consultation on this type of education.

Some of the items included in our summer maintenance and repair program are to: re-roof the Lincoln School gymnasium-auditorium; a new roof on the Middle School gymnasium-auditorium; to repair the roof on the main building at Middle School; to begin the installation of new metal windows at Bailey; the installation of florescent lights at Bailey; to repair the Lee Hunter roof; re-decoracent lights at Bailey; to repair the Lee Hunter roof; re-decoration of the interior of Matthews Elementary; to construct parking facilities in connection with the proposed field house, and also for student and faculty use, to enlarge faculty and parking facilities; to re-surface the tennis courts; to partially redecorate the Middle School building and cafeteria and numerous other painting, repairs, cleaning and refurbishing at all schools. Obviously we do not have time or money enough to do all of these but they will be taken up in the order of their importance to the educational and community programs.

The maintenance of existing facilities is a continuous expense and somehow seems to be increasingly more costly as materials and labor costs go up. Our income, from all sources, does not increase at the same rate.

It is probable that the Missouri General Assembly will pass legislation providing for some state financing for a kindergarten program. This is not the case at present. The bill, under consideration, provides for state money to pay almost one-half of the cost of operating a kindergarten program. It would pay nothing toward the costs of getting started, i.e.: buildings, equipment, etc. We estimate that to operate a program here for the number of children whom we would likely serve, would cost about $65,000 per year, in addition to the state aid, and not to include cost of buildings and other beginners of expenses. As most of our patrons are aware, we do not have $65,000 of unencumbered funds in the present budget under our current tax structure.

Unquestionably a public school kindergarten would add greatly to our educational program. However, its value, in relation to the additional money required, is a decision which we believe should be left up to our patrons. We are convinced that the small additional tax levy required to pay for it would be justified. However, we are only one voter and one opportunity to make this decision, if and when the legislature provides for some state financial support.

It would not be possible to organize a kindergarten program, including hiring the qualified teachers which are required, and in the face of a general teacher-shortage, to get started by next fall. But, this is a matter of providing better schooling for our children which we should be considering for a future decision.

A preliminary study of the results of our annual standardized testing program indicates that our elementary children range from an average of three months above national average standards at the end of the first grade to about eight months above at the fifth grade level. We do not yet have the scores on the Middle or Senior High School students but indications are that, here also, we still continue to score above national average. While our results are not nearly as good as we would like them to be, and as we don't consider national averages to be very high, we are at least getting these results at about $150.00 per pupil less cost than is the national average per pupil expenditures. We are not proud of this fact, but it is merely one of the facts of life. We simply don't have any more money. We are pleased that our teachers are doing more, with less, and their efforts deserve full credit for any results which we may get. We will give you more information as to the quality of education in our schools, the results we are getting for the taxpayers' dollar-and this is our only reason for existence - to teach children, when all of the test resulted are scored.

Established TV Writers Well Paid

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Q. Is a television comedy writer's life a happy one?

A. Mine is. Most writers are happy guys. We live ordinary, everyday lives and go home to our wives and kids.

Q. Is there a trend in TV comedy?

A. The public is becoming much more difficult to please—which is good. Whether it's slapstick, farce or legit, if it's done well, it can succeed.

The witness: Sam Denoff, 38. He won an Emmy June 4 for helping to write last April's Sid Caesar variety special. So did four other writers including his partner, Bill Persky, 35.

Denoff-Persky previously won two Emmys apiece writing the Dick Van Dyke show and are creators-writers-producers of a new fall comedy series, "Good Morning, World!"

Q. Does winning an Emmy mean a pay raise for a writer?

A. No, but it helps you maintain a reputation.

Q. I guess it would be an effrontery to ask how much you make.

A. Ask my ex-wife—or her lawyer.

Q. But how much do top writers in general make?

A. A good writer of situation comedy can make $3,500 per half-hour script—and write 20 or 30 of them a season if he really works at it. He also gets residuals, as I do from the Van Dyke show. In the variety field you can make $2,000 to $3,000 a week. A lot make $1,000, which is good, too.

Q. How does a young fellow with talent get started earning this kind of gravy?

A. Writing, believe it or not, is the easiest branch of show business to get into. All you have to do is sit down and write. We look at everything that comes in—if it's accompanied by a release to indemnify us from a plagiarism suit by an unscrupulous person. It takes time, but you can tell in about three pages if a script has anything.

Q. How did you and Persky get started?

A. We wrote programs, publicity and jingles for WNEW, New York, for five years.

Q. Any show business in your backgrounds?

A. No. Bill's father still owns an auction gallery on the Atlantic City Boardwalk. My father, who's retired, had a ladies' hosiery store in Brooklyn.

Q. Do people have a preconceived idea of what writers look like?

A. Yes; short, fat, bald and smoking a cigar. As you can see, I'm 6-2, slim, red-haired—and smoking a cigar.

Battle Waged In Mud

By HENRI HUET
AP Photographer

PHUOC VINH, South Vietnam (AP) — The wounded GI pressed his body into the thick mud behind a log, his bandages smeared with muck.

Another GI slid his mud-splattered M16 rifle over the log and began firing back at Viet Cong hidden in the nearby trees.

Some American infantrymen crawled through the mud on their bellies, sliding behind poncho-wrapped dead men for cover.

Fifteen men took cover in a huge mud hole left by bombs dropped from U.S. planes supporting the infantrymen. Others dragged the wounded through the mud on ponchos to the rear of the line.

Mud churned up by American bombs during the monsoon rains is another enemy for U.S. 1st Division infantrymen fighting in the Viet Cong-dominated war zone D, 47 miles northeast of Saigon.

The men fall into foxholes and quickly sink knee deep into the mud. Jumping off assault helicopters, many stumbled into mud holes cratered by bombs. U.S fighter-bombers saturated the landing zone to destroy any enemy mines planted there and to clear the immediate area of Communist troops.

The mud is worst in the landing zones and other open areas. Most of zone D is thick jungle, and it is only muddy under the canopy where bombs have penetrated the thick undergrowth.

Three companies of the 16th Infantry's 1st Battalion have put down in Landing Zone Rufe. Each day two companies fan out into the jungle to seek out the enemy.

A Company, working about 1,000 yards southwest of the landing zone, spotted four Viet Cong at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday. The enemy ran and left five packs behind. An air strike was called down on the fleeing Viet Cong.

Nearly two hours later, to the north of A Company, Viet Cong troops hidden by the thick jungle opened fire from all directions on B Company.

B Company pulled back and called for artillery fire on the Communist positions. The Americans moved forward again and once more ran into heavy fire. Six infantrymen were killed and 12 wounded.

They pulled back a second time, dragging their wounded and dead through the thick mud to a small opening cratered by American bombs from which helicopters could take the wounded out.

The Viet Cong kept firing and wounded three more Americans.

The helicopters arrived but couldn't land because the opening in the trees was too small. They hovered overhead and lowered a litter.

The Viet Cong opened up on the helicopters. One was hit and just made it back to the battalion command post 1,000 yards away.

A second helicopter came in and managed to lift out one wounded man under heavy fire. It, too, was hit and barely made it back to the command post.

Big Chinook helicopters had to carry both of the damaged helicopters back to Lai Khe.

By then it was 7:30 p.m. and darkness had fallen. It was impossible to take the wounded out by helicopter. The company had to walk through the jungle back to the battalion command post, carrying their dead and wounded.

As the men moved through the black night, artillery shells and bombs dropped behind them to protect their rear. Some shell fragments landed only a few feet away from the troops, but no more Americans were hurt.

Half an hour before midnight, the company reached the command post. Helicopters were there waiting to take the wounded out.

U.S. Command in Saigon said 60 Viet Cong were killed, but B Company saw no enemy bodies on the battlefield.

VISITORS FROM TENN.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Farmer of Jackson, Tenn. and Mr. Albert Rice of Calif., visited over the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Allen Rice and daughters and Mrs. Bonnie Rice.

Late one evening I was wearily correcting a set of fourth-grade papers when I noticed a better - than - average offering from a student who had shown a weakness in the subject being tested. I penciled in red across the top of the page what was intended to be the word "Good!"

The following day I sent the marked papers home to be read, signed and returned by the parents. As I checked them over later for signatures, I noticed with chagrin, that on the particular sheet mentioned I had left an "o" out of my word of appraisal.

Down below, in small, neat writing under the parent's signature, was this notation: "I was surprised, too."

SAVING ON IMPULSE

STOCKHOLM AP -- Saving on impulse is the new fad here. If you have a one krona piece (20 U. S. cents) burning in your pocket, all you have to do is step up to an automat, drop the coin and you get a stamp. The stamps are pasted on a savings card. When it's full (15 kronor or $3), you sign the card and place it in the automat. The bank credits your savings account.

The machines are being placed in schools and canteens as an experiment by the Swedish Commercial bank.

Firemen Hot Under Collar

WEST MIDDLESEX, Pa. (AP) — Tempers are growing hotter after police shut down a bingo game at a firemen's carnival and now it looks as if there may be no one around to put out fires.

The firemen are so incensed they are threatening to resign on July 14 unless the borough council gets rid of the mayor, who backed the police action.

Mayor Arthur Pantall says bingo is illegal and the firemen will have to raise money for a new firehouse in some other way.

In our parish, realization of the vitality of English in the Mass startled the congregation. It was the Sunday within the Octave of Christmas. A young mother was having a difficult time with her "active-participating" offspring. To the relief of the entire congregation, she decided to leave shortly after the Communion. As she neared a side door the celebrant intoned the Communion antiphon in loud and intelligible vernacular: "Take the child and his mother and go into the land of Israel, for those who sought the child's life are dead!"

Q&A on cigarette smoking and heart disease

Q Can some people smoke a few cigarettes without getting the habit?

A YES. But most people cannot restrict themselves to a few cigarettes now and then. Researchers tell us that the smoker who begins in his teens with a few cigarettes is likely to become a habitual smoker. The best way to avoid the habit is to refuse the first cigarette you're offered.

No. 9 in a series of 12 questions and answers about smoking and health — published by this newspaper in cooperation with your Heart Association

From the world of Iron Curtain humor comes the story of a young musician traveling by train from Warsaw to Moscow. As he sat in his compartment reading a musical score, a fellow passenger, actually in the secret police, attempted to decipher it. Unable to do so, the agent arrested the musician for espionage, claiming that the score was a secret code.

"But it's only a fugue by Bach," protested the musician as he was dragged off.

The next day, still protesting his innocence, he was brought before the commissar of police, "Well, comrade, you might as well talk," said the commissar. "Bach has already confessed."

Tarheels Adopted a Fresh Approach

In spite of the high standard of living in the United States today, there are those in every state who are poverty - stricken.

They are the people who huddle together in slum tenements, who have no jobs, and who have no way of lifting themselves out of the mire of poverty and despair. The state of North Carolina has recognized the problem of poverty and has taken steps on the local level to combat it.

First, a few facts about North Carolina. It has not stood near the forefront in education. It has a large non-white population, and its per capital income ranks well below the national average. In some areas of the state, poverty and unemployment have been of much concern. How to lift the level of earnings of the entire state has been of major interest to the leaders over the past several years. Many efforts have been made to boast its economy.

A determined attempt to bring additional industry to the state has resulted in much industrial growth and thousands of new factory jobs. In the past four years, North Carolina's rate of growth has far exceeded that of the nation as a whole; but problems of poverty and unemployment still remain. To attack these problems, the state's leadership has adopted a fresh approach and is launching an all - out effort to determine the causes of unemployment and poverty, and to work for the elimination of these causes.

Significantly, the state is launching its own program and will not depend upon any nation-wide bureaucracy. The state's leaders went to some of the nation's large foundations and sought help in financing the fight on poverty. A total of $7 million was obtained from these sources, to be matched by funds from other sources. Thus the grand total available was $14 million.

An organization has been set up independent of the state's executive branch - but functions in coordination with it. Headed by private citizens, its purpose is to wage war on poverty.

One of the first conclusions reached by the group was that much of the state's unemployment has its foundation in the large number of high school dropouts. In this day of automation, and highly skilled workers, there are limited opportunities for uneducated and unskilled workers.

This is almost the same conclusion reached about the nation-wide unemployment and which prompted the federal attack on school dropouts. Reports indicate that little real progress has been made nationally. Even though many former dropouts went back to school, they again "dropped out." The basic causes behind their action were not recognized, and they are back on street corners, once more adding to the problem of juvenile delinquency.

The North Carolina group, however, decided that much of the basis for later school dropouts could be traced back to the primary grades. Accordingly, the first allocation of money to fight poverty was $2 million for use in primary schools on special programs aimed at eliminating the early causative factors that lead to the decision to leave school.

School officials are asked to map plans and programs which would eliminate these factors, and to submit them to the committee on fighting poverty. The plans which the committee believes to have the greatest potential in stopping dropouts will receive grants from the fund.

The committee and local school officials point out that this effort is still in the planning stage, and that it is only experimental. But a great part of its significance lies in the fact that efforts are being made on the local and state level to meet a problem which many big government advocates have contended should be fought only at the national level.

This effort is in contrast to the growing trend in some areas to hand out security and subsistence as a dole, to have government try to take care of its citizens from the highchair to the headstone.

Nearly two years ago Jenkin Lloyd Jones, noted Tulsa, Oklahoma, newspaper editor, commented sagely but sadly, "Relief is gradually becoming an honorable career in America."

No moral person desires anyone to suffer from the ravages of poverty. Certainly, our society must take care of those who are unable to provide for themselves.

However, the obligation of all is to determine and eradicate the causes of poverty, school dropouts, and unemployment.

Another example of enlightened effort against unemployment was displayed by the Aluminum Company of America at its Badin, N.C. plant. It is now engaged in constructing a modern smelting plant on the site of an old smelter. Many of its employees, with the company 25 years or longer, had sufficient skills to do their jobs in the old plant, but were not prepared to operate the automatic machinery in the new plant. Did the company serve notice on these men that they would be laid off when the new plant was opened?

On the contrary, the company hired instructors to teach the fundamentals of reading, writing and arithmetic, thus enabling the workers to continue as useful employees in the new plant.

Instead of handouts and relief rolls, we need to open the doors of opportunity. Some states and large corporations are now recognizing this problem. Some local schools and communities are seeking to find a solution.

These communities and corporations are to be commended for their efforts. Once again, this is the American way of meeting a problem on the local and state level. If the communities, states, and coprorations meet their responsibilities, we need not fear a federal welfare state.

Construction Wonders Of America

(1910-1964)

IN NEW YORK and much of America before World War I, the tortured "gingerbread-ness" of the earlier Victorian period was by now "passe'." Construction of public buildings in a neo-classical style -- a form readily welcomed by many who felt a keen affinity for our European and Mediterranean heritage -- was flourishing.

Pre-eminent were the architects who had studied at Eastern schools and even the Beaux Arts in Paris -- as had Charles Follen McKim, who had spent long hours admiring the Baths of Caracalla in Rome, and who is said to have agreed (over a glass of luncheon claret) on building a stupendous replica of it as the Pennsylvania Railroad's New York City terminus.

Because of their training and longing to transplant old-world beauty into our still "underdeveloped" America, such men could not resist thinking in terms of grandiose design and structural form first -- instead of giving prime attention to the most efficient layout for a building's specific purpose. So by now, New York's running battle with the new and up-and-coming "functional" school for commercial structures which was blowing in from out of Chicago was waxing furious.

Not a true public building, Penn Station (located in one of the world's highest tax-rate areas) was already doomed at the time of its dedication 55 years ago. The developing automobile -- with the dwindling rail traffic that it, trucks, and trailer vans operating on public highways eventually brought about -- was the main culprit.

Penn Station has now fallen beneath the wrecker's ball and is being replaced by a high income-producing office building. Thus pass the glories of the commercial construction world --especially those that turn out to be economically unsound with the passing of time.

Out Of The Mule's Mouth

He Would Have More Relevance on Missouri State Seal Than the Bears Now on It

From Missouri Heritage Column
by Lew Larkin in
The Kansas City Star

I thought it was about time that feller who writes about Missouri heritage got around to us who had a lot to do with it. This writin' feller uses an anniversary peg for humans. Well, I'm loaded with his kind of ammunition.

1. It was 141 years ago that the first jack was sold in Missouri. It was at Columbia and owned by Thomas D. Grant and his name was Tontalegro. (Don't laugh -- we've got Spanish ancestors!)

2. Capt. William Becknell, who blazed the Santa Fe Trail in 1821, brought back jacks and jennets which were the founding stock for mules.

3. By 1857 Missouri had become the mule capital of the world. In that year James H. Adams of Clay county offered to wager $1000 he could show six mules at the St. Louis World Fair that would be judged better than any six of the same class in the United States. No takers. His Mules won 10 premiums, and they kept on winning ever afterwards.

Read your history of the Santa Fe trail and later the covered wagon routes to the West. Oxen were used first but they were slow and got sore feet.

Our cousin, the horse, could clop along faster than the oxen, but at the first signs of Indians, arrows or gunfire, he skittered. Us? They said we were too dumb to know better, but the Indians kept their distance from us because we never got accustomed to all that paint and feathers. Those wagon train drivers preferred mules.

Wars? Mules proved their worth in the war with Mexico. Col. Alexander Doniphan, also Missourian, used them in his army and Gen. Zachary Taylor always insisted on them. In the Civil War Gen.. Grant asked for Missouri soldiers and mules. The Confederates liked mules, too. The Southern minstrels sang, "There isn't a halter strong enough to hold Jo Shelby's mules."

In the Boer war Britain set up a mile buying center at Lathrop, Mo., and bought 115,000 animals and sent them to South Africa. The British called us "ard tails." In its war with Japan, Russia bought thousands of mules, most of them from Missouri.

During the Spanish - American war the government spent $530,000 for Missouri mules. When the first World War started, Britain again sent representatives to Lathrop to buy mules. The total number of Missouri mules sent to Europe in that war was 232,475.

An Englishman, wrote in 1914, "Missouri entered the war on Aug. 4, 1914, because from that date the Missouri mule has been one of the most important factors of the British Army. I have been engaged in France, Egypt, Palestine, the Dardanelles and Salonikl, and everywhere the Missouri mule was the beast of the burden. I hope Missourians will be as obstinate as their mules when the day comes for the diplomats to sit around the peace table and Germany asks for mercy."

During World War I Missouri mules kept the artillery moving, got by on a small oats ration, waded through the mud, fell into shell holes, sniffed the gas and were killed by the thousands. We didn't have too much to do in World War II, but George Patton could hee- haw louder than a top sergeant when one of his tanks turned on its side and we had to right it.

Back in 1903 when a mail carrier at Macon, Mo., tried out one of those new-fangled, smoke - belching gasoline buggies on his route and came back to his sturdy mule, he wrote: "A Missouri mule will go where no automobile in the land would dare go. Nothing will discourage him. You never have to stop and fix him. You don't need a monkey wrench and kit of tools. Difficult roads only enthuse him to greater efforts. A mule eats more than an automobile but he gives greater results."

West Point always has a mule for a mascot. The people of Hannibal, Mo., began the practice of sending a horse to West Point as a mascot but switched to mules 'way back in 1861!'

I'd suggest that someone redesign the Missouri state seal, and instead of two bears put mules on it.

What did bears do for Missouri heritage? Besides, they're extinct in Missouri now. We're almost that way, too. Please, let not the writer of Missouri heritage say in some future column that the Missouri mule is only a "forgotten hybrid."

First to Propose Board

George Washington was the first person to formally propose the creation of a board of agriculture, but it was not until Lincoln's administration in 1862 that the U.S. Department of Agriculture was created, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Byrd Asks If This Is Way To Run War - Answer Is No

in the Commercial Appeal.

WASHINGTON -- Senator Harry Byrd, Jr., (D-Va.), now in his second congressional session as a member of the Armed Services Committee, has behaved like a newspaperman -- which he is in private life -- and has asked questions of the experts.

Byrd recently told the Senate: "I have put this question to our military leaders: "If you were ordered to conduct the war in such a way as to bring it to an early conclusion with the least possible American casualties, would you follow the present operating procedures?" The answer was No. The military commanders would remove the restrictions on air and naval bombardment of the vital military targets in North Vietnam."

ALL OF US who question military officials are familiar with these views, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff from time to time blurt out something of the sort. But the value of Byrd's contribution is that he sits in the secret council and is quite familiar with the arguments by President Johnson and Secretary McNamara that support the other side of the case.

Moreover, Byrd was applying and relating his information to a very broad spectrum of world relationships. He finds that the United States is wasting its time if it looks to the United Nations to ever back up our resistance to Communist aggression in Vietnam. Either from fear of the communist bloc or indifference to other people's freedom, the United Nations is as gutless as a diplomatic dinner cream puff. Byrd has asked some questions in those quarters, too, and he says:

"Those American officials most closely connected with the UN state privately, if not publicly that of the 122 members of the world organization, perhaps 30 are sympathetic with the United States action in Vietnam."

WHAT, THEN, are we up against? Byrd puts it succinctly. In our over-all strategy, we have the option of making this a short war or a long one. If we aim to get it victoriously over with, then we ought to use our superior air power and our supreme Navy power to obliterate the military targets in North Vietnam. Never were the risks so small of intervention by Red China and Red Russia as they are now.

But if we continue to shape our strategy to a war of attrition and a prolonged conflict, we may avoid risks of enlargement but we are doing what suits the purposes of world communism.

"I am convinced . . ." Byrd told his colleagues, "that the Vietnam War is dragging along to the advantage of both the Soviet Union and Communist China."

It's apparent to hearers and readers of the senator's speech that he did not pick his opinions off the wall. His conclusions, he said, were reached after talks with high officials "including the American ambassador to the UN."

The reference was to Ambassador Arthur Goldberg who is in a good position to tell the President whether the Russians desire peace -- or just desire to talk about it.

Disney Missed But Empire Goes on

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Six months ago today, Walt Disney died, leaving an entertainment empire without the creative force that shaped its destinies for 40 eventful years.

Walter Elias Disney had been the innovator and driving genius behind an enterprise that grew from Mickey Mouse cartoons to diversified entertainment for uncounted millions in almost every nation.

To many observers, his loss seemed crucial to the company that he and brother Roy founded. Yet such was his restlessly forward-looking nature that his plans continue to propel the Disney empire, and will for years.

There have been changes, of course. Key decisions do not come with the crackle of finality, as when Walt was in charge. Now policy matters go to committee, with consequent delay and watering down.

Yet top executives are still so attuned to Walt's way of thinking that decisions hew to his philosophy. Brother Roy, 74 next week, admits the committee system has faults:

"It is not logical for the long pull, but it is logical for this period we are going through. The system is working, and everyone is in perfect harmony. As long as that continues, we're all right.

"But some day one of the guys may grab a project and skyrocket with it. Then we'll turn and make him leader. But he won't be another Walt; I don't think anyone will ever be."

Roy continues as president and board chairman of Walt Disney Productions, and makes command decisions that once were Walt's. Roy was always the moneyman, content to remain in the shadow of his spotlighted younger brother. His new position as solo head has required adjustments.

"I've tried hard not to do anything that I didn't do before, but it hasn't always been easy," said the bespectacled balding Roy.

"I want to stay out of the show world; that's not my field. I couldn't possibly fit in Walt's shoes."

The committee on which he relies for decisions in the show world field consists of eight men, all studio bred. During most of their adult lives they worked closely with Walt; all are passionately devoted to the Disney cause. Two are related to the Disney family.

The committee:

Bill Anderson, long No. 1 aide to Walt in the movie field and now vice president in charge of production.

Roy E. Disney, son of the president and well-versed in studio departments.

Ron Miller, husband of Walt's daughter and now a producer.

Winston Hibbler, expert in nature films, which he narrates.

Bill Walsh, who assisted in creation of the Mickey Mouse Club, "Shaggy Dog" and "Mary Poppins."

Jim Algar, a cartoonist turned producer.

Harry Tytle, a 30-year veteran now producing television shows.

Card Walker, marketing vice president with vast knowledge of what will and will not sell.

"The system is working well," says Bill Anderson, the hearty chief of production. "We've had a couple of knockdown, drag-out fights, but that's healthy. We had 'em with Walt, too. Walt taught us how to fight and get along.

"There is no back-biting here, there are no cliques. That's something Walt would never allow."

The loss of Walt as a decision maker is felt by many of the studio hierarchy.

"We all miss the man," remarked Ron Miller, who has the size of a professional footballer which he was and the profile of an actor which he wasn't.

"If any of us had a major problem, we could take it to Walt and all of a sudden we had no problem. He solved it."

In another office of the animation building you can find producer Bill Walsh, director Robert Stevenson and story man Don DaGradi working on a new fantasy, "Boy-Car-Girl."

DaGradi laughed as he recalled how Walt stayed ahead of his film creators: "We used to be puzzled that he seemed to understand the storyboards—pinned-up— sketches of proposed scenes before we could explain them—or he would ignore whole sections of them.

"Finally he admitted that he would come into our offices the night before and look at the storyboards to see what we were up to. He even went through the wastebaskets!"

"Walt had the habit of coming up with properties that nobody had ever heard of," continued British-born Stevenson. "Just when it seemed that we had nothing to work on, he'd reach into his bottom drawer and produce something worthwhile."

Walt's office, at the far end of the third floor, remains unchanged since his death last Dec. 15. Likewise the studio he built is unchanged in form and operation. That situation is likely to continue until a strong new leader emerges to take charge of the empire that started with a mouse.

$28,725 in Dividends Go To Farmers

Farmers in Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard and Cape Girardeau counties are receiving checks totaling $28,725.80, as dividends on their stock in the Federal Land Bank Association of Sikeston, Hal F. Robertson, manager, said today.

The dividend was declared by directors payable to member-stockholders of record at the close of business May 31.

Payment of this dividend by the association has the effect of reducing the average interest rate paid this year by association members on their loans.

The payment was made possible by a dividend received on association stock in the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis.

During the first five months the association made land bank loans totaling $1,743,014.

Light Quake Rocks Los Angeles Area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sprawling Los Angeles area was rocked by an earthquake late Wednesday night. No serious damage was reported.

Police said plaster fell from the ceiling of a house in north Los Angeles.

In Long Beach, south of the metropolitan center, and west of Los Angeles, residents said windows shook. The tremor was felt on the beaches.

Dr. Charles Richter, seismologist at the California Institute of Technology's seismological laboratory, said the shock was small — with a reading of about 4 on his 10-point scale.

Irish JFK Trip Guide For Jackie

SHANNON, Ireland (AP) — With an Irishman named John F. Kennedy pointing out the sights, Mrs. John F. Kennedy and her two children drove through the Irish countryside in a large bus with big glass windows to give the people of her late husband's ancestral homeland a glimpse of his family.

Mrs. Kennedy, 9-year-old Caroline and 6-year-old John arrived by Irish airliner at Shannon airport to begin a vacation in Ireland.

"There are thousands of people who want to see you," Foreign Minister Frank Aiken told the President's widow. "we have a large bus with big glass windows. It's very comfortable and it would be very gracious of you, Mrs. Kennedy, if you should decide to travel by the bus."

Smiling, Mrs. Kennedy readily agreed and took the first seat beside the door for the 85-mile ride to Waterford. There she and her children will stay at Woodstown House, 10 miles down the Barrow River from Dunganstown, from which the President's great-grandfather Patrick Kennedy emigrated to America.

The 34-year-old John F. Kenney in charge of the bus claimed no close kinship to Mrs. Kenneday's husband, but airport officials said he had recently visited the United States and had seen members of the Kennedy family.

Mrs. Kennedy's plane from New York was delayed 40 minutes by fog.

Stepping off in a belted blue coat with the hem three inches above her knees, she told an airport crowd of 300 to 500:

"I'm just happy to be here with my children in the land my husband loved so much.

"It's a bit like coming home. I do hope we will come back again and again."

Danish Group To Visit U.S.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Approximately 845 Danes of all ages and occupations will visit Americans at their homes, their jobs and their recreation areas this summer through the People to People program.

They will begin arriving at New York June 30 on flights from Copenhagen.

In return, 500 Americans visiting Scandanavia this summer will be received in Danish homes.

About half the Danes coming to the United States through People to People will make from five to eight-day visits at homes in the East, Midwest and West. The others will make their own travel arrangements.

The visiting delegations are expected to stop in the following states: New York, New Jersey, Florida, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Minnesota, Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas, California, Oregon and Washington.

Harold W. Sundstrom, the head of People to People's Scandinavian division, said state and city chapters of People to People in those states will arrange for the visitors to stay in homes, meet people, tour business and industry and take part in community activities.

The Danish groups will include housewives, farmers, clerks, teachers, students, engineers, truck drivers, realtors, factory workers, nurses, doctors and other professional men. All will pay their own expenses.

People to People, which has its international headquarters at Kansas City, was founded by former President Eisenhower to promote friendship and exchanges between individuals of all nations.

Bank Customer Squares Account

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was only a small bank holdup — $41.98.

Police said the bandit was a customer, who told a teller Wednesday that he had a complaint.

A court order delivered earlier to the bank attached the man's account and the bank deducted a check for $41.98 as a result.

"I want my money back," the man demanded.

When the teller refused, he left but returned with a pistol, took the $41.98 at gunpoint and fled.

Presbyterians Adopt Paper Questioning War

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP)— The 107th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. concluded its meeting by adopting a paper questioning the war in Vietnam.

The assembly also reaffirmed its stand on civil disobedience before adjourning Wednesday.

A paper, entitled "Vietnam: Some Questions for Christians," was adopted by voice vote. A statement reaffirming loyalty to the United States was added before the final vote was cast.

The document said the denomination is "deeply perplexed and anguished by the tragic war" and as "Chrstians we ask ourselves what responsibility God means for us to bear in his universal work.

"We direct these questions to ourselves and to the churches rather than to our government," the statement read.

Among the questions posed are these: "Are we as much in agony for the death of one Vietnamese as for the death of one American? Should a government ever draw back from inflicting damage to its enemies at the possible price of military defeat?"

The Rev. John S. McMullen of Columbia, Mo., chairman of the Committee on Church and Society, urged support of the document.

"It is not an echo of any other church, but seeks to be an echo of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S.," he said.

"It does not attempt to make any answers, but to ask some of the right questions."

The Assembly reaffirmed its stand on civil disobedience by rejecting several overtures or bills which sought additional action on stands taken by previous assemblies.

Thus it upheld a statement adopted last year which said Presbyterians have "an obligation...to support and regard with compassion those who practice civil disobedience" whenever legal recourse has been exhausted and when the act is "in Christian conscience and allegiance to almighty God."

GIVEAWAY. When a man came around collecting old suits for a society for the blind, Mrs. David Brinkley, wife of the NBC commentator, donated two suits she'd never seen her husband wear. She assumed he didn't like them. As it turned out, he'd never worn them because he had just bought them.

He said he has one main ambition left — "I want to celebrate my 112th birthday."

Freedom Short-Lived

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Leslie Norwood Carter, 21, of Memphis, who walked away from state prison Tuesday during a baseball game, was hitchhiking through Nashville Wednesday when a motorist stopped for him.

The driver was Allen Berry, a correctional officer at the prison. Carter was back behind bars a short time later.

My wife was attempting a quick defrosting job on our old refrigerator with a new electric defroster. It was more effective than she anticipated, and when she opened the refrigerator she was greeted with steam -- and two pounds of melted butter streaming down the door. I walked in just in time to hear her call to the children, "Start popping popcorn -- the butter's ready."

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why are the people of Greece referred to as Hellenes?

A—The name stems from Hellen, son of Deucalion and Pyrrha, legendary ancestor of the true Greeks.

Q—Who discovered the Pacific Ocean?

A—Vasco Balboa, the Spanish navigator, but Ferdinand Magellan, the Portuguese navigator, gave it its name.

Q—Is Bonsai an ancient art?

A—Yes. The earliest authentic record of Bonsai is found on a Japanese scroll of 1310, with pictures of dwarfed trees in containers.

Q—What country has no true rivers?

A—Saudi Arabia. Not a single river crosses it, only dry riverbeds called "wadis" which quickly carry away the little rain that falls.

Q—Who was the first European to cross Africa from ocean to ocean?

Tragic April, 1865

By Jim Dan Hill
in the Commercial Appeal

The First Weeks of April, 1865, are the saddest in the history of our Nation - North and South. For the States of the Confederacy, the handwriting was on the wall. But only a few were near enough to see the wall.

M. H. Clark, chief clerk in the office of President Jefferson Davis, could read the words. He spent 24 hours through the day and night of Saturday, 1 April, 1865, sorting out papers. Some he destroyed. Others he packed.

Sunday, 2 April, President and Mrs. Davis were attending services at St. Paul's, Richmond. Dr. C. F. E. Minnegerode did not pause in his soothing sermon as a military aide entered with a note. But all eyes were on the aide. The note was for Mr. Davis.

All of Lee's reserves were in the defense lines. Grant was outflanking him south and west of Petersburg. Lee, to avoid being surrounded, reported he was pulling out while he could. Richmond, capital of the Confederacy, was about to be lost.

President Davis remembered: "I quietly rose and left the church . . .went to my office . . assembled the heads of the departments . . .gave the needful instructions for our removal that night."

The daily newspaper, "Richmond Whig" reported: "Suddenly the streets became filled with men . . .behind them excited negroes with trunks, bundles and luggage . . .All over the city it was the same - wagons, trunks, bandboxes . . "

Mr. M. H. Clark was indeed a forehanded office manager. The Government Train, Richmond and Danville R.R. rolled late that evening, laden with the Confederate President, his cabinet, essential records and all the hard money of the entire Treasury Department - $500,000 in $20 gold coins, bars of gold, ingots of silver, and Mexican coins.

The train escort consisted of sixty boys, midshipmen from the Confederate Naval Academy school ship. Until Davis was captured, 40 days later, the Confederate government was on wheels.

With victory in sight, there should have been joy in the North. And such was the case briefly!

In a masterful withdrawal, Lee's army appeared to be escaping. But at Appomattox, Palm Sunday, 9 April, Lee unexpectedly found his retreat route blocked. Sheridan's army in the Shenandoah Valley had overwhelmed Southern forces there for an unobstructed encirclement.

Joy was unrestrained in Washington. At Ford's Theater a top flight actress, Laura Keene, was making a smash hit of a third rate drama entitled "Our American Cousin." By 13 April General Grant was in Washington. His purpose was an oral report defending the charitable attitude toward Lee and his men. All had been paroled by Grant and sent home without prejudice.

If course, Grant had his earlier orders from Lincoln, who had already initiated in Tennessee, Louisiana, and other "liberated" areas a "Reconstruction" program of mild forgiving, generosity.

This was in spite of vindictive fire brands who were complaining that treason was not being made odious.

The Washington newspapers reported General and Mrs. Grant would be guests of the Lincolns at the Ford Theater, the Good Friday evening of 14 April.

Entire books, thick and ponderous, have been written of that fatal Good Friday. Questions dominate the books. For example, why did the Grants cancel out? The Lincolns went with a young major and his fiancee.

Some books view everyone with dark suspicion. Some even suggest the Secretary of War was in the plot. Other books exonerate almost everybody except John Wilkes Booth, a most famous and highly paid actor of his day.

That afternoon Lincoln was told that Jacob Thompson, erstwhile Mississippi congressman and Secretary of the Interior under President Buchanan, was escaping to England through a Northern port. He had been identified as the secret agent who from Canada had instigated sabotage and arson in Northern cities. Should Thompson be arrested?

"No, I rather think not," Lincoln drawled. "When you have an elephant by the hind leg, and he is trying to run away, it is best to let him run." It was Lincoln's last of many generous decisions to be sustained by humorous logic.

Shock and sorrow swept the nation. The results were far more tragic for the South than for the North.

And Jacob Thompson, last beneficiary of the Lincolnian clemency, what of him? He did "escape" and lived in Canada and England for a time. He returned about three years later to practice law in Memphis. There he died about 1885, but not until he had taken persecution and abuse by Federal officials through the Grant Administration.

Must Competitors Be Equalized In Money Skills?

by David Lawrence

IN PUBLIC ADDRESSES recently, the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice has been arguing, in effect, that a large business in competition with a smaller company should not be allowed to spend more money on salesmanship and promotion of the merits of its products than the competitor is able to do.

This is supposed to be a way to squelch "unfair competition" and to attempt to equalize the economic status of companies striving to get a larger part of the market. Actually, it is not less than the introduction of a technique of governmental regulation which might be understandable in a socialistic state but which comes as a surprise in a country that has faced so well without such totalitarian rules.

For freedom of salesmanship has made possible the growth and success of the American system and to forbid the use of too large an amount of ingenuity could lead conceivably to a limitation on the number or kind of inventions for which a company might acquire patents. Had such a restriction been applied in past decades, it might have been ruled that the airplens hould not be allowed to take business away from the railroads and that trucks should be permitted to make only a limited use of the highways so as not to injure competing methods of transporation.

Might it not be contended also that a large company enjoys an unfair advantage in being able to employ a considerable amount of brain power--not only by engaging many efficient executives but by increasing the number of salesmen -- whereas the smaller company find it too expensive to hire as big a staff?

"UNFAIR COMPETITION" is a phrase that has often been interpreted in the past to mean the use of unfair devices, such as mirepresentation. It is a proper function of Government to ascertain whether any fraudulent claims are made in either the spoke or written words of salesmanship in the promotion of a product or service. But it is certainly not "unfair" to be more skillful or to use more intensive sales methods than those of a competitor.

The various media through which such promotion is conveyed to the public is probably would not be advertsely, affected, because presumably what the larger company may employ or the amount of printed or spoken words it may use to sell its wares will not stimulate but will retard free enterprise. For this is a trend toward the socialist doctrines which today are proving so ineffective even in Communist countries.

Hippity Saddens Schoolmates by Hopping Away

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Twenty-five kindergarten pupils graduate from the West Side Elementary School today with heavy hearts.

They're saddened because their class pet— a grasshopper— is missing.

Nicknamed "Hippity-Hoppity" by the children, the grasshopper first appeared in the classroom three months ago.

His egg was apparently in some plants the teacher, Mary Jackson, brought to the classroom. Then one morning Hippity appeared, a quarter of an inch in length. He grew to one-and-one-half inches.

The first thing the children did when they arrived each morning was look for Hippity. After a few minutes of calling, Hippity appeared, received a few blades of grass from the children, and then spent most of the morning bouncing around geraniums and window ledges.

But Hippity's favorite activity seemed to be jumping on the children, crawling along their arms and sometimes onto their foreheads.

"The children loved it," Mrs. Jackson said. "They all drew pictures of him. Even the children from the other classes visited Hippity."

But then during a heat spell this week a door was left ajar and apparently Hippity hopped out.

The children gingerly canvassed the lawn looking for their pet but to no avail.

Thy Bright Waters

By Brigadier Christine E.
McMillan

It was low tide. The sea had retreated a long way out. Between the shore and the thin silver line of the sea lay the muddy flats. Ancient scows and hulks of ships long forgotten seemed to lift themselves heavily from the ooze in which they were embedded. Spars raised ghostly arms and the ribs of a little rowboat gleamed whitely like a skeleton. Old cans, old boxes, dirt, muck, debris -- and far, far out, the dancing silver sea, so clean, so fresh, so wholesome.

Dusk came, and silently, almost unnoticed, the tide turned and the sea came in. Gently at first it came, until it gained momentum. Then the little ripples became waves, and the inch of water was a foot, and soon where had been mud and ugliness was now water, swirling, curling, rushing, hurrying to reach the shore.

"No more the lonely gray-ribbed wreck
And spectral spars offend the eye,
The river is a wide, wide sea;
Deep o'er the flats the waters flow
White shining in the silver light
As if it were a fall of snow."

And looking at the scene of wonder and of beauty, we saw the drab, the sordid, the ugly and the offending swallowed up in the swift-flowing sea, the waters pure, abundant and clear.

Watching with delight that miracle of transforming beauty, we thought it resembled certain revealing moments that come in the life of the spirit. Perhaps we have thought that nothing was the matter with our lives. We have been busy here and there, then suddenly we have caught an inward glimpse, and, to our amazement, have seen that the tide is out -- and what a revelation! How ghastly to see exposed to view the muddy flats of a defeated spirit; the hideous wreckage of submerged sins, only hidden, not conquered; the sordid little bits of flotsam and jetsam, pride, envy, lies, selfishness, all lying open to our horrified gaze. The tide had gone out so slowly that we had no idea it was gone; the waters of God's grace had been gradually ebbing, and we had not known.

And seeing that scene of ruin and desolation in our own spirit, we have turned in anguish to the great Fountainhead, crying:

"Tonight my sins seem all in view,
My life one wreck - strewn waste and wide;
Thou love of God, flow in, deep,
A sea that all my sins shall hide!
And thou, O Christ, our Light, look down
In all the luster of Thy grace,
Till every wave as mirror hold
And image of Thy shining face."

Then the waters came in, not just to cover and hide, but to cleanse and purify, bringing power and grace and strength and beauty.

Mirrored in those crysal depths is the shining of His lovely face, the ineffable radiance of His beautiful spirit which takes possession of the cleansed and purified heart, not only satisfying the soul with beauty and goodness and peace but, by its exquisite grace, drawing other lives to seek that same cleansing and that same indwelling.

Thinking these thoughts, as we stood by the shore, now flooded by the swift, onrushing sea, we remembered other versus:

"O sweet flowing river of mercy and love,
Whose waters are drawn by a bright world above,
We weary earth- pilgrims thy quietude crave,
Our desolate places thy bright waters love.
Dark, dark is the valley where runs not thy stream,
Flow on , mighty river! Earth's deserts redeem. Bear out thy bossom our sorrow and care, Give springs in the dry place, and graces all fair."

Educators Opposed to Church Rule

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptist colleges and universities are in danger of losing accreditation because of controls exercised by the various state Baptist Conventions, a report said Wednesday night.

The warning was included in a report to the Baptist Education Study Task Conference by a sectional committee on college - denominational relationships.

Leon McBeth, a professor at Southwestern Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth, Tex., said his committee "was especially insistent that a Convention in session should never attempt to regulate internal college affairs.

"To do so," he said, "violates the charter, endangers accreditation, and abrogates the principles of trusteeship."

The committee contended that control of the various Baptist schools should rest with the individuals Boards of Trustees-not with the state Conventions which give financial support.

Robert Alley, a professor at the University of Richmond, said a school's accreditation is endangered when a convention attempts to enforce regulations either "on something peripheral like dancing or something basic like federal aid to education."

The contention was disputed by some of the 300 Baptists attending the nationwide education conference.

Frank A. Hooper of Atlanta, Ga., said Conventions own the various schools, support them financially and have the right to control their internal affairs.

"If we ever forget the fact that Baptists are the ones which both own and control the schools we're in for trouble," Hooper said.

Gordon W. Blackman of Greenville, S. C., president of Furman University, took issue with Hooper and said college accrediting agencies specify that schools must be controlled by Boards of Trustees.

"A Convention giving one or two hours to higher education simply can't determine policy," Blackman said.

The Furman president added that "Baptist schools would have been bankrupt long ago" if they depended on the denomination for all their support.

Missouri Heritage

By Lew Larkin
In The Kansas City Times

Thomas Clement Fletcher, who served as Missouri's 18th governor during one of the state's most perilous periods, was the state's first native-born chief executive, the first Republican and, at 37, the youngest to be elected to the office.

He was born 140 years ago at Herculaneum, the seat of Jefferson County, the descendant of a Maryland slave - owning family. At the age of 17 he went to work in the circuit clerk's office and on May 25, 1846, he was appointed deputy citcuit clerk. Three years later, at 22, he was elected circuit clerk.

He read law and in 1855 he was admitted to the Missouri bar. A year later he became land agent for a railroad, moved to St. Louis and a short time later he and his brother-in-law, Louis J. Rankin, laid out the city of De Soto in Jefferson County.

The slavery question worried the young man. His family had owned slaves. He had been an ardent Benton Democrat but he made the break, joined the Republican party, became an ardent supporter of Abraham Lincoln and a delegate to the national Republican convention in 1860.

The Civil war had much to do with shaping his political future although this all came about in an oblique manner.

He was appointed provost marshal - general at St. Louis at the start of the war. In 1862 he was a colonel in the 31st Missouri infantry, wounded and captured at Chickasaw Bayou, December 29, 1862, confined to Libby prison and released in May 1863, on an exchange of prisoners.

He returned to his Missouri regiment and was present at the fall of Vicksburg and the battle of Chattanooga. While he commanded a brigade under General Sherman in the latter's march through the South, the Radical Republicans back in Missouri nominated him as a candidate for governor.

He became ill and Sherman released him. He returned to Missouri, recovered, organized two regiments and was second in command at Pilot Knob when Sterling Price's dash across Missouri, recovered, organized two regiments and was second in command at Pilot Knob Sterling Price's dash across Missouri was delayed. Lincoln brevetted him a brigadier general.

Fletcher had little time to campaign but it seemingly was not necessary. He carried Missouri by a 42,000 majority, 2,000 more than President Lincoln's majority, defeating Thomas L. Price, a former lieutenant governor and first mayor of Jefferson City.

Fletcher said in his inaugural address, "In the name of truth, of justice, of freedom and of progress, God has permitted us a political triumph, bringing with it the solemn responsibility of promoting those great principles by an enforcement of the fundamental law for securing the peace, happiness and prosperity of the people of the state. Being victorious everywhere, let magnaminity now distinguish our action, and having nothing more to ask for party let us, forgetful of our past differences, seek only to promote the general good of the poeple of the whole commonwealth."

Although Fletcher was a Radical Republican, he wasn't as "radical" as many believed. He felt that the new constitution placed too many limitations on the power of the people, that some provisions might become inapplicable to a progressive people, that certain clauses discriminated against the Negroes and that the suffrage qualifications would disenfranchise loyal men.

A short time after taking office he recommended repeal of the odious test oath of loyalty as it applied to ministers, lawyers, teachers and professional people.

He reduced the state debt, raised taxes, improved the public school system, drew the first general revenue appropriation from the Legislature for the University of Missouri, recommended state training schools for teachers and sold railroads that had failed to pay interest on state -guaranteed bonds.

Q&A
on cigarette smoking and heart disease

Q Do cigarettes hurt teenagers?

A YES. Even in youth, cigarettes can irritate the throat, cause a hacking cough, cut down on your wind. Most athletes don't smoke because they know it reduces their fitness and endurance. And the earlier you start smoking, and the more cigarettes you smoke daily, the greater your risk of lung disease or heart attacks when you reach your 30's or 40's.

Care And Cooking Of Country Ham

By Hoyt Alden

WHEN I WAS a kid in Arkansas the only kind of ham we had was country-cured ham and we just took it for granted along with fresh-laid eggs and cream so thick you had to dip it with a spoon.

Most city people, when they encounter country ham for the first time, are inclined to know why someone hasn't told them about it before and where can you get them?

It's become an "in" thing to serve country ham and there are New York restaurants that sell it as if it were caviar. One reason for that, of course, may be that nowadays it costs about as much as caviar, pound for pound.

Anyway, we've been getting inquiries about how to approach a country ham and we should warn anyone who doesn't know better that you don't just cover them with molasses and brown sugar and pop them in the oven as you do a packing house ham.

To begin with, don't be dismayed by its appearance. The older a country ham the better it is, and many a novice, viewing the leathery hide and the green mold which often forms on the outside is inclined to send it back with a note to the effect that he isn't about to eat spoiled ham.

IF YOU DO get your hands on a genuine country ham, we would suggest the Tennessee method, which is as follows:

Soak the ham overnight in cold water. Drain it and wipe it dry. If necessary, scrub it with a stiff brush.

Them mix a quart of corn meal, a cup of brown sugar and a tablespoon of pepper. Add just enough cold water to the roasting pan as needed, but don't baste the ham. When it comes out of the oven let it cool a little. Then remove the paste and skin the ham.

Next, sprinkle it with bread crumbs and put it back in the oven and let it bake until the bread crumbs are browned.

That's how they do it in Tennessee. In Virginia, where they claim to make the best smoked hams in the world, they have a different method. Virginians pride themselves on being connoisseurs of country ham and some of them are so particular they won't eat any but hams from the left leg of a hog, the theory being that a hog scratches himself with his right leg which makes it a little tougher than the left.

Soak it overnight. Then boil it in a quart of either Burgundy or claret mixed with half a pint of brandy and a quart of apple cider. Boil it gently until it is tender.

Remove the excess fat, stud it with cloves and coat it with moistened brown sugar. Put pineapple rings on top and then bake the ham in a hot oven for half an hour.

You don't have to bake country ham. It's wonderful fried. Just cut your slices, not too thick, and fry them in the skillet. Then pour in a little water to make red-eye gravy and if you happen to have some corn bread around you'll know it's true what they say about the South.

Country style ham and eggs are just about as good a breakfast as you can put together. Take a center slice of country ham about a quarter of an inch thick. Fry it slowly on one side and then turn it over. Break your eggs gently right on top of the ham. Sprinkle them with salt and pepper, cover the skillet, turn the heat down a little and let the eggs cook until they're set.

One of the best country hams I ever ate was cooked with brown sugar and green apples. After being soaked overnight it was placed in a pot of water with two pounds of brown sugar and a half dozen peeled green apples.

The 12-pound ham was boiled slowly for three hours and then allowed to cool in the stock. Then it was coated with a paste made of brown sugar and good sherry and flavored with a little dry mustard. Just enough of the paste to cover the ham with a thin layer.

Then bake it for an hour in a medium oven, basting frequently with the liquid in which it was boiled.

WE EVEN have one request for information on how to cure a ham. Well, here's how they do it in Maryland, which is also famous ham country.

"For 500 pounds of meat use one peck of fine salt rubbed well into all parts of the ham. Use all the salt. Lay them in a tight box, skin side down, one top of another, for four days. Take them out of the box, keeping all the salt that has not been absorbed. To every ham allow half a pound of brown sugar, half a teaspoon of black pepper and half a teaspoon of saltpeter ground fine. Into the hock rub fine red pepper, also around the hip joint. Rub the mixture of sugar, pepper and saltpeter well into the hams, packing back the salt not dissolved.

Put the hams back in the box, skin side down and let them stay for six weeks. Then hang them and smoke them with hickory wood for six days, five or six hours each day. Tie them in bags, dip them in a medium thin whitewash and hang them up again.

They should be ready to eat in six months.

New Debt Ceiling Limit Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee proposed today a $22 billion increase in the national debt ceiling— $7 billion less than the increase rejected by the House last week.

It provided, however, for further increases later.

Approved by a straight party vote, the new $358 billion figure probably will be tested next week in the House, which rejected a $365 billion ceiling by a 13-vote margin June 7.

Republicans announced they oppose the new bill.

To End In A Bang?

By Brigadier Christine E. McMillan (R)

THE TAXI driver must have had a bad day. "Too many people," he muttered, weaving his way through the evening rush-hour traffic.

As if to himself, he went on: "I don't know anymore what it's all about. . .all this rushing and building and going to the moon. . . There's nothin' to it because it's all goin' to end in the big bang anyway".

Our valiant though futile attempt to solve the riddle of mankind and of life in about three minutes was not successful.

"If God's around why don't He do something then?"

We felt disturbed and troubled afterwards, realizing that he is only one of untold thousands who feel the same way, men and women who, beset by doubt and nearly floored by the general sense of malaise abroad in the world today, shrug their shoulders and say, "What's the use?"

Thinking about this and wondering what, beside platitudes, the believer has to offer in affirmation of faith, we turned to a new book -- new to us, although published some years ago. It is The Shaking of the Foundations by Paul Tillich.

Admittedly, Tillich makes rough going for the lay reader. One struggles on, feeling one should listen to this great contemporary voice, yet only able to catch glimpses of the truths he is speaking.

This book, however, is different. It is a collection of sermons prepared for the laity by one "who is struggling to understand the work of the Eternal in the events of time and circumstances."

The first chapter is on the shaking of the foundations and is prefaced by two extracts from Jeremiah 4:23 - 30, and Isaiah 23:18-20, wherein both writers speak of the utter ruin and desolation of the earth. . . "the land in flight. . . every city abandoned. . . earth breaks in pieces. . . the foundations of the earth do shake."

As Tillich points out, in centuries past these words meant little or nothing. Today men now living have experienced their full horror. "This is no longer vision; it has become physics."

Not only is this shaking and crumbling seen in the physical world, but in the ordinary, everyday living of mankind, chaos and confusion reign.

The Church, taken unawares by a startling advance of scientific knowledge, is going through a period of torturous reappraisal.

A lot of rubbish has been written about God being dead. This has unsettled and disturbed many. The values, ethics, and morals by which men lived are no longer what they were. The foundations are shaken.

"My kindness shall not depart from thee, nor shall the convenant of my peace be removed. . .the world itself shall crumble but my righteousness shall be forever and my salvation knows no end." He is the foundation on which all foundations are laid, and this foundation cannot be shaken.

Lord, in Thy light, may we see through the crumbling of a world, the Rock of eternity and the salvation which has no end.

Man, The Magnificent

By Brigadier Christine E. McMillan

IT's all rather odd actually, for this man is quite unknown to me in the usual sense. I have never seen him, nor heard his voice, nor have I seen a picture of him or known anyone who ever knew him.

Yet I know what he thought about, what the purpose of his life was, and I think I know what he looked like. At times, as I read his burning yet reasoned words, I think I can hear his voice.

At first I only knew his name, Pico della Mirandola, said to be the loveliest name in any language.

Then I met him everywhere, and every time his name appeared, a new, bright facet of his being or thought was seen.

One day, in a dusty secondhand bookshop on Fourth Avenue in the heart of New York, I found a worn, slim volume with his magic name on the cover. It was a translation of his Oration on the Dignity of Man. What a find! His own words, written 500 years ago, to be had for almost a song!

He was young, he was handsome, he was brilliant. He came forth as with the sound of trumpets and viols and flutes from the fear, darkness and ignorance of the Middle Ages, into the dazzling glory of the Renaissance.

Born in 1463, he was a son of the princely house of Mirandola. From the moment he could read he devoted his life to the pursuit of knowledge. From the University of Bologna he wandered from university to university in Italy and France for seven years.

He felt, according to Pater, that there was a spirit of order and beauty in knowledge which would come down and unite what men's ignorance had divided, and renew what time had made dim.

The Renaissance saw a great and transcendent flowering of the arts. It is glorious also because man rose then from the night of fear and superstition, from a sense of helpless bondage to demonic powers, to an awareness of human dignity, of the splendor of the human condition, which may rise, if it will, all gold from its mortal cerements, reflecting the glory of its Creator and Father.

He was the first to proclaim, since the golden days of Greece, the dignity of man. By that, he meant, in his own words, "that high nobility of disciplined reason and imagination, human nature as redeemed by Christ, the uplifting of the truly human person though an exercise of soul and mind."

Few though his words were, they have come down to us and burn still with the clear, bright flame of youth and truth. Perhaps much of what he said then would not satisfy his mature mind, as it does not quite satisfy us. Nevertheless, he spoke to his times, and he speaks to ours, coming to us with immortal freshness and vitality, illuminating our minds by the "effulgence of truth."

He became a member of the Dominican Order at the last, dedicating his life, so he hoped, to walking barefoot through the countryside, proclaiming the glory and magnificance of man made in the image of God.

But that was not to be. At 31, supported by the sacraments and prayers of the great Savonarola, he died and was buried in Florence.

Nothing destroys truth nor dims its piercing light, nor negates its immortal value. The words of Socrates, of Mirandola, of Shakespeare, of Aesop speak to the condition of man and endure as long as man lives and thinks and remembers.

"No power can die that ever wrought for truth,
Thereby a law of Nature it became,
And lives unwithered in its sinewy youth,
When he that called it forth is but a name."

Johnson Announces Nomination Choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson announced today he is nominating Los Angeles attorney Warren Minor Christopher to be deputy attorney general.

Johnson summoned newsmen to his office to disclose his selection of Christopher for the No. 2 post in the Department of Justice.

Christopher, 41, succeeds to the position vacant since Ramsey Clark was advanced to attorney general.

Water Resources Seen As Easing Water Shortages

"Ground water resources" is a subject you'll be hearing a lot about in 1967, as political, economic and civic leaders tackle the problem of what to do about our nation's water supply problems.

These problems have been growing in intensity, due to chronic droughts as well as the increasing contamination and pollution of surface waters - rivers, lakes and other streams- by industrial wastes and sewage. These water supply problems are multiplying at a time when the nation's water needs are more that doubling, due to population growth and the vast use of water in industrial and technological processes.

The oceans are a great potential source of water, but low-cost means of desalinization first must be found to make the use of these surface waters practical. So far, this has not been the case.

Ground water, as the name implies, is the fresh water found in underground rock formations. According to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, there is a virtually inexhaustible supply of such water. In fact, it accounts for more than 95 percent of the fresh water available in the United States today, and it is likely to play a growing role in our water management programs.

While efforts to make more of our surface water supply safe and usable will be intensified, the profusion of fresh water right under all of us is being rediscovered and the individual well is expected to enjoy a new "boom" in the next few years.

To 10 million American families representing 26 percent of the population, the individual well is old hat, since they depend upon it entirely for their water supply. New wells are being drilled at the rate of 1,000 a day. About 50,000 of the new wells drilled each year are in areas with municipal water supplies, and their owners use them as a supplemental source of water to help the family cope with recurring municipal water shortages. Their number is expected to at least double in the next few years.

As has been pointed out, one of the reasons for the growing popularity of the individual water system is the availability of ground water. Another is the tremendous progress made in recent years in well-drilling and pumping methods.

The modern pump is electrically operated, extremely compact and virtually maintenance-free. One of the fastest growing pumps is the submersible, which is about three feet long and four inches in diameter. It's installed right in the well, out of sight and sound.

Steaks--Which Are The Broilables

Steaks are undoubtedly one of this country's favorite cuts of beef -- and a leading choice for outdoor cooking.

But you can't just walk into a food store and pick up any steak and expect the desired juicy, tender, flavorful results. Nutritionally, one steak is as good as the next, and they all taste great when properly cooked. But, there are broilables . . . and there are others.

For best results, advises the Consumer and Marketing Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, look for the U.S. grade mark. U. S. Prime and U. S. Choice grades of beef make fine outdoor cookery subjects.

These higher grades have a greater proportion of meat to bone. Also, they are characteristically juicy, tender and flavorful.

Some U.S. Good meat can be broiled, but you should not expect the same fine eating as the higher grades will provide. Marinating is advised, as this grade will not be as tender nor as juicy as Prime or Choice.

Now you are ready to look over the kinds of steak offered.

PORTERHOUSE generally is considered the "best" steak -- the one to serve to company you want to impress. It probably is the highest priced steak, but broils perfectly. Look for porterhouse to have a T-shaped bone, plus tenderloin.

T-BONE steaks have less tenderloin than porterhouse, but are otherwise very similar. The bone for which they are named makes these broilables easy to spot.

CLUB steaks have no tenderloin, so usually sell for a little less than their "cousin" cuts, porterhouse and T-bone. They are sized well for individual servings.

SIRLOIN are more variable in tenderness and amount of bone than the previously mentioned steaks. Choose carefully for minimum of bone. Because this steak is quite large it is sometimes sold by halves. Top sirloin is more tender than bottom sirloin.

RIB or RIB EYE steaks compare well with others. They boast the tenderness and flavor of the highly valued rib roast.

ROUND steak is an economical cut, having little waste. U. S. Prime grade can be broiled if you desire, but because it is less tender than other steaks, lower grades give better results when braised.

For very special occasions, you might want to consider a strictly tenderloin steak -- no bone -- FILET MIGNON.

One final suggestion: no matter what kind of steak you decide upon, choose one at least an inch thick. Thinner cuts won't be as juicy.

Inadequate Defense Against World War III

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

What's the use, it may be asked, of spending billions on a "Great Society" when it can be demolished overnight by a nuclear was initiated by a potential enemy - a reckless dictatorship in Moscow?

American military officers, including the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, are worried and anxious today because the Soviet Union is developing an antimissile system which could weaken our deterrent power. The Administration has been wavering because about 30 billion dollars would have to be spent in the next few years by the United States to get an effective means of intercepting enemy missiles.

The argument is offered, on the other hand, by Secretary McNamara that, for the time being at least, we have enough offensive missiles to inflict a measure of destruction which would be too damaging for an enemy to accept. But the awesome fact is that there is under way a build-up of antimissile defenses by the Soviets. They have a three-year lead now. If not overtaken and a sudden attack comes, this could mean a loss of 130 million American lives.

Ironically enough, the United Nations - supported by American policy - is concentrating today not on the menace of nuclear force by major powers but on the enforcement of sanctions designed to repress a white minority in Rhodesia. By contrast, not a thing is being done to emancipate the hundreds of millions of enslaved people in Eastern Europe and Asia.

Why is the United Nations, including the United States Government, so ready to punish the white minority in Rhodesia but unwilling to impose a trade embargo in analogous situations? Majorities are being oppressed by minority rule in East Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. This is the case also with the 250 million people in Red China who are being deprived of the right of self-determination.

The United Nation's Charter, moreover, is being repeatedly violated by both the Soviet Union and Red China as they assist the aggressor from North Vietnam in the effort to conquer South Vietnam.

The Soviet Union and Red China indeed are openly participating in the aggression in Southeast Asia. The troops which they arm are being deployed against the forces of the United States and its allies who are striving to preserve the freedom of small nations.

Even though the American and allied armies are engaged in an idealistic mission to protect the people of South Vietnam, the United Nations is indifferent to the Communist aggression. Also, the free governments of Western Europe are not speaking out in defense of the very principles which were at stake in two world wars and were vindicated by huge sacrifices.

In Europe there is disunity. Why is General de Gaulle unwilling to join in the defense plans of free nations, though France itself has twice been saved by the sacrifices of other countries, particularly the United States? Why are the people of Great Britain willing to trade with an enemy which is helping to kill American boys today? Why is there no concerted action by the Western Alliance? We hear only about the disintegration of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The press in many lands is filled, meanwhile, with accusations against the United States as if America were herself engaged in a war of aggression instead of in an altruistic endeavor for the benefit of the whole world.

The threats to world peace are plain to see. The cupidity and ambition of minority groups which rule the Soviet Union and Red China, respectively, are all too apparent. When will the eyes of the world be focused on the true enemies - the cliques of irresponsible men who can pull the trigger at any moment or can intimidate vast numbers of people on the European and Asiatic continents and cause them to bow to the will of a tyrannical regime?

Under these disturbing conditions, why is there no discussion publicly in the United Nations about the possible consequences - a third world war? It is the function of the United Nations and of every government to speak up in defense of human liberty.

The best hope for peace lies not in appeasing dictatorial rulers but in reaching the hearts and minds of peoples. Compared to the billions of dollars being spent for the "Great Society," only paltry sums are being appropriated by Congress to improve the means of communication between the peoples of this and other countries.

Circumstances similar to those which preceded World War I and World War II are visible all around us, both in Europe and in Asia. This is why it is pertinent to ask: Why are we in America neglecting the construction of an antimissile system of defense? And why are we not warning the people everywhere of the growing danger of a third world war?

Widows Haunted By Fire

EDITOR'S NOTE— Just when they think the pain is finally fading, it comes back to hurt again. And then the everlasting, lonely nights start over. They are the widows— and the orphans— of 12 firemen who perished Oct. 17, 1966, in the worst tragedy in the history of the New York Fire Department. Fathers Day is June 18, but in 12 New York homes, at least, the usual gaiety will be absent.

By JEAN HELLER

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's a strange feeling, thinking he's just at work and tonight maybe he'll be home. Then the night comes and the house is quiet. The kids are in bed. But he doesn't come home. He never comes home."

And Virginia Higgens knows he never will.

Walter Higgens, battalion chief, New York City Fire Department, died last Oct. 17 with 11 other firemen in the worst tragedy in the department's history.

In the boiling black smoke and the stench of burning chemicals, the weakened floor of a 75-year-old building collapsed into an incinerating fire, dropping the men in after it.

The block-long scar of gutted buildings at Broadway and 22nd Street has long since been healed by bulldozers and covered over with an asphalt parking lot.

But for 12 widows and 36 children, the pain cannot be pushed away or covered over.

"It's the way they died, that's what keeps you awake," said Mrs. Joseph Priore. "That was the hardest adjustment to make."

Jeanette Kaminsky, who lost her husband, Rudolph, after 15 years of marriage, has found some comfort in her two daughters, Glorianne, 12, and Rose Marie, 13, who have done their best to make the adjustment easier.

"Rose Marie isn't the type to break down, but every once in a while she goes to her room and closes the door," Mrs. Kaminsky said. "It got to Glorianne too. Her father used to have pet names for her and once, by mistake, I called her by one of those names. She said, 'Mommy, please don't call me that. That was Daddy's name for me.'

"They hear in school what their friends are doing with their fathers and they come home and tell me. That's when I can see their misery although they try to hide it because they're trying to bolster me. It's especially bad now that Fathers Day is coming. That used to be such a celebration in our house."

Daniel Rey, 26, was a probationary fireman who followed his father and older brother into the department. He had never been called out on a big fire before.

For eight months, Virginia Rey has been haunted by the question, "How did he know?"

She recalled: "He used to say to me, 'You know honey, I know that when the first big fire comes, I won't come home. I know I'll never come back.' He knew he was going to die in the Fire Department.

"The night of the fire his mother called him at the fire house. He told her, 'Nothing big has happened yet but I have the feeling it'll be tonight. The big one's going to come tonight.'

"How did he know?"

People who never knew that a Walter Higgens or a Thomas Reilly or a William McCarron or a Carl Lee had existed lined the streets to pay respects— and sometimes to weep— as flag-draped fire engines bore their bodies to funeral sites.

People who had never met John Finley, John Berry, James Galanaugh, Bernard Tepper or Joseph Kelly felt instinctively that their wives and children might need help.

Thousands sent their checks and their dollars and their coins to help ease the financial crisis. The resulting fund, which now totals more than $646,000, will provide an average of nearly $54,000 per family.

But along with these thousands of people, there also was a share of sick ones, the type who make anonymous, profane and insulting telephone calls.

Several women reported a rash of them after the fire. Dorothy Tepper changed her telephone number three times and finally had it unlisted.

But in comparison to those who genuinely wanted to help, the sick ones were few.

The fund, plus Social Security and pension payments, will permit most of the women to remain with their children instead of going to work. But in some cases, that freedom also gives the women too much idle time to think.

Ethel and John Finley celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary last Oct. 14. Three days later their marriage died in the fire. Three of the four Finley children are grown and away from home. Only Joseph, 11, remains.

"There just wasn't enough for me to do," Mrs. Finley said. "I'd sit around and be miserable most of the time. So I took a job two days a week as a volunteer nurses aide. It helps to get your mind off your own grief and concentrate on somebody else's pain."

For Marie Reilly and Dorothy Tepper, remembering is so terrible that they won't talk about it. "We still expect him to come home," Mrs. Reilly said. "I'd rather not talk about it. I'm not that strong yet."

Some who think they have the strength, find that they're wrong.

"Yesterday I saw the monument on his grave for the first time," Grace Priore said softly. "You think you have full control and then something like that comes up. It's the little things that shake you."

Often the little things are the children.

Winifred McCarron has three sons, the youngest aged 3.

"The baby talks about him constantly," she said. "It doesn't bother me unless I'm having one of my bad days. Then I'll break."

Ann Kelly's son, Darin, is 6.

"I thought he was still too young to really know," Mrs. Kelly said. "But once in a while he'll come across things we have in the house that remind him of his father. He remembers how his father taught him how to move the typewriter carriage back and forth. Sometimes he walks to the desk and just stands there moving it, over and over.

"Those are the times I think he hurts."

Terrence Lee is 7. His brother Lance is 6.

These moments of anguish, the women all say, become fewer and fewer with the passing of time.

Community Education Key to Success Of Bloomfield Girl Scout Day Camp

BY WARREN SOKOLIS

BLOOMFIELD - This week about 80 Brownie, Junior and Cadet Girl Scouts are participating in a day camp that combines camping skills with an education in community affairs.

This is the ninth annual Back 40 Day Camp at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Welborn.

At the day camp instruction is given in such traditional scouting skills as cooking, first aid, knot-tying, Morse code and crafts. In this respect the Back 40 camp resembles other scouting day camps.

However, the camp becomes unique with its emphasis on community affairs. The scouts are learning about local and county governments.

Included in the community affairs education were tours of the post office, city hall, fire station and the courthouse.

The recorder's office was one of the highlights of the courthouse tour. The girls were shown the files dating back to the 19th century when all records were written in ornate longhand.

At the post office the scouts had an opportunity to observe the process of handling mail and learned the importance of the zip code system.

At the new city hall, which was completed this year, Mayor Alvin Corbin conducted a tour of the city offices and explained the importance of each office in serving the needs of the community.

Scouts were taken to the county jail where Sheriff Ralph Temples explained the process of fingerprinting and then fingerprinted the scouts.

The purpose of these tours was to acquaint the scouts with the processes of government at the local and county levels, Mrs. Joe Welborn explained.

Community service is stressed in the year-around scouting program, she continued.

Mrs. Welborn, overall director of the Girl Scouts at Bloomfield, noted that the Girl Scouts assist in homemaking activities, the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, the community Thanksgiving project, Heart Fund drive, voter registration drive, the Medicare information drive and the council on the aging.

At Christmas the scouts make and repair toys for distribution to children from low-income families.

In special sessions of the city council the girls are given an opportunity to serve as city officials. This is an additional method of learning the process of local government, Mrs. Welborn pointed out.

The scouting program is designed with hopes that the girls will carry their training in community service over into their adult lives, she said.

The day camp has been successful throughout the years because of the cooperation from parents and community officials, she noted. They volunteer their time to help the scouting program to achieve its objectives.

The Brownie campsite, called "Puppeteers," is directed by Mrs. Charles Christian. She is assisted by Mrs. Vader Link and Senior Scouts Jackie Baker of Gideon and Brenda French.

The Junior Scout campsite, "Shady Oak," is directed by Mrs. Hugh Lay, Mrs. G. D. Scism, Mrs. Don Ross and Mrs. Edward McCoy. Senior Scout Elizabeth Welborn is assisting at this site.

The "Back 40 Bunnies" is the campsite name chosen by the Cadets. Mrs. Paul Ralaford is the director, assisted by Mrs. Bob Beal.

Boy Scouts are also on hand to help out with the camp. Rick Harper and Danny Gaines, both Explorers, and Steve Henry, Jackie Couger, and James Lintz, all Boy Scouts, have volunteered their time to make the camp a success.

Eagle Scout Briney Welborn is serving as an assistant official and is in charge of the inter-troop competition.

Welborn, who is national council representative of the Boy Scouts of America and Sioux district president, is helping at the site.

Even the youngest member of the Welborn family, R. Kip, 5, is participating in the week's activities. He had been assigned the duties of mascot and official bell ringer.

Mrs. John French is the day camp registrar and purchasing agent.

Others helping with the camp projects are:

Melvin Williams and Delmar Underwood, city aldermen; Cecil Swallows, a postal employee; E. W. Aslin, director of community housing; Mrs. Herb Crites, recorder of deeds, and the city fire department.

The activities tonight begin with a reception on the Welborn patio at 6:30 p.m. The public is invited to the reception.

Handiwork done by the scouts during the camp will be on display for public viewing at the campsites.

The closing flag ceremony will be followed by a program of song and dance presented by the scouts.

The value of the day camp was summed up by Sharon Christian, 9, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Christian, when she said: "We learn how to be nice to others, and we learn how to work with others."

Pearls from coconuts make up a curious chapter in gem lore today. A coconut is a giant seed; from a soft "eye" at one end, a growing sprout will emerge. Sometimes the eye is hard or missing (A "blind" nut) and growth will be inward; it may end in a hard nodule -- like a jumbo-size oyster pearl. So rare and valuable were cocnut pearls that any blind nut found by a native of Indonesian lands belonged, by decree, to the local rajah. Thus a learned Dutchman was told in the late 1600's during Dutch colonization, and he mentioned the cocnut pearl prominently in a book about Indies plants. Suspicions developed in the middle 1800's when chemical tests of two coconut pearls bought in Singapore showed them to be identical in composition, as well as appearance, with pearls from the big Tridacna clam of tropical seas. Evidently it was an old racket; WILY Oriental dealers unloaded, the Tridacna product -- a lusterless pearl of little valke -- at a rarity price on anybody who would believe the coconut story. It is still believed. Not many years ago, a leading American plant explorer had an armed policeman stand guard beside his precious coconut pearl exhibited at a charity bazaar; he had acquired it during a Pacific trip in 1940. The "pearl that grows on trees" continues to turn up in books and on radios. Unfortunately, like another rare gem - the jewel within a toad's head, of medieval legend -- it doesn't exist.

Monday: Mary thinks I deserve a raise. Is nagging me to ask the boss. Says landing the Miller account was important. But boss is grouchy on Monday morning. Ask tomorrow.

Tuesday: Had a cup of coffee instead of breakfast. Mary forgot to buy eggs and bacon. Her way of reminding me about raise. Will ask -- tomorrow.

Wednesday: Children ordered to ignore me. Dog growls if I pet him. Must ask about raise.

Thursday: Suffering hunger pains, intense loneliness. Milkman's avoiding me. Parents declined dinner invite. Will beg boss.

Friday: Boss gave me a raise for landing Miller account. Said I was an example to other employes because I hadn't asked for it.

Saturday: Ate three meals. Read to the kids. Parents came to dinner. Nice day.

Sunday: Mary thinks I deserve a private office. Says it's a sign of prestige. Will ask tomorrow.

BROWNIE SCOUTS at Bloomfield rehearse their skit for tonight's performance. The girls standing on the bench manipulate imaginary strings while the "puppets" act out their parts. Narrating the play, "Goldilocks and the Three Bears," is, at left, Cindy Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Cooper. The puppets are, from left, Brenda Link, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vader Lin; Cecily Harper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Harper; Jamie Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Walker, and Sharon Christian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Christian. Back row, from left, are Kim Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Evans; Angela Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Holland; Chris Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hill, and Regina King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thurman King.

JUNIOR GIRL SCOUTS make tarrycloth house shoes out of washrags. The craftwork of the Bloomfield scouts will be on display tonight at the Back 40 Day Camp site.

REBECCA HOPKINS, 8, daughter of Trooper and Mrs. Vernon Hopkins of Bloomfield, slices carrots for a salad. The scouts prepare their own meals, and for Brownies like Rebecca, this is a special treat.

TABLES ARE MADE by Junior Girl Scouts by lashing pieces of wood together with twine. From left are Cynthia Spain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Spain; Connie King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thurman King; Cindy McClain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur McClain; Elizabeth Welborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Welborn; Mrs. G. D. Scism; Brenda Scism, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Scism; Charlotte Rodgers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rodgers Jr.; Mary Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Williams, and Ramona Hopkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Hopkins. Mrs. Scism is a scout director. Miss Welborn is a senior scout and will represent Region 8 at the international gathering in England this summer.

IT'S A SCOUTING FAMILY. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Welborn and sons Briney and R. Kip (in front) have taken an active interest in scouting activities in the Bloomfield community. Mr. Welborn is national council representative of the Boy Scouts and president of the Sioux district. Mrs. Welborn directs the Girl Scout activities in Bloomfield. Briney, an Eagle Scout, represented the region at Boy Scout report to the nation activities. R. Kip is the mascot and official bell ringer for the Back 40 Day Camp, which is in session this week at the Welborn home. A daughter, Elizabeth, has been selected to represent the region at the Girl Scout international gathering in England.

Draft Revisions Only Two Steps From Enactment

WASHINGTON (AP) — New draft legislation requiring deferments for most college undergrads who request them and indirectly recommending that 19-year-olds be inducted first is two short steps from becoming law.

The compromise measure cleared the Senate Wednesday and shared priority in the House with a bill aimed at halting a railroad strike scheduled for next week.

House leaders hoped to pass both measures today, with the strike bill having the right of way. If the draft bill wasn't acted on today, the leaders said it would be considered next week.

After passage it would go to the President for signature.

The draft proposal would go into effect for four years starting July 1 and would make several basic changes in the Selective Service Act of 1948.

It would require local draft boards to grant deferments to undergraduate college students requesting them and meeting scholastic and other school requirements.

The deferment would end when the student reached age 24, left school or completed his undergraduate work, whichever came first. The student would then go to the top of the group available for induction, ahead of the 19-year-olds.

Dtudent deferments are discretionary with local draft boards under the present law.

While the legislation does not require the induction of 19-year-olds ahead of all others, Congress has endorsed in formal reports the President's announced plan to put them at the top of the priority list. This would be a reversal of the present system of first drafting older men in the 19 to 26 age group.

Maxine, the small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Finley, who has been seriously ill for some time, is now slowly improving.

Glenn Hoskins, Abbie Morrison, Addie Dover, Josephine Robinson, Mary Blanton, Eva Mae Hollister, Catherine Jewell, and Eva Mitchell, chaperoned by the Misses Margaret Dover, Clarice Burton and Myra Tanner, spent Tuesday at Little River near Morehouse.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Kornegger went to Puxico, Mo., Tuesday to spend the summer on their farm.

The Standard regrets to report the illness of Mrs. Jno. E. Marshall, who is suffering much with rheumatism. She has been confined to her room for the past two weeks.

Last Saturday the 16-year-old son of G. C. Catledge, about four miles south of Sikeston, met with a very severe accident. While leading a mule by a rope and halter, the mule became frightened and jerked the rope through the boy's right hand, and tore his thumb off.

Beginning July 1, there will be only two police on the Sikeston force, Chief Walter Kendall will be on in the day time and his assistant, Gid Daniels, will be on at night. This change was made due to infrequent arrests. During the past month, two arrests were made and they were for minor offenses.

The editor has had two suggestions handed in. One from a young woman that the baseball boys dust their seats just before the game! The other, that women folks should wear overalls or flannel bathing suits when they attend the games.

Mystery Illness Closes Plant

OLIVETTE, Mo. (AP) — A mysterious illness that has affected women employes of an ordnance assembly plant in the St. Louis suburb of Olivette has caused the plant to be shut down.

Seven women were stricken last Friday, 10 Monday, and six Tuesday at the Carter Carburetor Division of A.C.F. Industries. The women have reported feeling ill and some have fainted.

The women work in one end of the plant, assembling mortar and artillery shell fuse components. Company officials say the illnesses are puzzling. A spokesman for a hospital where laboratory tests were taken on the women reported no conclusive findings.

GUEST LIST . . . FOR A WEDDING
By Grace V. Watkins

You list the names of relatives and friends,
Warm-hearted neighbors cherished many a year.
But oh, before your time of listing ends,
Be sure you add another name in clear
And shining letters, beautiful and bright,
The name of One who is the living light.

And, though you will not mail an invitation
To Him, oh, pray that bride and groom and all
Who hear their solemn words of dedication
Shall feel that He is there, shall sense the full,
Deep holiness of His redeeming power,
Those moments and in every future hour.

UP A TREE!

A little thought for people who
Think automation's drastic;
What are the termites going to do
When wood's replaced by plastic?

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: How can you be so positive your advice is ALWAYS right? I did what you advised, Ann, and now I am not sure it was the wise decision.

Our daughter had a baby out of wedlock three months ago. The social worker, our minister, our doctor -- everyone -- said she should put the baby up for adoption. She was barely 16 and the boy 17. Marriage was out of the question.

I went to the hospital and stayed with my daughter until her child was born. Her little girl was the most beautiful baby I'd ever seen. Now that the ordeal is over things are back to normal and my daughter is reasonably happy. The bad dream is over for her, but it will never be over for me. I am bitter and depressed. I have a dull ache in my heart for my first grandchild who is lost to me forever. I wish I had said "To hell with society" and taken that baby home and raised it as best I could. -- HEARTSICK.

Dear Heartsick: You did what was best for the baby, best for your daughter and best for the father of the child. And it was best for you, too, although you may not believe it now. You will believe it one day, however, when your daughter is married and has a family. When that day comes, please let me know.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 16-year-old girl who has a father problem. He is a wonderful man but he has the crazy idea that he must keep proving how much he loves me by kissing me all the time.

I get embarrassed in front of my friends when he pulls me on his lap, or kisses me on the neck but I hate to say anything for fear of hurting his feelings. Is it my mother's place to tell him, or do you think I should mention it? I am the only girl in a family of four boys and I know my father favors me, but I wish he would stop putting on such a show for everybody. What should I do? --OVERLOVED.

Dear Overloved: Tell your dad that you are a big girl now and you don't want to be smooched by daddy. A hello or good-bye kiss is just fine, but that should be it.

Dear Ann Landers: Please help me. I am a 15-year-old boy who hates school. I am not learning anything. When the teachers talk I block out their voices and thing of other things.

Homework is a bore and all the stuff they try to cram into our heads is a waste of time. Most of the things they teach in school these days will not help a person make a living. Why should I knock myself out trying to memorize Spanish words when I know I will never go to Spain? Who needs it?

In two months I will be 16 which is the legal age a kid can quit school in this state. I plan to dog it until my birthday, and then take a powder. I promised my dad I would write to you so I am doing it. I am not promising I will pay attention to your advice. -- FED UP TO HERE

Dear Fed: Stay in school and get your diploma. If you think you are bored NOW, just wait until you get trapped in a nothing little job at the bottom of the pay scale and discover you are stuck there for the rest of your life.

Not a day goes by that I don't get a dozen letters from kids 19 and 20 -- begging me to tell high schoolers to stick with it. So-- I tell 'em, and I hope they listen.

If You Were The Judge
BY Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF RODGER THE LODGER

Rodger made his annual fall trip to his hunting lodge only to discover when he got there that is was already occupied by Mr. Bimple. And, even more aggravating to Rodger, Mr. Bimple insisted that he had rented the lodge from the owner and refused to permit owner Rodger from even crossing the threshold.

The real payoff came, however, when Mr. Bimple locked the door in Rodger's face. Absolutely flabbergasted, Rodger's temper began to soar like a thermometer. Grunting with rage, he quickly battered down the door with his shoulder. Instead of spending the night in the lodge, however, he spent it in jail. Mr. Bimple had him arrested for breaking in.

"It's absurd," Rodger growled in court. "A man can't be arrested for breaking into his own house. It's like trying to give a man a ticket for overtime parking in his own garage."

"It doesn't make any difference whose house it was," responded the district attorney. "Breaking down doors just isn't permitted."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you give lodge owner Rodger lodgings in the local jail?

This is how the judge ruled: Rodger went to jail. The judge held that the law seeks to prevent fights, violence and other breaches of the peace; that while a person is permitted to recover his property, if he cannot do it peacefully, he must resort to legal means.

Wholesale Industry Big Income Source

COLUMBIA - Missouri's wholesale industry is the State's most important source of personal income, followed closely by Federal payrolls and the transportation services. These three industries were responsible for the generation of 34 percent, or $2.93 billion of the $8.5 billion of personal income received by residents of Missouri in 1958. In each of these three between $8 million and $1.2 million was generated.

That information is brought out in a statistical study of the inter-industry structure and relationships of Missouri published by the Business and Public Administration Research Center at the University of Missouri, Columbia.

The 156-page monograph points out that the next level of industries in importance in generating personal income, which to residents of the State is the real reason for economic activity, generated between $220 million and $525 million each. That level included the meat processing, aircraft, electrical machinery, miscellaneous food products. hemicals, industrial machinery, metal products, motor vehicles, grain mill products, and construction industries, which were responsible for the generation of $3.45 billion, or 40 percent of the total.

Exports from other industry sources were responsible for the generation of the remaining 26 percent of the income received by residents of the state, the study reports.

The study is based on the industrial picture for 1958, the latest year for which final and complete statistics were available. It was prepared by Dr. Floyd K. Harmston, professor of economics and program director for research assistant, as an input-output analysis of the state. It covers a total value of $28,111,740,000 consisting of the gross income of agriculture, mining, manufacturing and services and the operating margins of wholesaling and retailing.

In their conclusions the authors, under the heading of "income," report:

"The cash income of the household, or personal income, in the state during 1958 amounted to $8.5 billion. Revenues of state and local government amounted to $953 million. The income of the various industrial and business sectors varied widely. Six of the sectors had incomes above $1.0 billion; retail trade margins being the largest ($1.7 billion). Seven others had incomes between $250 million and $449 million. Eleven had incomes between $250 mollion and $449 million. Three of the groups had incomes under $100 million; mining being the smallest ($87 million)."

On exports, or sales outside the state, the monograph says:

"Sales of goods and services to residents of other states and regions, plus expenditures of the federal government and long term private investment amounted to $7.7 billion in 1958. This money has been designated as the basic income of the state, or the new money introduced into the economy during the year. This leaves a total of $20.3 billion which represents the economic activity associated with supplying the needs of industry and residents of the state. It can be labeled the local market."

Also discussed are imports, or "leakage," which affect the amount of money from industrial activities retained in the state's economy. The authors suggest in the conclusion that the development of local sources for the imports from out of state would have a positive effect on the personal income from Missouri industry.

With reference to the indirect effects of export, the report comments "A firm may be selling heavily on the local market but its products may be inputs to other firms whose markets are in the export sector. As an example, agriculture made 32 percent of its sales to meat processing which in turn sold 69 percent of its product out-of-state. Mining sold 34 percent of its output to primary metals which depended upon the export market for 61 percent of its sales. Thus, a sector may be indirectly affected by the export market to a substantial degree."

The study is the tenth in a series of studies defining the problems and prospects for the state's economy which are being conducted by the Research Center as segments of a long-term project sponsored by more than 30 Missouri business and industrial firms.

For purposes of organizing and relating the analysis the authors have assigned the industries of the state to 34 sectors or categories, each made up of individual firms whose products have some features in common. In addition, a household sector which reflects the contribution of local labor, capital and management to the state's economy, and a sector for the activities of state and local government have been included.

Four tables that are the basis of the analysis and numerous figures break down into detail the statistical aspects of Missouri industrial interrelationships. The authors discuss the various sectors individually in brief texts supplementing the figures, presenting in three separate chapters the purchasing relationships, sales relationships, and generation of the local market. Sources of data for the tables and a bibliography are included.

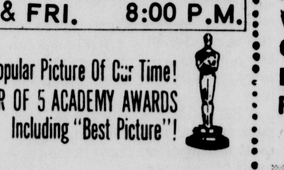
In a foreword to the report Dr. Robert W. Paterson, director of the Center, reports that "So far as is known this study represents one of the first full-blown publications of a state inter-industry analysis.

"The results of the work," he continues, "provide detailed information about local markets which are useful to industry officials for product planning, to economic theorists interested in the detailed workings of the market system, and, when more than one period of time is analyzed, the work is useful to forecasters who seek to pinpoint the effects of an increase in gross national product on each of several sectors making up the market flows."

The Prayer
From The Upper Room

My son, attend to my words; incline thine ear unto my sayings. (Proverbs 4:20)

PRAYER: Our Father, we would fix our attention on things that are above, not alone on things that pass away. Bless us with understanding of Thy Word that it may be a joy to our life, strength in our weakness, the pathway to life eternal. In Christ's name we pray. Amen.



We have the mind of Christ. —(I Cor. 2:16).

One meaning of the word mind is "to tend," as when we mind the baby. We have a responsibility at all times to tend, or mind our mind. We should control our thinking, keep our thoughts centered in God and on the good. Let us remember that it is Divine Mind we are privileged to be using, for there is only one Mind—God's. He is love, order and peace, and our thoughts should flow in similar channels.

Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Mr. Bruce,

I just want to write you a note of appreciation expressing my personal thanks for the fine way in which your men conducted our Vacation Bible School parade through Sikeston last Friday morning.

I have organized several VBS parades and worked with several different city policemen but the Sikeston police did the best at keeping the parade moving and taking us over the suggested parade route that I've ever had the privilege of working with.

I thank each of you very much. Because of your excellent cooperation, and skillful handling of the parade our Vacation Bible School will even be more successful.

Please express my appreciation and personal thanks to each of the men who assisted.

I suggest that Lyndon Johnson bring in the one-eyed general from Israel to tell Defense Secretary McNamara and his computers how to win a war. He gained more ground in three days than we have in three years under McNamara leadership in Vietnam.

Maybe the way to win a war is to turn it over to military men instead of computers and fuzzy-headed thinkers in the nation's capital.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, June 15, the 166th day of 1967. There are 199 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1215, the Magna Carta was signed by King John of England.

On this date:

In 1752, Benjamin Franklin demonstrated the relationship between electricity and lightning when he launched a kite at Philadelphia during a storm.

In 1775, George Washington accepted command of the Continental Army.

In 1836, Arkansas was admitted to the Union.

In 1904, more than 1,000 persons died in a fire aboard the steamboat General Slocum off New York's Manhattan Island.

In 1940, German armies outflanked France's Maginot Line.

In 1964, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the states must apportion their legislatures according to population.

Ten years ago — Britain told the Soviet Union full-scale disarmament could come only after the easing of political tensions.

Five years ago — The Soviet Union bitterly denounced the United States at the Geneva disarmament conference.

One year ago — The United States said it would bow to French demands and remove virtually all American troops from France in the next few months.

Tower's Raven

England's Charles II predicted that England would fall if ravens ever left the Tower of London, so the Tower always keeps at least one raven traditionally.

Sikeston Toll Routes Studied

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Members of the state highway commission and Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, who will make up the new toll road authority when it becomes a legal organization Oct. 13, met again with engineering firms Wednesday night to discuss preliminary work.

Hearnes' office announced the toll road authority had agreed through a letter of intent to retain three engineering firms to conduct preliminary studies.

Routes they will look into include the following:

1. From Kansas City south to the vicinity of Joplin with a possible extension from north of Baldwin in southeast to west of Springfield near Halltown.

2. From Kansas City to Springfield.

3. From Kansas City to the vicinity of Rolla, passing near the Lake of the Ozarks, then extending to the vicinity of Sikeston.

4. From near Kirksville through Jefferson City and on south to a connection with Interstate 44 near Rolla and on south to the Arkansas line.

5. From near Hannibal or any other point that may be the terminal of an Illinois turnpike west to Kansas City.

6. From North of Joplin southwest to the common boundary of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

7. From the vicinity of Joplin to a proposed Arkansas turnpike in the vicinity of Pea Ridge, Ark.

8. From the Hannibal-Louisiana area southwest to the Lake of the Ozarks passing near Jefferson City and on to the Joplin area.

9. From the Hannibal-Louisiana area to the vicinity of St. Charles.

10. From Springfield north to a connection with the Kansas City-Sikeston route.

11. From Sikeston west to Springfield.

12. Possible turnpike routes in St. Louis and Kansas City.

The preliminary studies will cost about $60,000 and will be paid from the sale of first revenue bonds with a formal contract to be signed after Oct. 13.

From these preliminary studies the turnpike authority can establish priority routes.

Truck Length Bill Amended

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri House spent nearly three hours today amending a Senate bill to allow truck rigs of up to 65 feet in length to travel all primary routes in the state.

Because of the House changes the bill will go back to the Senate.

The measure also would allow operators of the longer trucks to travel state maintained routes if they get special permission from the chief engineer of the highway commission.

The vote passing the bill and sending it back to the Senate was 99-47.

The Senate passed and sent to the governor, 22-5, a bill that would allow cities to sell industrial plants with revenue bonds at a price sufficient to pay off the bonds.

Cities already can sell plants with general obligation bonds. bonds.

Other bills sent to the governor would:

Make the closing time for liquor sales 1:30 a. m. Sunday uniform throughout the state but eliminate present liquor sale from midnight Sunday to 1:30 a. m. Monday.

Eliminate any reference to race in connection with state training schools. There formerly was a Negro girls' training school.

100 Clergymen Honor Ritter

ST. LOUIS (AP) — More than 100 high-ranking Catholic and Protestant clergymen gathered today in St. Louis Cathedral to do the final earthly honor to Joseph Cardinal Ritter, a good shepherd and friend.

Thousands of persons crowded into the massive cathedral and stood outside in the broiling sun during the solemn Pontifical Requiem Mass concelebrated by Cardinal-designate John Patrick Cody of Chicago and seven bishops closely connected with the St. Louis Archdiocese.

Four cardinals and four cardinals-designate joined 10 archbishops and 45 catholic bishops in the solemn funeral processional. Walking with them were 52 high-ranking church ministers and officials, some of whom were observers at the Vatican Council where Cardinal Ritter championed the ecumenical movement. Almost all of them acknowledged the gentle cardinal as the leader of the St. Louis religious community.

Sterling Silver

Charles Lewis Tiffany, the famous jeweler, was the first to establish the term "sterling" in the United States, thereby adding to the prestige of his firm. Tiffany had adopted the standards of English silver in 1851 in his jewelry manufacturing business, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

jungles of war zone D north of Saigon. Six Americans were killed and 12 wounded, most in the first few seconds, before artillery fire raked the Red positions. A U.S. spokesman said 60 Communists were killed and another American was killed and seven were wounded earlier in the operation.

The intensified ground fighting was matched by 129 air strikes against North Vietnam, many of them aimed again at rail lines north of Hanoi. One American Phantom jet was shot down by ground fire and the crew was listed as missing. It was the 583rd U.S. combat plane lost over the North.

The delta battle erupted in the paddyfields about 85 miles southwest of Saigon when the crack Viet Cong "Tay Do" battalion, escorted by local guerrillas, ran into two companies of South Vietnamese militia about 10 a.m.

The Viet Cong commander apparently was unaware that two battalions of the South Vietnamese 21st Division were only a few miles away.

By foot and helicopter, the men of the 21st swept onto the field and into blocking positions, pushing the Communist battalion into the open. There it was raked mercilessly by artillery and helicopter gunships.

One helicopter was shot down and landed in guerrilla territory. A big twin-rotor recovery helicopter came in to rescue the stricken chopper and was driven off by Viet Cong fire. Another gunship came in and silenced the Communists and the downed chopper was finally lifted out.

"We've never had a day like this before," said exultant helicopter gunner Dennis Bolton of Huntsville, Ark.

"That was really some sharp shooting," said his commander, Capt. Thomas Beauchamp of Bristol, Va.

The Americans had no casualties. The South Vietnamese had five dead and 60 wounded.

the session would begin Saturday.

Speculation continued that Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin would attend the session. Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in his letter requesting the meeting said the Soviet delegation would include "leading statesmen of the Soviet Union," and AP Correspondent Henry S. Bradsher reported from Moscow that Kosygin was likely to be among them.

The Soviet Union based its call for the emergency session on the "Uniting for Peace" resolution which the United States pushed through the assembly in 1950 to circumvent the Soviet veto in the Security Council.

The procedure permits assembly action on a threat to peace when the Security Council is paralyzed by lack of unanimity among the big powers. The Russians in the past called the procedure illegal.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg told the Security Council during its debate Wednesday that his government was "not interested in maneuvers" such as the Soviet move to the assembly but rather wanted to work in the council for real peace in the Middle East.

He said "the council has far from exhausted its possibility of contributing" to that end.

Goldberg went to Washington Wednesday afternoon to consult with the State Department.

The provision in the Soviet resolution to condemn Israel received the votes of only four council members—the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, India and Mali. The 11 other council members abstained.

The affirmative votes of nine members are required for adoption of a resolution.

The provision calling for Israel withdrawal was supported by six members—the four that voted for the first provision plus Ethiopia and Nigeria. The other nine council members again abstained.

The council gave unanimous approval, however, to a resolution sponsored by Argentina, Brazil and Ethiopia calling on all governments concerned to treat war prisoners and civilians caught in the war humanely. It also asked Israel to facilitate the return of refugees from the fighting.

As preparations for a Soviet-Arab push against Israel went forward at the United Nations, Cairo Radio announced that foreign ministers of the Arab nations would meet in Kuwait Saturday to plan an Arab summit conference.

The report said the foreign ministers would discuss plans for "eliminating the traces of aggression against the Arab countries."

No date or site has been announced for the summit meeting.

Egyptian officials were letting it be known that President Gamal Abdel Nasser's government would rather risk another military test with Israel than negotiate a Middle East settlement with their conquerors.

Unconfirmed reports in Cairo said Egypt had already begun receiving shipments of Communist arms and other military equipment. There were rumors that Soviet MIG17 fighters had been flown in, and Cairo newspapers printed dispatches from Moscow saying the Communist countries of Eastern Europe were discussing replacement of military equipment lost by the Arabs.

Egypt also was reported preparing an expanded boycott of Western companies, principally those of the United States and Britain, which deal with Israel.

Among the Arab leaders, Algerian President Houari Boumedienne's star appeared to be in the ascendant following his trip to Moscow early this week to seek renewed Soviet support for the Arabs. Some diplomats in Cairo considered this a boost for Boumedienne because he went instead of Nasser, and today Syrian President Nureddin el-Atassi arrived in Algiers to confer with Boumedienne.

Boumedienne's hand also was strengthened because his army never got into the fighting and thus came out of the war intact, while Nasser's was wrecked.

In London, sources in the oil industry reported that Kuwait had resumed oil shipments to all its customers except Britain and the United States after breaking a 10-day strike of oil terminal workers that began with the outbreak of the war.

Saudi Arabia also was allowing British and American tankers to load provided they were not headed for British or American ports.

Oilmen in Britain generally feel that British oil needs can be met from shipments to countries not under the Arab ban, which stemmed from allegations—vigorously denied—of U.S. and British support of Israel.

In Ankara, Turkey, a Soviet Embassy spokesman denounced as a "complete fabrication" a report that five Russian officers had been captured by the Israelis on the Syrian front. The spokesman said no Soviet military men or technicians took part in the war.

Israeli military sources had reported the capture of the five Russians, but a spokesman for the Israeli army quickly denied it.

Asked if she approved of showing knees and thighs with the new super-short Paris skirts, designer Coco Chanel reportedly answered, "Thighs - of course. Knees - never!" U.N.P.

President Johnson and Vice President Humphrey acted in good faith when they addressed fund-raising dinners for Dodd, and did not know the funds might be converted to personal use.

Johnson addressed Dodd testimonial dinners in 1961 and 1963 when he was vice president, and Humphrey spoke at a fund-raising event for Dodd in 1965.

Stennis took the floor to reply to Dodd's lengthy statement Wednesday that he was innocent of any wrongdoing.

The Senate entered the third day of debate on a committee resolution recommending that Dodd be censured for conduct that "tends to bring the Senate into dishonor and disrepute."

At the outset of today's debate, Dodd again turned to a charge that he had collected air fares from both the Senate and private organizations in seven instances from 1961 through 1965.

Dodd insisted there were 80 or more trips for which he could have double-billed, rather than just 10 as reported by the ethics committee.

Long, D-La., has said he knows "what this is all about" and hinted that in time he will disclose new facts in the case.

But when Dodd was asked about this, he said if Long has any surprise evidence, "I am not privy to it."

He said the committee mistakenly assumed he had only 10 opportunities for double billing.

Dodd said today that in the 1961-65 period he made 26 trips for which he was reimbursed by the Senate for his travel expenses and 54 for which he was reimbursed by private groups.

If he wanted to engage in double billing, he said, he would have "invented a government purpose" for the 54 trips paid for by private groups and would have developed a private engagement for the 26 trips made on Senate business.

Dodd says he knows of no surprises planned in his defense, but his self-appointed defender, Sen. Russell B. Long, is hinting that new facts may be unveiled.

Methodists Favor Religious Center Plan

FAYETTE (AP) -- The Missouri East Conference of the Methodist Church has approved plans for a special commission to work with other denominations in developing religious centers in resort and recreation areas and in urban neighborhoods.

The Missouri West Conference previously approved the proposal.

The commission will have a budget of $50,000 in its first year.

The East Missouri Conference also voted Wednesday to join the West Missouri Conference in setting up a Methodist Foundation for Missouri.

The foundation will urge church members to make bequests to Methodist agencies in their wills.

By GEORGE MCARTHUR

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Marines battled Communist troops today at two points south of Da Nang. The war's tempo rose again after a lull reflected by the fact American combat casualties last week were the lowest in nearly two months.

A Marine spokesman said a battalion of the 5th Marine Regiment fought a Communist force of undetermined size that had pounced on two or three Leatherneck platoons with heavy mortar and automatic weapons fire 25 miles south of Da Nang.

There was no announcement of casualties on either side.

Elements of the 7th Marine Regiment battled about 60 uniformed Viet Cong in Operation Arizona, 14 miles southwest of Da Nang. The Marines, saying nothing about any losses of their own, reported killing 15 of the Viet Cong.

A hard-core Communist battalion of about 500 men was cut to pieces in the Mekong River delta Wednesday by U.S. helicopter gunships and artillery and a crack South Vietnamese division.

The South Vietnamese said 211 of the Communists were killed, 17 were captured and many more wounded in a blistering battle in which the Red commander was bested by the battle-tested Vietnamese 21st Division.

As the two-week lull in the ground war broke, another Red battalion of about 500 men fell on an American company in the

Hearnes to Talk to Electric Cooperative

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes will address the Scott-New Madrid - Mississippi Rural Electric Cooperative at its 30th annual meeting at the Armory June 27. Four directors will be elected.

A crowd of 1,500 to 2,000 is expected for the meeting which will begin after registration at 10 a.m., with President Ernest Moxley, Charleston, presiding.

Hearnes will speak at 2 p.m.

In addition to the three counties, parts of Cape Girardeau, Bollinger and Stoddard Counties are served by the cooperative, which has a membership of 10,500.

In the morning session the minutes will be read by the secretary, Mrs. Mary Lou Schneider of Matthews.

The nominating committee will recommend re-election of four board members, whose three-year terms will expire. They are Jesse Bennett, Bloomfield; Alwin Gasser, E. S. Nelson, Wyatt, and Tom Moore, Matthews.

Members of the committee are, Orval Shoe, Wyatt; Robert Crow, Dexter, chairman; Mrs. Schneider, Gilbert Spears, Bell City; William K. Blue, Bloomfield; Roy Burke, Charleston; and Henry Voshage, Jackson.

Stands will be provided on the grounds for sandwiches and refreshments.

In a business meeting at 1 p.m. new federal legislation affecting rural electric cooperatives will be discussed. The purpose of the legislation Manager James C. Stephenson said, "is to provide banking credit for the cooperatives and expand the lines to take care of additional air-conditioners, irrigation, irrigation and other electrical loads." Loans would be made from a federal electric bank under the proposal.

Afternoon entertainment will include Glen Hall at the organ; the Austin acrobatic family; the globe-trotting Grimaldis family with clown acts, and Billy Papon, master of ceremonies, pantominist and harmonica player.

The entertainment will be furnished by the Missouri Electric Caravan, which will supply gents, chairs and stage as well as the entertainers.

A refrigerator and air conditioner as well as small electric appliances will be given away as door and attendance prizes.

Displays of appliances, farm implements and automobiles will be on the grounds.

Following adjournment, the board will meet at the cooperatives' office on East Malone, to reorganize and elect officers.

Thant Begins Poll

By WILLIAM N. OATS

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — An emergency session of the U.N. General Assembly, requested by the Soviet Union to discuss the Middle East war, appeared assured today on the basis of early replies to a poll being taken by Secretary-General U Thant.

The session was expected to begin this weekend.

By noon, 22 of the 122 member nations had replied and all were in favor of the session, a U.N. spokesman said.

Sixty-two affirmative replies are required to call the meeting, but no major opposition is expected.

U.N. diplomats expected the session to become a high-level affair, attended by a number of heads of government.

Secretary-General U Thant began polling the 122 U.N. members on the Soviet request for the session after the Security Council refused Wednesday to approve a Soviet resolution condemning Israel's "continued occupation" of Egyptian, Jordanian and Syrian territory taken in the war last week.

The Russians wanted the council also to demand that Israel troops pull back to the lines they held before fighting began June 5.

Thant must call the assembly session within 24 hours after receiving affirmative responses from a majority of the members — 62 nations. Diplomats generally believed that a majority would agree by Friday and that

97-Degree Heat Arrives Before Summer

Summer heat beat the season's official June 21 arrival by a week Wednesday as the mercury soared to 97 degrees, highest temperature of the year.

The 97 reading eclipsed the one-day old previous high of 93 recorded Tuesday. Prior to the current heat wave the hottest temperature was 92 May 25.

Temperatures are expected to continue above normal through the weekend.

Escorts, Winner at Malden, in State Event

The Escorts, 15 - year - old junior high school students, advanced to the state finals by winning a Junior Chamber of Commerce Battle of the Bands contest at Malden in April.

They will compete in the state event at the rodeo grounds Saturday afternoon.

The Escorts, Geoffrey Comer, organist; Ted Watkins, bass guitar; Mont Mitchell, drummer; Tim Chambers, lead guitar; and Doug Lambert, rhythm guitar, began their climb by winning the Kiwanis club talent contest in Charleston in 1966 and appeared at the Midsouth Fair in Memphis, as contestants for the Ted Mack Amateur Hour.

Playing for the Mississippi County Rescue Squad Talent show, private parties, Boy Scout and Girl Scout functions, the group has made appearances in the Sikeston and Charleston area.

The Escorts give a weekly program Saturday over a local radio station. They are scheduled to appear at a Jaycee Splatter Platter party at the Jaycee swimming pool July 1.

DEXTER - Dr. H. Tudor Westover, president of Three Rivers Junior College at Poplar Bluff, explained the roll of the junior college in education at the Chamber of Commerce meeting.

Dr. Westover stressed the roll the junior college will play in the area.

It was reported to the Chamber that the industrial committee had met and set up objectives. The committee elected Bud Davis chairman.

Bob Blankenship reported on last week's meeting at Bloomfield concerning the promotion of a county health center.

It was reported that the retail merchants committee had met and made plans for a sales promotion.

Stennis Unconvinced by Dodd's Denial of Charges

By JOHN CHADWICK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Stennis said today he failed to see how any impartial person could go through "this morass of money" involved in Sen. Thomas J. Dodd's affairs and conclude "that a grievous wrong has not been done to the Senate."

Stennis, the Mississippi Democrat who is chairman of the Senate ethics committee, said he would never come to the conclusion that a senator should be censured unless he were strongly and firmly convinced that "a wrong has been done to this institution."

The ethics committee found that Dodd, a Connecticut Democrat, had converted political funds to his personal use and had billed both the Senate and private organizations for travel expenses.

It submitted a resolution to the Senate to censure him for conduct that "tends to bring the Senate into dishonor and disrepute."

Stennis, in a rebuttal to Dodd's dramatic and emotional denial Wednesday of any wrongdoing, said the Connecticut senator had claimed but failed to offer proof that $150,000 in debts represented political rather than personal indebtedness.

Referring to the committee's hearing last March when testimoney was taken under oath, Stennis said that "we were hungry for proof that these were political obligations."

Earlier today, Stennis said

House Puts Off Remap Issue Again

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House got a respite today from congressional redistricting problems after a day of wrangling failed to solve them.

The issue was put off until Monday after a hasilty called Democratic caucus which drew criticism from Negroes, Republicans and dissident Democrats who had joined forced in an attempt to adopt the Senate reapportionment proposal.

It would put most St. Louis Negro voters in the Democratic 1st District of northern St. Louis now represented by veteran Rep. Frank M. Karsten.

Rep. DeVerne Calloway, D-St. Louis, one of the 12 Negroes in the House, was bitter about the delay. She said the Negroes were committed to the Senate bill because it would give them a chance to elect Missouri's first Negro congressman.

She said they would continue to vote with the Republicans if they also wanted to go along with the Senate version.

She said the purpose of the Democratic caucus was to get together on a bill that could close the Democratic ranks and send the whole problem to conference committee for settlement.

In committee action the House constitutional amendments committee approved two Senate measures to change Missouri tax laws.

One would allow the legislature to adopt federal income tax definitions in order to simplify state income tax forms. The legislature would still control state rates and deductions.

The other would permit a special equalization tax for St. Louis County school districts which would benefit the poorer districts but not help the richer ones.

Woman Injured As Cars Collide

Mrs. Barbara Yount, 32, Granite City, Ill., a passenger in a 1967 Ford, driven by Robert Yount, 38, also of Granite City, was injured in a two-car collision yesterday at 5:35 p.m. on highway 72, five miles east of Patton in Bollinger county.

A 1947 Chevrolet, driven by Ardell Seabaugh, 30, Sedgewickville, attempted to make a left turn when the cars collided, the state patrol reported.

Mrs. Young was taken to the Madison County hospital, Fredericktown, suffering cuts and bruises.

Seabaugh was given a summons for defective equipment.

At 11:30 a.m. yesterday on highway 60, five miles east of Charleston, a 1964 International tractor - trailer, driven by Harold Dick, 53, Melvindale, Mich., collided with a 1965 Buick, driven by Loren Parks, 72, Welesco, Tex.

The Parks car started to pass the truck in the face of oncoming traffic. It cut back into the line of traffic and struck the truck's left front fender.

Mariner 5 Soars Toward Venus

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Locked firmly onto the light of Canopus, Mariner 5 soared on toward Venus today on its 212-million-mile journey through space.

The spinning spacecraft, launched early Wednesday from Cape Kennedy, Fla., settled into a firmer position, scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said, after Mariner had found its guiding star.

The 540-pound craft by error latched onto the sunlit face of earth before its sensors picked out Canopus as ordered by its tracking station in California.

"It was still so close to earth that it locked on the earth's bright reflection," a scientist explained.

When it was blasted aloft by an Atlas-Agena D rocket, Mariner was aimed within 42,600 miles of Venus.

Two Men Guide Raft Down Mississippi

Rocky Sapp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Sapp, and Skip Crumpecker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Crumpecker, left Bird's Point, near Cairo, yesterday continuing a raft trip down the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers.

The two left from a point on the Missouri River between Jefferson City and Booneville Tuesday and had traveled approximately 169 miles on the Missouri River and 195 miles on the Mississippi River to Bird's Point.

In four days they expect to reach Memphis and conclude the trip.

The raft is rigged with a seven and a half horsepower motor, a rudder, a sail, rarely used because of the south wind, and three days' supply of food.

The boys built the raft from scrap lumber and 55-gallon oil drums. When they reach Memphis, they plan to give the raft to a friend.

Flood Crest Nears Glasgow

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Missouri River flood crest neared Glasgow, Mo., today, leaving a series of breaks in smaller levees along the stream.

The water reached 29.5 feet this morning at Glasgow on the east side of the river in Howard County. A crest of 30.5 feet is expected later today.

Major levees in the area are expected to handle crests of 30 feet or more, but workmen were out early today shoring up danger spots.

Meanwhile, the Grand River began falling slowly at Chillicothe after reaching a crest of 33.10 feet, the fourth highest on record. This morning the level there was down to 32.50.

Most of the levees along the Grand in the Chillicothe area were breached.

By GEORGE MCARTHUR

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Marines battled Communist troops today at two points south of Da Nang. The war's tempo rose again after a lull reflected by the fact American combat casualties last week were the lowest in nearly two months.

A Marine spokesman said a battalion of the 5th Marine Regiment fought a Communist force of undetermined size that had pounced on two or three Leatherneck platoons with heavy mortar and automatic weapons fire 25 miles south of Da Nang.

There was no announcement of casualties on either side.

Elements of the 7th Marine Regiment battled about 60 uniformed Viet Cong in Operation Arizona, 14 miles southwest of Da Nang. The Marines, saying nothing about any losses of their own, reported killing 15 of the Viet Cong.

A hard-core Communist battalion of about 500 men was cut to pieces in the Mekong River delta Wednesday by U.S. helicopter gunships and artillery and a crack South Vietnamese division.

The South Vietnamese said 211 of the Communists were killed, 17 were captured and many more wounded in a blistering battle in which the Red commander was bested by the battle-tested Vietnamese 21st Division.

As the two-week lull in the ground war broke, another Red battalion of about 500 men fell on an American company in the

Hearnes to Talk to Electric Cooperative

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes will address the Scott-New Madrid - Mississippi Rural Electric Cooperative at its 30th annual meeting at the Armory June 27. Four directors will be elected.

A crowd of 1,500 to 2,000 is expected for the meeting which will begin after registration at 10 a.m., with President Ernest Moxley, Charleston, presiding.

Hearnes will speak at 2 p.m.

In addition to the three counties, parts of Cape Girardeau, Bollinger and Stoddard Counties are served by the cooperative, which has a membership of 10,500.

In the morning session the minutes will be read by the secretary, Mrs. Mary Lou Schneider of Matthews.

The nominating committee will recommend re-election of four board members, whose three-year terms will expire. They are Jesse Bennett, Bloomfield; Alwin Gasser, E. S. Nelson, Wyatt, and Tom Moore, Matthews.

Members of the committee are, Orval Shoe, Wyatt; Robert Crow, Dexter, chairman; Mrs. Schneider, Gilbert Spears, Bell City; William K. Blue, Bloomfield; Roy Burke, Charleston; and Henry Voshage, Jackson.

Stands will be provided on the grounds for sandwiches and refreshments.

In a business meeting at 1 p.m. new federal legislation affecting rural electric cooperatives will be discussed. The purpose of the legislation Manager James C. Stephenson said, "is to provide banking credit for the cooperatives and expand the lines to take care of additional air-conditioners, irrigations, irrigation and other electrical loads." Loans would be made from a federal electric bank under the proposal.

Warren E. Hearnes

Afternoon entertainment will include Glen Hall at the organ; the Austin acrobatic family; the globe-trotting Grimaldis family with clown acts, and Billy Papon, master of ceremonies, pantominist and harmonica player.

The entertainment will be furnished by the Missouri Electric Caravan, which will supply gents, chairs and stage as well as the entertainers.

A refrigerator and air conditioner as well as small electric appliances will be given away as door and attendance prizes.

Displays of appliances, farm implements and automobiles will be on the grounds.

Following adjournment, the board will meet at the cooperatives' office on East Malone, to reorganize and elect officers.

Thant Begins Poll

By WILLIAM N. OATS

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — An emergency session of the U.N. General Assembly, requested by the Soviet Union to discuss the Middle East war, appeared assured today on the basis of early replies to a poll being taken by Secretary-General U Thant.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
NEWSPAPERS, THEIR USE AND PRESERVATION

The first of five workshops designed to help elementary and secondary schools improve their instruction through regular use of the daily newspaper in the classroom will be held at the University of Iowa, June 18-30. The two-week sessions are sponsored in this country by the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the National Council for the Social Studies.

The second will be held at the University of California, Los Angeles, June 25-July 7; the third at Syracuse University, July 9-21, and the fourth at the University of Georgia, July 23-Aug. 4. A fifth, sponsored by the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association, will be held at the University of Waterloo, Ont., July 23-29.

These will not be journalism seminars. Stanford Smith, general manger of the ANPA Foundation, says: "The focus of this program is to develop critical readers and better citizens, rather than to train writers."

In a somewhat related development, the proposed "Failing Newspaper Act" (S 1312) is beginning to move in the U.S. Senate. This would partially relieve newspapers from the antitrust laws by allowing two of them to use the same plant and business offices so long as they remained corporately and editorially separate.

The measure arises from a Justice Department suit against two Tucson newspapers which have been operating jointly since 1940. Papers which have combined plants in other cities are threatened - the cities include San Francisco, Honolulu, Evansville, Ind., Fort Wayne, Shreveport, Albuquerque, Tulsa, Franklin and Oil City, Pa., Nashville, El Paso, Salt Lake City, and Charleston, W. Va.

Hearings by the Senate Antitrust subcommittee are slated for late June. In 1954 there were 106 cities with separately owned daily newspapers. In 1964 there were approximately 66 such cities.

'DISTINCTION' FOR MISSOURI

Missouri now has the "distinction" of being one of two states in the nation with a United States Senator under investigation by the Senate Ethics Committee.

It is a most dubious distinction.

The Ethics Committee has already started a check into the wondrous ways of our junior Senator, Edward Vaughn Long of Bowling Green, a sometime-lawyer who has represented this state in the Congress since the death of Thomas C. Hennings.

But Missouri has not been all that Senator Long represented, for as a lawyer, he has also represented some law clients in close cooperation with St. Louis criminal attorney Morris Shenker.

So valuable were Senator Long's legal talents that the Shenker law firm, which represents such luminaries as James Riddle Hoffa and Lawrence Callahan of the St. Louis Steamfitters union, paid our junior Senator $48,000 over just one 24-month period.

Most lawyers outside of Congress would be happy with such fees and most would have to spend every waking moment to earn this kind of money.

But Senator Long literally earned the fees with one hand tied behind his back, as supposedly he was also serving in the Congress, assisting the nearly five million citizens of Missouri, and at the same time serving as chairman of a special wiretapping subcomittee. In addition, he spent his spare moments writing a book, "The Intruders," that has just been published.

Our junior Senator is, indeed, a busy man.

But now the citizens of Missouri must watch as the Senate Ethics Committee investigates the activities of one of their elected representatives. And now we know how the citizens of Connecticut felt as Thomas Dodd was under investigation.

Putting it mildly, the investigation does not give Missourians much room for state pride in one of its elected representatives to the federal Congress.

Esquire Harrison observed that an interruption is the best way to make a long story short.

With spring brightening the countryside in most of the nation, more and more cars will be taking to the open road in the months ahead.

Driving for pleasure is probably the nation's most popular pastime, with good reason.

But that inviting and peaceful-looking country road may be a highway that leads straight to the cemetery.

Rural two-lane highways are the most dangerous in the nation, accident statistics show.

The reasons are many: narrow lanes; poor pavement; inadequate, unsafe design of the roadway, and the absence of standard, well-maintained and uniform traffic signs.

Recently, safety experts have zeroed in on yet another cause of accidents on rural roads. High-speed autos often share the roadway with slow-moving vehicles, chiefly tractors and other farm equipment.

There are, by conservative estimates, 12 million slow-moving vehicles that operate regularly on the nation's highways. A slow-moving vehicle (SMV) is defined as one that travels at speeds of less than 25 miles an hour.

In a typical year, such vehicles are involved in 7,000 to 8,000 accidents, including about 100 fatalities and 1,600 to 1,800 non-fatal accidents. The total cost of such mishaps is estimated at $9 million annually.

Researchers studying the problem have concluded that the drivers of other vehicles need a unique warning device to alert them to the presence of a slow-moving vehicle.

To solve the problem, professors at Ohio State University developed a SMV emblem that now has been adopted as a standard by the National Safety Council, the American Society of Agricultural Engineers and other safety groups.

The emblem consists of a 16-inch-wide triangle with a yellow-orange fluorescent center and a red reflective border. The center portion "glows" in daylight. After dark, the border, the same material used on reflective license plates and traffic signs, is visible at 2,000 feet in the headlights of a car.

"See this - slow down - that's the simple message explains one safety expert.

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks that bald men get tired of hearing:

"Hi, there, cueball!"

"Have you read any good hair-raising mysteries lately, Elmer?"

"Cheer up, old man. They say that in a million years or so everybody will be bald. If you can just hold out until then, you'll have plenty of company."

"Well, hair today, gone tomorrow."

"The big thing that puzzles me is how he tells where his forehead ends and his back bone begins."

"Of course, you could grow a crewcut beard, Elmer, but that would only make you look like you had your head screwed on your neck upside down."

"He doesn't have hair for the same reason grass doesn't grow on a busy street. It can't get up through the concrete.

"Don't tell me that's Elmer K. Bugby. Why, in high school he had the longest, curliest hair in our class. All the girls envied him."

"Yeah, that's him. Us kids used to sing "On Top of Old Baldy" everytime he went by with his wife. Now he pays us each a dime a week not to do it any more."

"There have been a lot of famous bald men in history, Elmer. Lemme see now. Ther was Socrates and Julius Caesar and- uh-well, I guess that's all I can think of offhand."

THE CHOICE IS OURS

No editorial embellishment is needed for the following program for combatting "crime and chaos in our land," set forth in a recent issue of the F.B.I. Law Enforcement Bulletin. The author was J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Bureau.

"I sincerely believe:

"That we must reawaken in every citizen a fierce devotion to supremacy of law and equal justice;

"That we must forever renounce the idiocy that associates glamor and heroism with law-breakers;

"That all criminals must be brought to the bar of justice for realistic handling, not merely maudlin sympathy;

"That means must be provided to defeat the enemies within our borders who are puppets of enemies from without;

"That we must insure by every lawful means that differences are resolved in the courtroom, not in the street;

"That we must adamantly insist that each individual is held responsible for the natural and probable consequences of his acts.

"Let the hoodlum, the racist, the demagogue, and the exponent of anarchy know that the great, quiet power of this Nation lies in her law-abiding citizens, and they will stomach no more. The choice is ours. The time is now."

Precisely because he holds these views, the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been Number One on the Hate Parade of the bubbleheads and eggheads, Communists and mobsters for many years. Together, the Hoover-haters exercise tremendous influence. They have destroyed a lot of good people in our time.

The fact that they haven't been able to get J. Edgar Hoover is cause for thanksgiving. And reason for hope.

It certainly is not because those communications media which "associate glamour and heroism with law-breakers" haven't tried.

THEY WERE THERE

Two U.S. pilots who have flown many missions in Vietnam have publicly accused the Pentagon of sending combat pilots on missions against worthless targets, and with far less than a full load of bombs and ammunition, just to give the "statiscal" impression that a great deal of pressure is being put on the enemy regime in North Vietnam.

One of the pilots, whose letter was published in the authoritative magazine Aviation Week, remains anonymous, presumably because he is still on active duty and flying such missions. The other identified himself as Navy Lt. Norde Wilson, who resigned from the service after flying 125 missions in Vietnam.

In a letter to Congressman William E. Minshall, of Ohio, Lt. Wilson said that many other pilots are planning to quit because they are fed up with the "weak wills" and "blundering" of civilian officials in Washington, and because many of the targets assigned for attack are not worth "any one of our lives or planes."

It isn't only pilots who are called upon to risk their lives on pointless and futile missions, and evidently it is not only pilots who are fed up. The Marine Corps announced on October 17 that "about 500" resignation requests from commissioned officers were being "deferred" because the officers have skills which are vitally needed in the Vietnam war.

What good does it do to retain in service men with "vitally needed" skills of war, if they are not permitted to use those skills to the fullest?

The sending of a combat pilot on a mission which may cost his life, without fully equipping him to inflict the greatest possible injury upon that enemy, has to be a crime. For the sending of ten planes - and crews - to do the job that five could do, means exposing crewmen and planes needlessly to the flak and rockets of the enemy. Somehow it seems like a court martial offense, though it is quite conceivable that the people are beyond the reach of a court martial.

We've seen no more eloquent indictment of the conduct of the war in Vietnam than the report that 500 Marine Corps officers want to resign.

And if that doesn't shake you too, then tell it to the Marines.

H. L. Hunt Says

U.S. ALLY IN VIETNAM

It is significant that the nation giving the United States the most help in resisting communist aggression in South Vietnam is an Asian country which itself has been the victim of such aggression. This is the Republic of Korea, the southern half of the Korean peninsula.

South Koreans know from first-hand experience intentions in Southeast Asia. South Korea accordingly has sent some 46,000 troops and 10,000 technicians to South Vietnam. This is an impressive contribution for a nation of only 28 million people. The Korean troops have proved themselves brave fighters in Vietnam.

There is nothing unfashionable about being an anti-communist in South Korea. Homes bear signs on the doors showing that the residents are members of the Anti-Communist League. The Asian Freedom Center in Seoul, the capital city, is an anti-communist training school. School children are given courses in "moral education," in which the evils of communism are made abundantly clear.

The people of South Korea know that the communist threat to their property and lives is very real and very close. Just across the Demilitarized Zone dividing the country, the communists of North Korea look with envy and hate on the economic growth of the southern area where private initiative is encouraged. South Korea has to keep up its guard. The country maintains a strong military defense. The people are determined not to lose the freedom won at the cost of great suffering. They are anti-comminist all the way. HLH.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON - As a result of the Dodd censure debate and the Bobby Baker scandal, the American people is inclined to think that Washington is riddled with corruption and conflicts of interest. My own observation, over a period of many years, is that the United States Senate can stack up in honesty with the directors of any business corporation and that our Federal government has one of the highest standards for honesty in the world.

In no country, with the possible exception of some British and Scandinavian nations, is there such a high standard of honesty among government bureaucrats as exists in the Johnson administration today.

The General Services Administration is a case in point. These officials handle billions in government contracts, millions in the purchases of land and building construction. They negotiate with private enterprise, are completely frank and honest, get the best deal possible for the United States government. They cannot be influenced, and most private businessmen who work with them don't dry.

Not long ago a group of government officials in the District of Columbia, several of them Negro, considered filing for a public service television license in order to promote education and better race relations in the nation's capital.

They knew that more than 100 members of Congress owned radio and TV stations and that there was no clear rule against a government official going into the TV business. After all, the president of the United States, when a senator, was very active in television.

NEW ETHICAL STANDARDS

But as a precaution they checked with John Macy, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, to see if there was any conflict. Macy saw no direct conflict but advised that the officials lean over backward and not make the TV application. They followed his advice.

This reveals the fact that the Johnson administration, without fanfare, has set up a tough and unprecedented system to prevent conflicts of interest. When a Federal appointee takes office, he files with the Civil Service Commission a list of his property, stocks, bonds, etc. This can be checked against his net worth when he leaves office to see if he has benefited during public service.

This is the first time in history that such a system has been carried out by the executive branch of the government. It was a similar proposal, made in the Truman administration, that caused Attorney General Howard McGrath to resign. Such a system has also been proposed in the House and Senate, but always turned down. A few senators and congressmen do file their net worth voluntarily, such as Wayne Morse, D-Ore., and about 20 members of the House. But the great majority do not.

However, the Johnson administration has very quietly put the system into effect.

JACK-THE-ADMENDMENT MILLER

Sen. Jack Miller, R-Iowa, is such an eager-beaver in amending pending bills that he keeps his own typewriter in the Senate Republican cloakroom just off the Senate floor in order to dash off amendments with greater facility.

This has caused frowns from some Republican colleagues because it prolongs debate. They also consider some of his amendments irrelevant, and have dubbed their colleague from Iowa "Jack-the-amendment Miller."

On June 6 when the Senate Republican policy committee met at luncheon, someone called attention to the fact that it was Sen. Miller's birthday, and moved to express the felicitations of the Senate Republican Policy Committee.

But Sen. Thurston Morton had another idea.

"Let's offer an amendment that his birthday shall be on June 7 instead of June 6," proposed the Senator from Kentucky.

ARAB SOCIAL WHIRL

Nasser's campaign to persuade Arab nations to sever diplomatic relations with the United States will put quite a dent in the Washington social whirl.

There was a time when Arab envoys didn't rate socially. They just weren't seen at the best parties. But in recent years they have almost led the social swim. Their shish-kabob and belly-dancing parties have been the talk of Washington. The Ambassador of Kuwait, Talat Al-Ghoussein, and his beautiful wife gave some of the Capital's swankiest parites, and the Ambassador was also famous for taking poker money away from such redoubtables as Art Buchwald and David Brinkley.

Ambassador Ahmed Osman of Morocco and his wife, Princess Lalla Nouzha, threw their embassy open to raise money for many charitable causes.

Many of these embassies will not be closed. In fact, Shen Ambassador Amin Ahmad Hussein of Sudan scheduled an art exhibit last week, suddenly he got word that diplomatic relations were severed. He was being recalled. So he tacked a note on the door of the exhibit: "In view of the Middle East war, the reception planned for this evening will not take place. Visitors are welcome to come in and view the exhibit and discuss the present crisis."

The dapper and brilliant Algerian Ambassador, Cherif Guellal, a bachelor, also is being recalled.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

THE HOSTS WITH THE MOST

No Social List Complete Without Its Bevy of Labor Leaders

Washington, D.C.: -- It's a good life some labor chiefs are leading in high society among poor and rich millionaires alike. These labor leaders are proving that politics can be a great social leveler and that they can be good mixers in any great society -- Democratic or Republican.

Just the other Friday night peppery Dave Dubinsky, the ladies garment workers animated symbol, was rushing out of the White House. He bumped into an old friend -- Nelson Rockefeller -- who asked "Dave" whither was he hastening. The needle trades' "D.D." ebulliently greeted Nelson and "Happy" Rockefeller and replied he had to catch the last air shuttle back to New York.

Nelson observed as how he had his own plane waiting. So the three good comrades flew back. The governor and his lady were bound for Westchester airport (N.Y.), but did put down in New York City so Dubinsky could get off.

They had spent that evening, June 2, as President Johnson's guests, along with some 125 others at the State banquet honoring Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson. When Dubinsky, on the receiving line before dinner, got to Mr. Wilson, the President began introducing the veteran union chief to the Laborite Prime Minister. But Mr. Wilson grinned and said, "Oh, we're old friends." The only other labor leader at the White House that evening was another old friend -- George Meany. But still another of the Prime Minister's friends, Walter Reuther, was among those who did not come to dinner. He was not invited.

And so it goes. The previous night the President had invited folks in to break bread with a good ally, Australia's Prime Minister Harold Holt. That night the building service employees president Dave Sullivan and the shipbuilding union's Johnny Grogan mixed with the great society.

Labor is part of the establishment now. No president would think of a soiree or state affair without them. It's just a matter of matching rank with rank.

When, some days later, America's African friend, Dr. Hastings K. Banda, president of Malawi, came to lunch, so did a bunch of the labor boys from across the tracks -- Bill Buck of the firemen, Bill Gillen of the insurance workers, Bill Pachler of the utility workers, Al Heaps of the retail and wholesale workers, and Al Rohan of the printing pressmen.

They come, of course, to mix with the great, and because the White House is where the action is and because it is politic to accept and politic to invite them. They have come of age here in the great halls of London and never is it forgotten that one of them speaks for the U.S. in the congress of the world -- the U.N.

Nor is it the White House alone in which they mingle with high society or, rather, society joins with them. Exactly a week after the White House banquet for the Queen's First Minister, Governor Nelson Rockefeller and his lady threw the party of the year up at the family estate in Pocantico Hills. The governor later said he had invited in mostly his own personal friends from the arts, the sciences and the rest of our classless society to help Mrs. Happy Rockefeller celebrate her 41st birthday on the lawn under a vast tent.

There was the rough-hewn Pete Brennan, leader of New York State's Building and Construction Trades. He enjoyed every bit of it in black tie, sitting there alongside Mrs. Ethel Kennedy, Laurance Rockefeller and Sen. John Sherman Cooper. And there was the perpetually motioned Harry Van Arsdale, the labor leader's labor leader, head of the 1.2 million-member New York City Central Labor Council. He sat with the head of a national radio and TV broadcasting chain, Mrs. Robert Wagner and some Broadway talent.

Only the night before, the New York State Republican Party had virtually taken over the Waldorf-Astoria for a victory celebration of some 5,500 guests willing to pay $150 each. Hundreds of labor officials from some 40 unions crowded into the special labor reception room to shake the governor's hand and be photographed with him.

Of course, the national nominating conventions and the presidential campaigns are but a year off. But the labor leaders would be coming to dinner and surging into the soirees even if no one was running for anything.

It's a long way from Pearl Mesta. The host with the most is the party-giver with the new class -- the men of labor -- amply represented. Even the poorest millionaire knows that.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
NEWSPAPERS, THEIR USE AND PRESERVATION

The first of five workshops designed to help elementary and secondary schools improve their instruction through regular use of the daily newspaper in the classroom will be held at the University of Iowa, June 18-30. The two-week sessions are sponsored in this country by the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the National Council for the Social Studies.

The second will be held at the University of California, Los Angeles, June 25-July 7; the third at Syracuse University, July 9-21, and the fourth at the University of Georgia, July 23-Aug. 4. A fifth, sponsored by the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association, will be held at the University of Waterloo, Ont., July 23-29.

These will not be journalism seminars. Stanford Smith, general manger of the ANPA Foundation, says: "The focus of this program is to develop critical readers and better citizens, rather than to train writers."

In a somewhat related development, the proposed "Failing Newspaper Act" (S 1312) is beginning to move in the U.S. Senate. This would partially relieve newspapers from the antitrust laws by allowing two of them to use the same plant and business offices so long as they remained corporately and editorially separate.

The measure arises from a Justice Department suit against two Tucson newspapers which have been operating jointly since 1940. Papers which have combined plants in other cities are threatened - the cities include San Francisco, Honolulu, Evansville, Ind., Fort Wayne, Shreveport, Albuquerque, Tulsa, Franklin and Oil City, Pa., Nashville, El Paso, Salt Lake City, and Charleston, W. Va.

Hearings by the Senate Antitrust subcommittee are slated for late June. In 1954 there were 106 cities with separately owned daily newspapers. In 1964 there were approximately 66 such cities.

"Well, hair today, gone tomorrow."

"The big thing that puzzles me is how he tells where his forehead ends and his back bone begins."

"Of course, you could grow a crewcut beard, Elmer, but that would only make you look like you had your head screwed on your neck upside down."

"He doesn't have hair for the same reason grass doesn't grow on a busy street. It can't get up through the concrete.

"Don't tell me that's Elmer K. Bugby. Why, in high school he had the longest, curliest hair in our class. All the girls envied him."

"I forget your name, old boy, but the fuzz is familiar."

"As your friend for 30 years would I lie to you, Elmer? I swear it's beginning to grow back in."

"Just trim it on the sides, sir? There doesn't seem much to do-uh-on the top."

"When he dozes in a chair on the front porch, the flies use his head for a landing strip."

"It makes him kinda look like Yul Brynner—that is, if you don't look too closely."

"According to some scientists, baldness is a sign of great virility. If that's really true, Elmer must be even more masculine than Tarzan."

"I hear he combs with a washcloth."

"It's nice to have Elmer along on our camping trips. In the morning, when we want to shave, we just wait until the sun comes up and use his head for a mirror."

"How did it start in your case? Was your great-granddad scalped by the Indians?"

"Yeah, that's him. Us kids used to sing "On Top of Old Baldy" everytime he went by with his wife. Now he pays us each a dime a week not to do it any more."

"There have been a lot of famous bald men in history, Elmer. Lemme see now. Ther was Socrates and Julius Caesar and-uh-well, I guess that's all I can think of offhand."

THE CHOICE IS OURS

No editorial embellishment is needed for the following program for combatting "crime and chaos in our land," set forth in a recent issue of the F.B.I. Law Enforcement Bulletin. The author was J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Bureau.

"I sincerely believe:

"That we must reawaken in every citizen a fierce devotion to supremacy of law and equal justice;

"That we must forever renounce the idiocy that associates glamor and heroism with law-breakers;

"That all criminals must be brought to the bar of justice for realistic handling, not merely maudlin sympathy;

"That means must be provided to defeat the enemies within our borders who are puppets of enemies from without;

"That we must insure by every lawful means that differences are resolved in the courtroom, not in the street;

"That we must adamantly insist that each individual is held responsible for the natural and probable consequences of his acts.

"Let the hoodlum, the racist, the demagogue, and the exponent of anarchy know that the great, quiet power of this Nation lies in her law-abiding citizens, and they will stomach no more. The choice is ours. The time is now."

Precisely because he holds these views, the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been Number One on the Hate Parade of the bubbleheads and eggheads, Communists and mobsters for many years. Together, the Hoover-haters exercise tremendous influence. They have destroyed a lot of good people in our time.

The fact that they haven't been able to get J. Edgar Hoover is cause for thanksgiving. And reason for hope.

It certainly is not because those communications media which "associate glamour and heroism with law-breakers" haven't tried.

A city that contains a few bold, courageous and brilliant men will succeed in spite of natural handicaps.

THEY WERE THERE

Two U.S. pilots who have flown many missions in Vietnam have publicly accused the Pentagon of sending combat pilots on missions against worthless targets, and with far less than a full load of bombs and ammunition, just to give the "statiscal" impression that a great deal of pressure is being put on the enemy regime in North Vietnam.

One of the pilots, whose letter was published in the authoritative magazine Aviation Week, remains anonymous, presumably because he is still on active duty and flying such missions. The other identified himself as Navy Lt. Norde Wilson, who resigned from the service after flying 125 missions in Vietnam.

In a letter to Congressman William E. Minshall, of Ohio, Lt. Wilson said that many other pilots are planning to quit because they are fed up with the "weak wills" and "blundering" of civilian officials in Washington, and because many of the targets assigned for attack are not worth "any one of our lives or planes."

It isn't only pilots who are called upon to risk their lives on pointless and futile missions, and evidently it is not only pilots who are fed up. The Marine Corps announced on October 17 that "about 500" resignation requests from commissioned officers were being "deferred" because the officers have skills which are vitally needed in the Vietnam war.

What good does it do to retain in service men with "vitally needed" skills of war, if they are not permitted to use those skills to the fullest?

The sending of a combat pilot on a mission which may cost his life, without fully equipping him to influct the greatest possible injury upon that enemy, has to be a crime. For the sending of ten planes - and crews - to do the job that five could do, means exposing crewmen and planes needlessly to the flak and rockets of the enemy. Somehow it seems like a court martial offense, though it is quite conceivable that the people are beyond the reach of a court martial.

We've seen no more eloquent indictment of the conduct of the war in Vietnam than the report that 500 Marine Corps officers want to resign.

And if that doesn't shake you too, then tell it to the Marines.

Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, NATO Supreme Commander, one of America's most brilliant military figures, arrived the other day in the Belgian village of Casteau, outside Brussels, to lay the foundations stone of the new NATO headquarters.

The village band, on hand for the ceremony, opened with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Thinking he was listening to the Belgian national anthem, Lemnitzer came to attention, snapped off a quick salute. Immediately others in the ceremony followed suit. Orders have now gone out to all NATO officers to recognize the Belgian national anthem and to familiarize themselves with Beethoven's works.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON - As a result of the Dodd censure debate and the Bobby Baker scandal, the American people is inclined to think that Washington is riddled with corruption and conflicts of interest. My own observation, over a period of many years, is that the United States Senate can stack up in honesty with the directors of any business corporation and that our Federal government has one of the highest standards for honesty in the world.

In no country, with the possible exception of some British and Scandinavian nations, is there such a high standard of honesty among government bureaucrats as exists in the Johnson administration today.

The General Services Administration is a case in point. These officials handle billions in government contracts, millions in the purchases of land and building construction. They negotiate with private enterprise, are completely frank and honest, get the best deal possible for the United States government. They cannot be influenced, and most private businessmen who work with them don't dry.

Not long ago a group of government officials in the District of Columbia, several of them Negro, considered filing for a public service television license in order to promote education and better race relations in the nation's capital.

They knew that more than 100 members of Congress owned radio and TV stations and that there was no clear rule against a government official going into the TV business. After all, the president of the United States, when a senator, was very active in television.

NEW ETHICAL STANDARDS

But as a precaution they checked with John Macy, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, to see if there was any conflict. Macy saw no direct conflict but advised that the officials lean over backward and not make the TV application. They followed his advice.

This reveals the fact that the Johnson administration, without fanfare, has set up a tough and unprecedented system to prevent conflicts of interest. When a Federal appointee takes office, he files with the Civil Service Commission a list of his property, stocks, bonds, etc. This can be checked against his net worth when he leaves office to see if he has benefited during public service.

This is the first time in history that such a system has been carried out by the executive branch of the government. It was a similar proposal, made in the Truman administration, that caused Attorney General Howard McGrath to resign. Such a system has also been proposed in the House and Senate, but always turned down. A few senators and congressmen do file their net worth voluntarily, such as Wayne Morse, D-Ore., and about 20 members of the House. But the great majority do not.

However, the Johnson administration has very quietly put the system into effect.

JACK-THE-ADMENDMENT MILLER

Sen. Jack Miller, R-Iowa, is such an eager-beaver in amending pending bills that he keeps his own typewriter in the Senate Republican cloakroom just off the Senate floor in order to dash off amendments with greater facility.

This has caused frowns from some Republican colleagues because it prolongs debate. They also consider some of his amendments irrelevant, and have dubbed their colleague from Iowa "Jack-the-amendment Miller."

On June 6 when the Senate Republican policy committee met at luncheon, someone called attention to the fact that it was Sen. Miller's birthday, and moved to express the felicitations of the Senate Republican Policy Committee.

But Sen. Thurston Morton had another idea.

"Let's offer an amendment that his birthday shall be on June 7 instead of June 6," proposed the Senator from Kentucky.

ARAB SOCIAL WHIRL

Nasser's campaign to persuade Arab nations to sever diplomatic relations with the United States will put quite a dent in the Washington social whirl.

There was a time when Arab envoys didn't rate socially. They just weren't seen at the best parties. But in recent years they have almost led the social swim. Their shish-kabob and belly-dancing parties have been the talk of Washington. The Ambassador of Kuwait, Talat Al-Ghoussein, and his beautiful wife gave some of the Capital's swankiest parites, and the Ambassador was also famous for taking poker money away from such redoubtables as Art Buchwald and David Brinkley.

Ambassador Ahmed Osman of Morocco and his wife, Princess Lalla Nouzha, threw their embassy open to raise money for many charitable causes.

Many of these embassies will not be closed. In fact, Shen Ambassador Amin Ahmad Hussein of Sudan scheduled an art exhibit last week, suddenly he got word that diplomatic relations were severed. He was being recalled. So he tacked a note on the door of the exhibit: "In view of the Middle East war, the reception planned for this evening will not take place. Visitors are welcome to come in and view the exhibit and discuss the present crisis."

The dapper and brilliant Algerian Ambassador, Cherif Guellal, a bachelor, also is being recalled.

H. L. Hunt Says

U.S. ALLY IN VIETNAM

It is significant that the nation giving the United States the most help in resisting communist aggression in South Vietnam is an Asian country which itself has been the victim of such aggression. This is the Republic of Korea, the southern half of the Korean peninsula.

South Koreans know from first-hand experience intentions in Southeast Asia. South Korea accordingly has sent some 46,000 troops and 10,000 technicians to South Vietnam. This is an impressive contribution for a nation of only 28 million people. The Korean troops have proved themselves brave fighters in Vietnam.

There is nothing unfashionable about being an anti-communist in South Korea. Homes bear signs on the doors showing that the residents are members of the Anti-Communist League. The Asian Freedom Center in Seoul, the capital city, is an anti-communist training school. School children are given courses in "moral education," in which the evils of communism are made abundantly clear.

The people of South Korea know that the communist threat to their property and lives is very real and very close. Just across the Demilitarized Zone dividing the country, the communists of North Korea look with envy and hate on the economic growth of the southern area where private initiative is encouraged. South Korea has to keep up its guard. The country maintains a strong military defense. The people are determined not to lose the freedom won at the cost of great suffering. They are anti-comminist all the way. HLH.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

THE HOSTS WITH THE MOST

No Social List Complete Without Its Bevy of Labor Leaders

Washington, D.C.: -- It's a good life some labor chiefs are leading in high society among poor and rich millionaires alike. These labor leaders are proving that politics can be a great social leveler and that they can be good mixers in any great society -- Democratic or Republican.

Just the other Friday night peppery Dave Dubinsky, the ladies garment workers animated symbol, was rushing out of the White House. He bumped into an old friend -- Nelson Rockefeller -- who asked "Dave" whither was he hastening. The needle trades' "D.D." ebulliently greeted Nelson and "Happy" Rockefeller and replied he had to catch the last air shuttle back to New York.

Nelson observed as how he had his own plane waiting. So the three good comrades flew back. The governor and his lady were bound for Westchester airport (N.Y.), but did put down in New York City so Dubinsky could get off.

They had spent that evening, June 2, as President Johnson's guests, along with some 125 others at the State banquet honoring Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson. When Dubinsky, on the receiving line before dinner, got to Mr. Wilson, the President began introducing the veteran union chief to the Laborite Prime Minister. But Mr. Wilson grinned and said, "Oh, we're old friends." The only other labor leader at the White House that evening was another old friend -- George Meany. But still another of the Prime Minister's friends, Walter Reuther, was among those who did not come to dinner. He was not invited.

And so it goes. The previous night the President had invited folks in to break bread with a good ally, Australia's Prime Minister Harold Holt. That night the building service employees president Dave Sullivan and the shipbuilding union's Johnny Grogan mixed with the great society.

Labor is part of the establishment now. No president would think of a soiree or state affair without them. It's just a matter of matching rank with rank.

When, some days later, America's African friend, Dr. Hastings K. Banda, president of Malawi, came to lunch, so did a bunch of the labor boys from across the tracks -- Bill Buck of the firemen, Bill Gillen of the insurance workers, Bill Pachler of the utility workers, Al Heaps of the retail and wholesale workers, and Al Rohan of the printing pressmen.

They come, of course, to mix with the great, and because the White House is where the action is and because it is politic to accept and politic to invite them. They have come of age here in the great halls of London and never is it forgotten that one of them speaks for the U.S. in the congress of the world -- the U.N.

Nor is it the White House alone in which they mingle with high society or, rather, society joins with them. Exactly a week after the White House banquet for the Queen's First Minister, Governor Nelson Rockefeller and his lady threw the party of the year up at the family estate in Pocantico Hills. The governor later said he had invited in mostly his own personal friends from the arts, the sciences and the rest of our classless society to help Mrs. Happy Rockefeller celebrate her 41st birthday on the lawn under a vast tent.

There was the rough-hewn Pete Brennan, leader of New York State's Building and Construction Trades. He enjoyed every bit of it in black tie, sitting there alongside Mrs. Ethel Kennedy, Laurance Rockefeller and Sen. John Sherman Cooper. And there was the perpetually motioned Harry Van Arsdale, the labor leader's labor leader, head of the 1.2 million-member New York City Central Labor Council. He sat with the head of a national radio and TV broadcasting chain, Mrs. Robert Wagner and some Broadway talent.

Only the night before, the New York State Republican Party had virtually taken over the Waldorf-Astoria for a victory celebration of some 5,500 guests willing to pay $150 each. Hundreds of labor officials from some 40 unions crowded into the special labor reception room to shake the governor's hand and be photographed with him.

Of course, the national nominating conventions and the presidential campaigns are but a year off. But the labor leaders would be coming to dinner and surging into the soirees even if no one was running for anything.

It's a long way from Pearl Mesta. The host with the most is the party-giver with the new class -- the men of labor -- amply represented. Even the poorest millionaire knows that.

L/Cpl. and Mrs. Gary Williams

Miss Judith Griffey Pledges Vows With Gary Williams

Miss Judith Griffey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren H. Griffey, 300 Broadway, became the bride of L/Cpl. Gary Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil D. Williams, 722 East Kathleen, May 28 at 8 p.m. at the home of the bride's parents.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edward Fowler, Methodist minister from Bernie. Arrangements of Queen Anne's lace and daisies graced the fireplace mantle, the background for vows.

To the strains of "The Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin", the bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of French designed scalloped Chantilly lace. The close fitted bodice featured a sabrina neckline. Tapered sleeves came to lily points over the hands. The bouffant skirt featured cascades of scalloped lace ruffles and was worn over a hoop.

A double tiara of seed pearls secured her elbow-length, two tiered veil of silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of roses and orange blossoms with white satin streamers tied in lovers' knots.

Miss Lana Becking of Bernie, served as maid of honor. She wore a sheath frock of navy blue trimmed with white lace and carried a nosegay of miniature tangerine colored roses.

Attending Williams as best man was the bride's brother, Thomas Griffey.

Miss Griffey, mother of the bride, wore a tangerine sheath dress with tucks adorning the front and wore a corsage of yellow roses tinged with tangerine. Mrs. Williams, mother of the groom, wore for her son's wedding an aqua and white jersey dress with a short jacket and her corsage was tangerine colored roses.

Men of the wedding party wore white rose boutonnieres with their suits except the groom who wore his Marine uniform.

A reception was held. The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a three tiered wedding cake decorated with red roses and white bells and topped with the traditional miniature bride and groom. On each side of the cake were white candleholders with red candles. Red punch was served from a crystal punch service by Miss Pat Gray and Miss Becking served the wedding cake.

The bridal couple left for a short honeymoon then left for California where the groom is serving with the Marines.

Pat Nugents Awaiting Arrival of First Child

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Luci Johnson Nugent shopped at a supermarket for family groceries and her mother says she's "singing like a lark" as the birth of her first baby approaches.

"Luci has everything in readiness," Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson said today.

She said her 19-year-old daughter even went shopping for Father's Day presents.

Luci's father, the President, is expected here this weekend to join members of the family who are stork-watching. And, of course, there was Luci's husband, Patrick J. Nugent, 23, expecting to be a father by Father's Day, June 18.

The date the baby is expected is Saturday, June 17, but there are some doubts that the birth would come that soon.

Luci isn't acting as though the birth is imminent, and spokesmen for the family are beginning to suggest a later date for the birth.

A steady stream of cars at the Nugents' fashionable pink brick home at 2706 Macken Drive Wednesday brought workmen, a piped music firm representative and a stream of Secret Service men.

Luci, herself, finally emerged late in the day to be driven off by a Secret Service agent to do the family shopping.

When she emerged from the supermarket about a half hour later, the President's daughter, wearing dark glasses, and a green and white polka dot tent dress, was carrying a hefty bag of groceries. She was followed by a clerk with a bagful in his arms, too. The Secret Service agent followed, watchful but empty-handed.

Mrs. Johnson said she was keeping in touch by phone and would divide her time between Pat and Luci in Austin and tending to household duties at the LBJ Ranch 65 miles away where the President was to entertain Australian Prime Minister Harold Holt this weekend.

The First Lady flew here from Washington Tuesday night and said she had dinner and "a wonderful evening" with the young Nugents.

But while Mrs. Johnson was relaying comments to the press, Luci was bent on privacy and her husband, Pat, was refusing to take any phone calls.

The main thing the Nugents and the Johnsons wanted to keep secret for now was the hospital where the President's first grandchild will be born.

Insiders now say Luci and her team of doctors — there probably will be six, including two anesthetists— prefer Seton Hospital, a five-story red brick general hospital, run by the Catholic order of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul.

In case of emergency, they will go to Brackenridge, a sprawling red-brick, city-owned hospital, the only hospital in Austin with a resident staff of doctors on 24-hour duty.

Officials at both hospitals denied they were in a stork race.

Sale Planned

The Woman's Society of Christian Service of Wesley Methodist church will sponsor a bake sale Saturday beginning at 9:30 a.m. in the Midtowner Village shopping center.

Proceeds will be used to buy choir collars.

L/Cpl. and Mrs. Gary Williams

Miss Judith Griffey Pledges Vows With Gary Williams

Miss Judith Griffey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren H. Griffey, 300 Broadway, became the bride of L/Cpl. Gary Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil D. Williams, 722 East Kathleen, May 28 at 8 p.m. at the home of the bride's parents.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edward Fowler, Methodist minister from Bernie. Arrangements of Queen Anne's lace and daisies graced the fireplace mantle, the background for vows.

To the strains of "The Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin", the bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of French designed scalloped Chantilly lace. The close fitted bodice featured a sabrina neckline. Tapered sleeves came to lily points over the hands. The bouffant skirt featured cascades of scalloped lace ruffles and was worn over a hoop.

A double tiara of seed pearls secured her elbow-length, two tiered veil of silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of roses and orange blossoms with white satin streamers tied in lovers' knots.

Miss Lana Becking of Bernie, served as maid of honor. She wore a sheath frock of navy blue trimmed with white lace and carried a nosegay of miniature tangerine colored roses.

Attending Williams as best man was the bride's brother, Thomas Griffey.

Miss Griffey, mother of the bride, wore a tangerine sheath dress with tucks adorning the front and wore a corsage of yellow roses tinged with tangerine. Mrs. Williams, mother of the groom, wore for her son's wedding an aqua and white jersey dress with a short jacket and her corsage was tangerine colored roses.

Men of the wedding party wore white rose boutonnieres with their suits except the groom who wore his Marine uniform.

A reception was held. The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a three tiered wedding cake decorated with red roses and white bells and topped with the traditional miniature bride and groom. On each side of the cake were white candleholders with red candles. Red punch was served from a crystal punch service by Miss Pat Gray and Miss Becking served the wedding cake.

The bridal couple left for a short honeymoon then left for California where the groom is serving with the Marines.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY

He carried her over the threshold,
With tender love and pride;
Twenty-five years ago tonight,
She was his blushing bride.
Good food and the years have changed them,
Their love is still sublime;
But the only way they can get through the door
Today -- is one at a time.

Pat Nugents Awaiting Arrival of First Child

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Luci Johnson Nugent shopped at a supermarket for family groceries and her mother says she's "singing like a lark" as the birth of her first baby approaches.

"Luci has everything in readiness," Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson said today.

She said her 19-year-old daughter even went shopping for Father's Day presents.

Luci's father, the President, is expected here this weekend to join members of the family who are stork-watching. And, of course, there was Luci's husband, Patrick J. Nugent, 23, expecting to be a father by Father's Day, June 18.

The date the baby is expected is Saturday, June 17, but there are some doubts that the birth would come that soon.

Luci isn't acting as though the birth is imminent, and spokesmen for the family are beginning to suggest a later date for the birth.

A steady stream of cars at the Nugents' fashionable pink brick home at 2706 Macken Drive Wednesday brought workmen, a piped music firm representative and a stream of Secret Service men.

Luci, herself, finally emerged late in the day to be driven off by a Secret Service agent to do the family shopping.

When she emerged from the supermarket about a half hour later, the President's daughter, wearing dark glasses, and a green and white polka dot tent dress, was carrying a hefty bag of groceries. She was followed by a clerk with a bagful in his arms, too. The Secret Service agent followed, watchful but empty-handed.

Mrs. Johnson said she was keeping in touch by phone and would divide her time between Pat and Luci in Austin and tending to household duties at the LBJ Ranch 65 miles away where the President was to entertain Australian Prime Minister Harold Holt this weekend.

The First Lady flew here from Washington Tuesday night and said she had dinner and "a wonderful evening" with the young Nugents.

But while Mrs. Johnson was relaying comments to the press, Luci was bent on privacy and her husband, Pat, was refusing to take any phone calls.

The main thing the Nugents and the Johnsons wanted to keep secret for now was the hospital where the President's first grandchild will be born.

Insiders now say Luci and her team of doctors — there probably will be six, including two anesthetists—prefer Seton Hospital, a five-story red brick general hospital, run by the Catholic order of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul.

In case of emergency, they will go to Brackenridge, a sprawling red-brick, city-owned hospital, the only hospital in Austin with a resident staff of doctors on 24-hour duty.

Officials at both hospitals denied they were in a stork race.

Sale Planned

The Woman's Society of Christian Service of Wesley Methodist church will sponsor a bake sale Saturday beginning at 9:30 a.m. in the Midtowner Village shopping center.

Proceeds will be used to buy choir collars.

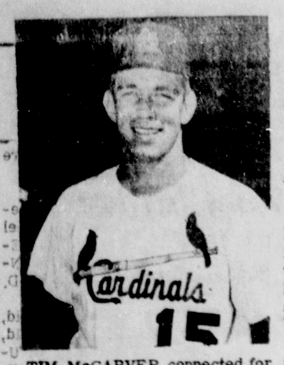
Mets Unload Against Cincinnati

Birds Flock Home As McCarver Connects



TIM McCARVER connected for a grand-slammer in the first inning of last night's baseball game against Pittsburgh, starting the St. Louis Cardinals off to a 7-4 victory. It was his sixth homer of the season.

Let's play baseball manager. It's early in the game, there are runners at second and third with a tough hitter at bat and a lesser threat on deck. You issue an intentional walk, right? Wrong.

Harry Walker of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia's Gene Mauch played the obvious strategy of the deliberate base on balls Wednesday night and both regretted it later.

Walker ordered Mike Shannon passed in the first inning against the Cardinals and then watched Tim McCarver wallop a grand slam home run that triggered St. Louis' 7-4 victory over the Pirates.

Atlanta's Joe Torre got the intentional treatment from Mauch in the fourth inning and then trotted home behind two other runners when Clete Boyer unloaded a grand slam that helped the Braves to a 16-7 triumph over the Phillies.

In other National League action, New York's Bob Shaw shut out first-place Cincinnati 4-0, Houston downed San Francisco 7-4, and Los Angeles ended an eight-game losing streak with a 4-3 victory over Chicago.

Left-hander Billy O'Dell was working for the Pirates so after Orlando Cedpda's double put runners at second and third with two out in the first, Walker ordered Shannon, a right-handed hitter, walked to pitch to lefty swinging McCarver.

The homer, on an 0-1 pitch, was McCarver's sixth this season and his third career grand slam. Cepeda drove in two more Cardinal runs later and Bob Gibson survived an 11-hit Pirate attack to go the distance for his eighth victory.

Hank Aaron's one-out double following an error put Mauch on the spot in the fourth inning of the Phillies-Braves game. He had Larry Jackson walk Torre, a much tougher hitter than Boyer, who was on deck.

The slam was the fourth in Boyer's career and his ninth home run this season. Aaron added his 17th later and Tito Francona, traded by Philadelphia to Atlanta only Sunday, socked his first against his ex-mates.

Shaw scattered six hits and Tommy Davis drove in three runs as the Mets defeated the Reds.

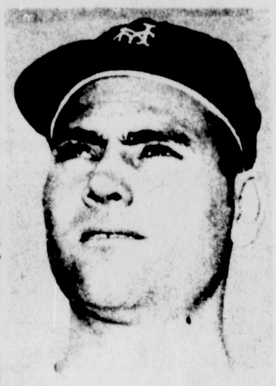
New York pushed across an unearned run driven in by Davis' sacrifice fly in the first against Jim Maloney and Shaw made it stand up until the eighth when consecutive doubles by Ken Boyer and Davis produced three more.

Houston jumped on Gaylord Perry for five straight hits and five runs in the first inning and then held off the Giants.

Jim Wynn's two-run triple and a two-run single by Bob Aspromonte were the key blows in the Astros' spurt. Aspromonte drove in two more runs with a sacrifice fly and a single as Don Wilson scattered eight hits and struck out 13 Giants.

Ron Perranoski, the Dodgers' fourth pitcher against the Cubs, got Lee Thomas to ground into a bases-loaded double playchoking off a Chicago rally in the ninth inning.

Len Gabrielson and Dodger starter Claude Osteen homered in the fourth while Ernie Banks and Ron Santo connected for Chicago.



THE METS' Bob Shaw shut out the National League leaders 4-0 last night, handing the Cincinnati Reds their second consecutive loss at the hands of the Mets.

Potlatch Wins League Opener 7-0

Manley Whitewashes Fisk

Rudy Manley hurled the Potlatch Forest Connie Mack team to its opening season baseball victory over Fisk last night at VFW stadium, pitching a no-hit, 7-0 victory.

Potlatch, in defense of its Black River conference baseball title, got into the scoring column in the first inning after Manley set the side down in order in the top half of the inning.

The Potlatch right hander beat Fisk, striking out 12-batters and issuing two walks in seven innings.

Manley did not allow a Fisk base runner to advance past first base and had only two on base all night. Both were retired, one on a double play and the other on an attempted steal. Gary Owens, Mike Garner and Manley supplied the power, Owens had a three for four performance at the plate with a double and Garner and Manley poled two hits each.

It was Fisk's second loss of the season to go along with one win, over Puxico.

Sikeston meets Poplar Bluff at 8 p.m. tonight at Poplar Bluff. Bruce Farris and Garner will make up tonight's battery.

Last nights win puts Sikeston in first place in the league, with one win and no defeats. All other league teams have been defeated.

Golf Boycott Imminent

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — There appears no immediate solution to the bitter fight between the Professional Golfers Association and tournament players for control of the $4.5-million tour.

Predictions in informed golf circles today were that Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Bill Casper and some 150 other touring pros would strike out on their own next month after the PGA National Championship Tournament, scheduled at Denver.

The question is: Can these transient pros run their own show?

The players gave the PGA until today to accede to their demands for greater control of the tour, including the privilege of setting tournaments, handling television proceeds and naming administrators for the tournament bureau.

The PGA insists it won't give in. "We can't live with that kind of arrangement," said PGA President Max Elbin of Washington, D.C., who has given golf lessons to three presidents at the Burning Tree Golf Club.

The PGA has issued an ultimatum of its own — effective also today. Under it, the 150 players who have signed a protesting petition must remove their names or be subject to possible suspension and withdrawal of playing privileges.

The players say they won't do it.

So the U. S. Open Championship, not affected by the feud because it falls under the jurisdiction of the U. S. Golf Association, will proceed as scheduled with the player revolt temporarily shelved.

The day of accounting may not come until the PGA Championship at Denver July 20-24, although Elbin and the PGA Executive Committee have invited the players to air their grievances at an open meeting in Cleveland next Tuesday.

The players indicated they may boycott it. "We have asked for meetings before and they won't listen to us," Doug Ford, a member of the four-man tournament committee, said.

If the players boycott the PGA Championship, as threatened, they will face suspension under an ethical provison of the PGA constitution.

Then sponsors of subsequent PGA events, with hundreds of thousands of dollars invested, will face the dilemma of playing outlaw competitors or canceling the tournaments.

"We have assurance from most sponsors they will stick with the players," Ford said.

Every prominent tournament player except Doug Sanders has signed the petition threatening a boycott and an independent association. Arnold Palmer and Julius Boros signed Tuesday. Bill Casper added his name Wednesday. Jack Nicklaus was one of the more than 130 who signed two weeks ago at Memphis.

It is a strange war of control, but one that has flared off and on since the tour was started on peanuts back in 1929 by Tommy Armour, El Espinosa and J.J. Patterson. They were the first tournament committee.

There are 5,895 members of the PGA. Of these, only 200 are tournament players. The others are the club professionals, who tend the pro shops, manicure the courses and run their courses.

7 Occasionally they venture onto the tour. The players insist that these so-called shop keepers have too much voice in their affairs.

That's the crux of the problem, which appears far from being resolved.

NCAA Championships Begin Tonight At Provo

..PROVO, Utah (AP) — Rain sprinkled the Brigham Young University stadium as a number of top collegiate athletes warmed up for tonight's start of the NCAA championships.

The Weather Bureau said it expected a clearing trend by the start of field-event qualifying at 5 p.m. MDT. The temperature has been in the mid-50s much of the week.

Distance star Gerry Lindgren was expected to give Washington State the early lead in team competition, which again shapes up as a battle among West Coast powerhouses such as Southern California, Oregon and defending champion UCLA.

Lindgren won both the three-mile and six-mile runs last year, and is superior to all competition this year on the basis of times. the six-mile is the only final tonight. The others will be Friday and Saturday nights.

The 4,500-foot altitude, which causes many distance runners to suffer from aching lungs and heavy legs, was mentioned by some as a possible hope for Lindgren's competition.

It was little consolation, however, to Ambrose Burfoot of Wesleyan, who ran in the NCAA College Division meet at a similar altitude in Ogden, Utah, last week. Burfoot said "smart distance runners like Lindgren" would handle the altitude.

The rain, while understandably bothersome to the practicing athletes, had no harmful effect on the all - weather, rubberized asphalt track. If anything, the surface appears to suffer more from softness in hot, dry weather.

Vern Wolfe, the Southern California coach who got world record-breaking performances last week from his 440-yard relay team and pole-vaulter Bob Seagren, said he expected Oregon and UCLA to be USC's main challengers for the team title.

He also listed San Jose State, Kansas and Villanova as possibilities.

Southern California's strength rested with Seagren, its relay teams, and other standouts such as hurdlers Earl McCullouch and Geoff Vanderstock, sprinter Lennox Miller, discus thrower Gary Carlsen and half - miler Dennis Carr. All are at or near the top of their respective events on the basis of entry performances. Southern Cal also has a number of unheralded competitors who could score decisive points.

Oregon, team champion or co-champion in three of the last five NCAA meets, beat both UCLA and USC in the Pacific-8 Conference meet and has entered men in 26 spots for this meet.

Ironman Tommie Smith could bring San Jose State into contention, if he follows the entry sheet that lists him in the 100, 220, 440 and mile relay. However, it was doubtful he would actually run in all of those.

Smith, Lindgren and weightman Randy Matson, the world record-holder in the shot put and a rapidly improving discus thrower, appear to have the best chances for individual point honors.

Jim Ryun, world record-holder in both the mile and half-nuke, is not expected to try for a double. The finals of those events are only 40 minutes apart, and the competition is such that he could not afford to coast in either.

Twins Rise to Third Place Tie As Kaat Pitches 7 - 0 Shutout at Detroit

Associated Press Sports Writer

About the firing of Sam Mele, "I have nothing to say," Jim Kaat says over and over, but he's doing plenty of talking on the mound since Mele left.

The Minnesota left-hander beat Detroit 7-0 Wednesday night with a five-hitter, his second straight complete game victory since new Manager Cal Ermer took over last Friday. The 25-game winner of last year had won only one game and lost seven under Mele and failed to complete any of his first 12 starts.

Kaat insists it's just a coincidence — and it probably is — but whatever the reason, he has the once-sluggish Twins in a third-place tie in the American League.

They share third with Baltimore and Boston after Kansas City belted the Orioles 9-2 and the Red Sox split a doubleheader with first-place Chicago, losing 8-7 before winning 6-1.

The New York Yankees split with Washington in another twinbill, winning 7-1 and losing 3-2, and California nipped Cleveland 3-2 on Bob Rodgers' two-run single in the ninth inning.

Katt resumed his turnabout before former Twins' pitching coach Johnny Sain, the man whose firing last fall at the request of Mele prompted a controversial letter by Kaat praising Sain and criticizing Minnesota for letting him go.

Sain, now the pitching coach at Detroit, felt Kaat "looked like the same old Kaat to me.

"He's too good a pitcher not to bounce back," Sain said.

"I've always felt like my old self, "Kaat said, "but earlier this year, I couldn't get any consistency with my pitches. And the main thing is we've gotten big leads in the last two games and tonight we made five or six great plays that took away hits."

Katt struck out six and walked none as he allowed only two Tigers to second base. Harmon Killebrew, Jerry Zimmerman and Rod Carew supplied the power, each with two-run homers. Zimmerman also singled home a run.

Chuck Dobson, also coming on strong for Kansas City, stopped the slugging Orioles on one run before a jammed finger on his pitching hand forced him out in the seventh inning. Entering the game with two straight shutouts, he allowed only five hits in six innings to raise his record to 4-2.

The White Sox won their opener on home runs by Tommie Agee, Dick Kenworthy and Walt Williams, but Wilbur Wood had to strike out George Scott with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth inning to end the game. Scott and Rico Petrocelli had homered earlier for Boston.

Scott also homered in the nightcap, along with teammate Carl Yastrzemski, and Reggie Smith's pinch hit triple drove in two more runs as Lee Stange won his first game with seven innings of five-hit pitching.

Mike Epstein doubled in two first-inning runs and singled to set up the decisive marker in the fifth, giving the Senators a split on the five-hit pitching of Phil Ortega. Steve Whitaker homered for the Yankee runs in the ninth inning.

Al Downing hurled a seven-hitter in the opener for New York and was aided by Charlie Smith's two triples which drove in two runs and led to another.

Mickey Mantle broke Lou Gehrig's Yankee record for games played when he appeared as a pinch hitter in the second game, his 2,166th.

Rodgers delivered the Angels with his hit off relievered George Culver following one-out singles by Don Mincher and Jimmie Hall and a walk off starter Sonny Siebert. His homer had given the Angels their first run in the fourth after Rocky Colavito hit a two-run blast for Cleveland in the first.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Huseim Erkmen of Turkey, trainer of the Mexican National amateur wrestling team, suffered a heart attack Wednesday. His condition was termed serious.

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Ron Clark, rookie third baseman of the Minnesota Twins, had fluid drained from his right elbow Wednesday at the Mayo Clinic and doctors said he should be able to play in about two weeks.

The sore elbow had impaired Clark's throwing, and Monday the Twins placed him on the disabled list for three weeks.

MOSPORT, Ont. (AP) — Garry Congdon of Gardenia, Calif., escaped injury Wednesday when his Harrison Chev Special went off the track in a practice spin for Saturday's 200-mile auto race.

Mets Unload Against Cincinnati

Birds Flock Home As McCarver Connects

TIM McCARVER connected for a grand-slammer in the first inning of last night's baseball game against Pittsburgh, starting the St. Louis Cardinals off to a 7-4 victory. It was his sixth homer of the season.

Let's play baseball manager. It's early in the game, there are runners at second and third with a tough hitter at bat and a lesser threat on deck. You issue an intentional walk, right? Wrong.

Harry Walker of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia's Gene Mauch played the obvious strategy of the deliberate base on balls Wednesday night and both regretted it later.

Walker ordered Mike Shannon passed in the first inning against the Cardinals and then watched Tim McCarver wallop a grand slam home run that triggered St. Louis' 7-4 victory over the Pirates.

Atlanta's Joe Torre got the intentional treatment from Mauch in the fourth inning and then trotted home behind two other runners when Clete Boyer unloaded a grand slam that helped the Braves to a 16-7 triumph over the Phillies.

In other National League action, New York's Bob Shaw shut out first-place Cincinnati 4-0, Houston downed San Francisco 7-4, and Los Angeles ended an eight-game losing streak with a 4-3 victory over Chicago.

Left-hander Billy O'Dell was working for the Pirates so after Orlando Cedpda's double put runners at second and third with two out in the first, Walker ordered Shannon, a right-handed hitter, walked to pitch to lefty swinging McCarver.

The homer, on an 0-1 pitch, was McCarver's sixth this season and his third career grand slam. Cepeda drove in two more Cardinal runs later and Bob Gibson survived an 11-hit Pirate attack to go the distance for his eighth victory.

Hank Aaron's one-out double following an error put Mauch on the spot in the fourth inning of the Phillies-Braves game. He had Larry Jackson walk Torre, a much tougher hitter than Boyer, who was on deck.

The slam was the fourth in Boyer's career and his ninth home run this season. Aaron added his 17th later and Tito Francona, traded by Philadelphia to Atlanta only Sunday, socked his first against his exmates.

Shaw scattered six hits and Tommy Davis drove in three runs as the Mets defeated the Reds.

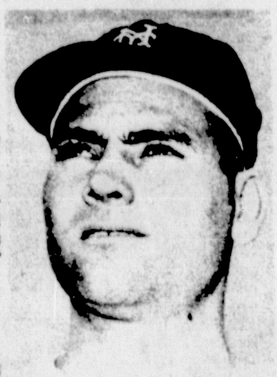
New York pushed across an unearned run driven in by Davis' sacrifice fly in the first against Jim Maloney and Shaw made it stand up until the eighth when consecutive doubles by Ken Boyer and Davis produced three more.

Houston jumped on Gaylord Perry for five straight hits and five runs in the first inning and then held off the Giants.

Jim Wynn's two-run triple and a two-run single by Bob Aspromonte were the key blows in the Astros' spurt. Aspromonte drove in two more runs with a sacrifice fly and a single as Don Wilson scattered eight hits and struck out 13 Giants.

Ron Perranoski, the Dodgers' fourth pitcher against the Cubs, got Lee Thomas to ground into a bases-loaded double playchoking off a Chicago rally in the ninth inning.

Len Gabrielson and Dodger starter Claude Osteen homered in the fourth while Ernie Banks and Ron Santo connected for Chicago.



THE METS' Bob Shaw shut out the National League leaders 4-0 last night, handing the Cincinnati Reds their second consecutive loss at the hands of the Mets.

Potlatch Wins League Opener 7-0

Manley Whitewashes Fisk

Rudy Manley hurled the Potlatch Forest Connie Mack team to its opening season baseball victory over Fisk last night at VFW stadium, pitching a no-hit, 7-0 victory.

Potlatch, in defense of its Black River conference baseball title, got into the scoring column in the first inning after Manley set the side down in order in the top half of the inning.

The Potlatch right hander beat Fisk, striking out 12-batters and issuing two walks in seven innings.

Manley did not allow a Fisk base runner to advance past first base and had only two on base all night. Both were retired, one on a double play and the other on an attempted steal. Gary Owens, Mike Garner and Manley supplied the power, Owens had a three for four performance at the plate with a double and Garner and Manley poled two hits each.

It was Fisk's second loss of the season to go along with one win, over Puxico.

Sikeston meets Poplar Bluff at 8 p.m. tonight at Poplar Bluff. Bruce Farris and Garner will make up tonight's battery.

Last nights win puts Sikeston in first place in the league, with one win and no defeats. All other league teams have been defeated.

Golf Boycott Imminent

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — There appears no immediate solution to the bitter fight between the Professional Golfers Association and tournament players for control of the $4.5-million tour.

Predictions in informed golf circles today were that Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Bill Casper and some 150 other touring pros would strike out on their own next month after the PGA National Championship Tournament, scheduled at Denver.

The question is: Can these transient pros run their own show?

The players gave the PGA until today to accede to their demands for greater control of the tour, including the privilege of setting tournaments, handling television proceeds and naming administrators for the tournament bureau.

The PGA insists it won't give in. "We can't live with that kind of arrangement," said PGA President Max Elbin of Washington, D.C., who has given golf lessons to three presidents at the Burning Tree Golf Club.

The PGA has issued an ultimatum of its own — effective also today. Under it, the 150 players who have signed a protesting petition must remove their names or be subject to possible suspension and withdrawal of playing privileges.

The players say they won't do it.

So the U. S. Open Championship, not affected by the feud because it falls under the jurisdiction of the U. S. Golf Association, will proceed as scheduled with the player revolt temporarily shelved.

The day of accounting may not come until the PGA Championship at Denver July 20-24, although Elbin and the PGA Executive Committee have invited the players to air their grievances at an open meeting in Cleveland next Tuesday.

The players indicated they may boycott it. "We have asked for meetings before and they won't listen to us," Doug Ford, a member of the four-man tournament committee, said.

If the players boycott the PGA Championship, as threatened, they will face suspension under an ethical provison of the PGA constitution.

Then sponsors of subsequent PGA events, with hundreds of thousands of dollars invested, will face the dilemma of playing outlaw competitors or canceling the tournaments.

"We have assurance from most sponsors they will stick with the players," Ford said.

Every prominent tournament player except Doug Sanders has signed the petition threatening a boycott and an independent association. Arnold Palmer and Julius Boros signed Tuesday. Bill Casper added his name Wednesday. Jack Nicklaus was one of the more than 130 who signed two weeks ago at Memphis.

It is a strange war of control, but one that has flared off and on since the tour was started on peanuts back in 1929 by Tommy Armour, El Espinosa and J.J. Patterson. They were the first tournament committee.

There are 5,895 members of the PGA. Of these, only 200 are tournament players. The others are the club professionals, who tend the pro shops, manicure the courses and run their courses.

7 Occasionally they venture onto the tour. The players insist that these so-called shop keepers have too much voice in their affairs.

That's the crux of the problem, which appears far from being resolved.

NCAA Championships Begin Tonight At Provo

..PROVO, Utah (AP) — Rain sprinkled the Brigham Young University stadium as a number of top collegiate athletes warmed up for tonight's start of the NCAA championships.

The Weather Bureau said it expected a clearing trend by the start of field-event qualifying at 5 p.m. MDT. The temperature has been in the mid-50s much of the week.

Distance star Gerry Lindgren was expected to give Washington State the early lead in team competition, which again shapes up as a battle among West Coast powerhouses such as Southern California, Oregon and defending champion UCLA.

Lindgren won both the three-mile and six-mile runs last year, and is superior to all competition this year on the basis of times. the six-mile is the only final tonight. The others will be Friday and Saturday nights.

The 4,500-foot altitude, which causes many distance runners to suffer from aching lungs and heavy legs, was mentioned by some as a possible hope for Lindgren's competition.

It was little consolation, however, to Ambrose Burfoot of Wesleyan, who ran in the NCAA College Division meet at a similar altitude in Ogden, Utah, last week. Burfoot said "smart distance runners like Lindgren" would handle the altitude.

The rain, while understandably bothersome to the practicing athletes, had no harmful effect on the all - weather, rubberized asphalt track. If anything, the surface appears to suffer more from softness in hot, dry weather.

Vern Wolfe, the Southern California coach who got world record-breaking performances last week from his 440-yard relay team and pole-vaulter Bob Seagren, said he expected Oregon and UCLA to be USC's main challengers for the team title.

He also listed San Jose State, Kansas and Villanova as possibilities.

Southern California's strength rested with Seagren, its relay teams, and other standouts such as hurdlers Earl McCullouch and Geoff Vanderstock, sprinter Lennox Miller, discus thrower Gary Carlsen and half - miler Dennis Carr. All are at or near the top of their respective events on the basis of entry performances. Southern Cal also has a number of unheralded competitors who could score decisive points.

Oregon, team champion or co-champion in three of the last five NCAA meets, beat both UCLA and USC in the Pacific-8 Conference meet and has entered men in 26 spots for this meet.

Ironman Tommie Smith could bring San Jose State into contention, if he follows the entry sheet that lists him in the 100, 220, 440 and mile relay. However, it was doubtful he would actually run in all of those.

Smith, Lindgren and weightman Randy Matson, the world record-holder in the shot put and a rapidly improving discus thrower, appear to have the best chances for individual point honors.

Jim Ryun, world record-holder in both the mile and half-nuke, is not expected to try for a double. The finals of those events are only 40 minutes apart, and the competition is such that he could not afford to coast in either.

Twins Rise to Third Place Tie As Kaat Pitches 7 - 0 Shutout at Detroit

Associated Press Sports Writer

About the firing of Sam Mele, "I have nothing to say," Jim Kaat says over and over, but he's doing plenty of talking on the mound since Mele left.

The Minnesota left-hander beat Detroit 7-0 Wednesday night with a five-hitter, his second straight complete game victory since new Manager Cal Ermer took over last Friday. The 25-game winner of last year had won only one game and lost seven under Mele and failed to complete any of his first 12 starts.

Kaat insists it's just a coincidence — and it probably is — but whatever the reason, he has the once-sluggish Twins in a third-place tie in the American League.

They share third with Baltimore and Boston after Kansas City belted the Orioles 9-2 and the Red Sox split a doubleheader with first-place Chicago, losing 8-7 before winning 6-1.

The New York Yankees split with Washington in another twinbill, winning 7-1 and losing 3-2, and California nipped Cleveland 3-2 on Bob Rodgers' two-run single in the ninth inning.

Katt resumed his turnabout before former Twins' pitching coach Johnny Sain, the man whose firing last fall at the request of Mele prompted a controversial letter by Kaat praising Sain and criticizing Minnesota for letting him go.

Sain, now the pitching coach at Detroit, felt Kaat "looked like the same old Kaat to me.

"He's too good a pitcher not to bounce back," Sain said.

"I've always felt like my old self, "Kaat said, "but earlier this year, I couldn't get any consistency with my pitches. And the main thing is we've gotten big leads in the last two games and tonight we made five or six great plays that took away hits."

Katt struck out six and walked none as he allowed only two Tigers to second base. Harmon Killebrew, Jerry Zimmerman and Rod Carew supplied the power, each with two-run homers. Zimmerman also singled home a run.

Chuck Dobson, also coming on strong for Kansas City, stopped the slugging Orioles on one run before a jammed finger on his pitching hand forced him out in the seventh inning. Entering the game with two straight shutouts, he allowed only five hits in six innings to raise his record to 4-2.

The White Sox won their opener on home runs by Tommie Agee, Dick Kenworthy and Walt Williams, but Wilbur Wood had to strike out George Scott with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth inning to end the game. Scott and Rico Petrocelli had homered earlier for Boston.

Scott also homered in the nightcap, along with teammate Carl Yastrzemski, and Reggie Smith's pinch hit triple drove in two more runs as Lee Stange won his first game with seven innings of five-hit pitching.

Mike Epstein doubled in two first-inning runs and singled to set up the decisive marker in the fifth, giving the Senators a split on the five-hit pitching of Phil Ortega. Steve Whitaker homered for the Yankee runs in the ninth inning.

Al Downing hurled a seven-hitter in the opener for New York and was aided by Charlie Smith's two triples which drove in two runs and led to another.

Mickey Mantle broke Lou Gehrig's Yankee record for games played when he appeared as a pinch hitter in the second game, his 2,166th.

Rodgers delivered the Angels with his hit off relievered George Culver following one-out singles by Don Mincher and Jimmie Hall and a walk off starter Sonny Siebert. His homer had given the Angels their first run in the fourth after Rocky Colavito hit a two-run blast for Cleveland in the first.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Huseim Erkmen of Turkey, trainer of the Mexican National amateur wrestling team, suffered a heart attack Wednesday. His condition was termed serious.

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Ron Clark, rookie third baseman of the Minnesota Twins, had fluid drained from his right elbow Wednesday at the Mayo Clinic and doctors said he should be able to play in about two weeks.

The sore elbow had impaired Clark's throwing, and Monday the Twins placed him on the disabled list for three weeks.

MOSPORT, Ont. (AP) — Garry Congdon of Gardenia, Calif., escaped injury Wednesday when his Harrison Chev Special went off the track in a practice spin for Saturday's 200-mile auto race.

$478 Million Produced From Gas Tax Sharing

JEFFERSON CITY - Missouri's gasoline tax sharing plan has produced $478,459,911.33 in five years for the state highway department, 668 cities and 114 counties, the Missouri Oil Council reported today.

"This is nearly $78.5 million more than was anticipated," Sam Overfelt, executive director of the council, said.

Overfelt called the road and street program "the best bargain drafted for all taxpayers" and declared many attempts to change it "should encounter vigorous opposition."

The gasoline tax sharing plan was adopted by Missouri voters at a special election on March 6, 1962. It provided a five cent state tax on each gallon of gasoline with 80 per cent of the proceeds to be used by the State Highway Department; 15 per cent by all incorporated cities with more than 200 population; and the remaining 5 per cent by Missouri's 114 counties.

Overfelt said the Highway Department was promised in five years it would receive no less than $320 million; the cities were told their share would be no less than $60 million; and the counties were pledged no less than $20 million.

He reported gasoline tax receipts in this period have "supplied $34,939,495.88 more than the guaranteed amount to the State Highway Department; allocated $6,434,811.63 over the amount promised to cities; and provided $2,144,603.82 additional for the counties."

Cost of collections and refunds during the five years totaled $34,950,000.

Another guarantee written into the sharing plan and approved by the voters was that no city with its own gasoline tax would receive less than the city's own levy produced in 1960.

There were 106 cities which had their own gasoline tax abolished. The guarantee for five years amounted to $42,817,419.60. "Actually, these 160 cities have received $49,735,884.05," Overfelt said.

"Of the 106 cities with a guaranteed 'floor' 87 have had these promises exceeded -- some by several hundred per cent. Even the prsent day cost of living doesn't exceed this record," the Oil Council Director declared.

Overfelt pointed to such cities as Florissant, Bellefontaine Neighbors, Independence, Jefferson City, St. Joseph, Overland, University City and Webster Groves as communities which had their own gasoline taxes repealed only to reap larger amounts.

Florissant's city gasoline tax in 1960 produced $39,076.32 or a promised $195,381.60 in five years. Overfelt said Florissant's share of the gasoline tax in five years has been $768,417.95 -- a $573,036.35 bonus.

Bellefontaine Neighbors has realized $242,882.69 more than was promised. Independence has received $267,651.25 additional. St. Joseph's share has been $453,463.86 more than was promised. Overland has been allocated $203,478,71 in excess of its pledge. University City's share has topped the $1 million mark or $271,286.52 above what was pledged. And Webster Groves has received $270,585.61 over estimates.

Overfelt said the 19 cities still receiving their "floors have actually received the best of the bargain. Because the gasoline tax sharing plan for cities is based on population and 1960 city gasoline tax guarantees. When consumption of gasoline is low in the winter months other cities suffer. But the floor cities get their guarantee regardless of the amounts of the collections."

The Oil Council director also pointed to the 562 other cities sharing gasoline tax receipts. "This has been new money for all of these cities and has amounted to $16,698,927.57 in five years," Overfelt said.

Joplin has been the greatest benefactor in this category, receiving $784,363.73. Other cities receiving funds from gasoline taxes for the first time and their five year totals include: Cape Girardeau, $502,272.13; St. Charles, $426,610.14; Hannibal, $403,235.06; Poplar Bluff, $320,647.09; Sikeston, $277,133.85; Moberly, $265,159.00; Kirksville, $264,212.65; Carthage $266,784.32; and Warrensburg, $190,073.98.

Of the 668 cities, St. Louis City has received the biggest amount- $16,168,569.51 as compared with a pledge of $15,300,772.20. Kansas City ranks second. It was promised $11,043,079.20 and has received $11,179,055.80.

"The counties have fared equally as well," Overfelt said. "St. Louis County has been the greatest benefactor with $2,508,464.67 deposited in its account in the past five years. This is $563,248.67 more than St. Louis County was expected to receive when the program was presented to voters five years ago.

"Greene County has been allocated $206,658.32 more than was ancitipated. Jackson County has received $152,874.14 over original estimates and even Worth County -- the least populated in Missouri -- has topped its expectations by $5,293.66."

Overfelt said, "almost without exception the plan has provided more money for the State Highway Department, the cities and counties than was anticipated."

He also pointed to the 4 cent Federal tax on each gallon of gasoline which s an estimated $382,767,929.04 in the past five years.

"The grand total for gasoline taxes paid by motorists in Missouri in the past five years is $861,227,840.37," Overfelt declared.

$478 Million Produced From Gas Tax Sharing

JEFFERSON CITY - Missouri's gasoline tax sharing plan has produced $478,459,911.33 in five years for the state highway department, 668 cities and 114 counties, the Missouri Oil Council reported today.

"This is nearly $78.5 million more than was anticipated," Sam Overfelt, executive director of the council, said.

Overfelt called the road and street program "the best bargain drafted for all taxpayers" and declared many attempts to change it "should encounter vigorous opposition."

The gasoline tax sharing plan was adopted by Missouri voters at a special election on March 6, 1962. It provided a five cent state tax on each gallon of gasoline with 80 per cent of the proceeds to be used by the State Highway Department; 15 per cent by all incorporated cities with more than 200 population; and the remaining 5 per cent by Missouri's 114 counties.

Overfelt said the Highway Department was promised in five years it would receive no less than $320 million; the cities were told their share would be no less than $60 million; and the counties were pledged no less than $20 million.

He reported gasoline tax receipts in this period have "supplied $34,939,495.88 more than the guaranteed amount to the State Highway Department; allocated $6,434,811.63 over the amount promised to cities; and provided $2,144,603.82 additional for the counties."

Cost of collections and refunds during the five years totaled $34,950,000.

Another guarantee written into the sharing plan and approved by the voters was that no city with its own gasoline tax would receive less than the city's own levy produced in 1960.

There were 106 cities which had their own gasoline tax abolished. The guarantee for five years amounted to $42,817,419.60. "Actually, these 160 cities have received $49,735,884.05," Overfelt said.

"Of the 106 cities with a guaranteed 'floor' 87 have had these promises exceeded -- some by several hundred per cent. Even the prsent day cost of living doesn't exceed this record," the Oil Council Director declared.

Overfelt pointed to such cities as Florissant, Bellefontaine Neighbors, Independence, Jefferson City, St. Joseph, Overland, University City and Webster Groves as communities which had their own gasoline taxes repealed only to reap larger amounts.

Florissant's city gasoline tax in 1960 produced $39,076.32 or a promised $195,381.60 in five years. Overfelt said Florissant's share of the gasoline tax in five years has been $768,417.95 -- a $573,036.35 bonus.

Bellefontaine Neighbors has realized $242,882.69 more than was promised. Independence has received $267,651.25 additional. St. Joseph's share has been $453,463.86 more than was promised. Overland has been allocated $203,478,71 in excess of its pledge. University City's share has topped the $1 million mark or $271,286.52 above what was pledged. And Webster Groves has received $270,585.61 over estimates.

Overfelt said the 19 cities still receiving their "floors have actually received the best of the bargain. Because the gasoline tax sharing plan for cities is based on population and 1960 city gasoline tax guarantees. When consumption of gasoline is low in the winter months other cities suffer. But the floor cities get their guarantee regardless of the amounts of the collections."

The Oil Council director also pointed to the 562 other cities sharing gasoline tax receipts. "This has been new money for all of these cities and has amounted to $16,698,927.57 in five years," Overfelt said.

Joplin has been the greatest benefactor in this category, receiving $784,363.73. Other cities receiving funds from gasoline taxes for the first time and their five year totals include: Cape Girardeau, $502,272.13; St. Charles, $426,610.14; Hannibal, $403,235.06; Poplar Bluff, $320,647.09; Sikeston, $277,133.85; Moberly, $265,159.00; Kirksville, $264,212.65; Carthage $266,784.32; and Warrensburg, $190,073.98.

Of the 668 cities, St. Louis City has received the biggest amount-$16,168,569.51 as compared with a pledge of $15,300,772.20. Kansas City ranks second. It was promised $11,043,079.20 and has received $11,179,055.80.

"The counties have fared equally as well," Overfelt said. "St. Louis County has been the greatest benefactor with $2,508,464.67 deposited in its account in the past five years. This is $563,248.67 more than St. Louis County was expected to receive when the program was presented to voters five years ago.

"Greene County has been allocated $206,658.32 more than was ancitipated. Jackson County has received $152,874.14 over original estimates and even Worth County -- the least populated in Missouri -- has topped its expectations by $5,293.66."

Overfelt said, "almost without exception the plan has provided more money for the State Highway Department, the cities and counties than was anticipated."

He also pointed to the 4 cent Federal tax on each gallon of gasoline which s an estimated $382,767,929.04 in the past five years.

"The grand total for gasoline taxes paid by motorists in Missouri in the past five years is $861,227,840.37," Overfelt declared.

Man Wishes He Had Lawn To Mow Now

RICHMOND, B.C. (AP) — Curtis Eystone decided replacing some of his lawn with concrete would cut down on his mowing. Now he has a lake and wishes he had some lawn left to mow.

Eystone planned to fill in a big chunk of his half-acre lawn with a large, curved driveway leading from a new bridge over a ditch in front of his property.

As the last load of concrete arrived Tuesday, the old wooden bridge collapsed under the 21-ton truck.

Firemen arrived and began trying to wash out the six tons of hardening concrete.

A crane tried to lift the truck and the cable snapped, plunging the truck, nose down, deeper into the ditch.

Two more cranes came and moved the truck. But in the process they chewed up the driveway, knocked down fences, uprooted trees — and broke the water main leading to the house, creating the lake.

When Eystone's wife and 2-month-old son Michael got home, they found about 200 spectators outside and no water inside. They moved to a hotel.

The lake in Eystone's front yard still was growing Wednesday night, fed by water from the main flowing down foot-deep ruts.

"We don't know where the main broke," Eystone said, "so we're going to have to dig about 170 feet from the main to the house, and there goes what's left of the lawn.

"My yards looks like a second world war battlefield. Damage is about $5,000 to the place, and $25,000 to the truck, but the trucking firm says to go ahead and have repairs made, so that's one problem off our minds.

"I don't like mowing grass, and I don't like concrete any more, either, but I haven't figured out which is worse."

Better Tea

Altitudes of 3,000 to 7,000 feet produce the finest quality of tea. The moderate temperatures at these heights produce a smaller leaf with less water content and more flavor.

About Our Schools

By Lynn Twitty

The Board of Education is scheduled to receive bids on the first unit of the schools' building program on June 29th. Included in this phase are the enlargement of the library, the kitchen and cafeteria at Senior High, the construction of two additional classrooms of the science-math complex and eight new shops and classrooms for the trade-technical school.

These were given priority as they are most needed in our educational program and as these particular facilities are most crowded at present. The preparation of plans for the second and/or third phase of the program are proceeding with the expectation that they will be completed and ready for prospective bidders possibly in August. This phase will include the elementary school, planned for the Ables Road location, and the field house to be placed on the Senior High School campus.

Reports from other schools indicate that building prices continue to advance. Several schools have had the lowest bid to come in 20-25% above their original estimates. The primary reason for this increase is the continued escalation of labor scales, especially in this area controlled by St. Louis labor union jurisdiction. The labor scale is set by the state and federal governments and even though union rates for labor are lower in our immediate area, St. Louis rate scales must be met. We can only hope that our costs are within the amounts of money we have available for the building program. When the bond issue was voted, our estimated were well within our resources, but later labor cost increases will, of course, affect our program.

Bill Sikes, who is in charge of our Manpower Development Training Program, and who has other administrative assignments in our schools, was a featured speaker and consultant at a meeting on post-school programs held at Topeka, Kansas recently. He appeared on both a morning and afternoon sessions and spoke on the topic: Comprehensive Adult Education Programs, followed by a lengthy question and answer session.

The program of adult education conducted by our Board of Education, under several different full or partially federally financed titles, is one of the largest and most comprehensive in the nation and those of our administrators and teachers, directly concerned, are becoming in demand for advice and consultation on this type of education.

Some of the items included in our summer maintenance and repair program are to: re-roof the Lincoln School gymnasium-auditorium; a new roof on the Middle School gymnasium-auditorium; to repair the roof on the main building at Middle School; to begin the installation of new metal windows at Bailey; the installation of florescent lights at Bailey; to repair the Lee Hunter roof; re-decoracent lights at Bailey; to repair the Lee Hunter roof; re-decoration of the interior of Matthews Elementary; to construct parking facilities in connection with the proposed field house, and also for student and faculty use, to enlarge faculty and parking facilities; to re-surface the tennis courts; to partially redecorate the Middle School building and cafeteria and numerous other painting, repairs, cleaning and refurbishing at all schools. Obviously we do not have time or money enough to do all of these but they will be taken up in the order of their importance to the educational and community programs.

The maintenance of existing facilities is a continuous expense and somehow seems to be increasingly more costly as materials and labor costs go up. Our income, from all sources, does not increase at the same rate.

It is probable that the Missouri General Assembly will pass legislation providing for some state financing for a kindergarten program. This is not the case at present. The bill, under consideration, provides for state money to pay almost one-half of the cost of operating a kindergarten program. It would pay nothing toward the costs of getting started, i.e.: buildings, equipment, etc. We estimate that to operate a program here for the number of children whom we would likely serve, would cost about $65,000 per year, in addition to the state aid, and not to include cost of buildings and other beginners of expenses. As most of our patrons are aware, we do not have $65,000 of unencumbered funds in the present budget under our current tax structure.

Unquestionably a public school kindergarten would add greatly to our educational program. However, its value, in relation to the additional money required, is a decision which we believe should be left up to our patrons. We are convinced that the small additional tax levy required to pay for it would be justified. However, we are only one voter and one opportunity to make this decision, if and when the legislature provides for some state financial support.

It would not be possible to organize a kindergarten program, including hiring the qualified teachers which are required, and in the face of a general teacher-shortage, to get started by next fall. But, this is a matter of providing better schooling for our children which we should be considering for a future decision.

A preliminary study of the results of our annual standardized testing program indicates that our elementary children range from an average of three months above national average standards at the end of the first grade to about eight months above at the fifth grade level. We do not yet have the scores on the Middle or Senior High School students but indications are that, here also, we still continue to score above national average. While our results are not nearly as good as we would like them to be, and as we don't consider national averages to be very high, we are at least getting these results at about $150.00 per pupil less cost than is the national average per pupil expenditures. We are not proud of this fact, but it is merely one of the facts of life. We simply don't have any more money. We are pleased that our teachers are doing more, with less, and their efforts deserve full credit for any results which we may get. We will give you more information as to the quality of education in our schools, the results we are getting for the taxpayers' dollar-and this is our only reason for existence - to teach children, when all of the test resulted are scored.

Established TV Writers Well Paid

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Q. Is a television comedy writer's life a happy one?

A. Mine is. Most writers are happy guys. We live ordinary, everyday lives and go home to our wives and kids.

Q. Is there a trend in TV comedy?

A. The public is becoming much more difficult to please—which is good. Whether it's slapstick, farce or legit, if it's done well, it can succeed.

The witness: Sam Denoff, 38. He won an Emmy June 4 for helping to write last April's Sid Caesar variety special. So did four other writers including his partner, Bill Persky, 35.

Denoff-Persky previously won two Emmys apiece writing the Dick Van Dyke show and are creators-writers-producers of a new fall comedy series, "Good Morning, World!"

Q. Does winning an Emmy mean a pay raise for a writer?

A. No, but it helps you maintain a reputation.

Q. I guess it would be an effrontery to ask how much you make.

A. Ask my ex-wife—or her lawyer.

Q. But how much do top writers in general make?

A. A good writer of situation comedy can make $3,500 per half-hour script—and write 20 or 30 of them a season if he really works at it. He also gets residuals, as I do from the Van Dyke show. In the variety field you can make $2,000 to $3,000 a week. A lot make $1,000, which is good, too.

Q. How does a young fellow with talent get started earning this kind of gravy?

A. Writing, believe it or not, is the easiest branch of show business to get into. All you have to do is sit down and write. We look at everything that comes in—if it's accompanied by a release to indemnify us from a plagiarism suit by an unscrupulous person. It takes time, but you can tell in about three pages if a script has anything.

Q. How did you and Persky get started?

A. We wrote programs, publicity and jingles for WNEW, New York, for five years.

Q. Any show business in your backgrounds?

A. No. Bill's father still owns an auction gallery on the Atlantic City Boardwalk. My father, who's retired, had a ladies' hosiery store in Brooklyn.

Q. Do people have a preconceived idea of what writers look like?

A. Yes; short, fat, bald and smoking a cigar. As you can see, I'm 6-2, slim, red-haired—and smoking a cigar.

Battle Waged In Mud

By HENRI HUET
AP Photographer

PHUOC VINH, South Vietnam (AP) — The wounded GI pressed his body into the thick mud behind a log, his bandages smeared with muck.

Another GI slid his mud-splattered M16 rifle over the log and began firing back at Viet Cong hidden in the nearby trees.

Some American infantrymen crawled through the mud on their bellies, sliding behind poncho-wrapped dead men for cover.

Fifteen men took cover in a huge mud hole left by bombs dropped from U.S. planes supporting the infantrymen. Others dragged the wounded through the mud on ponchos to the rear of the line.

Mud churned up by American bombs during the monsoon rains is another enemy for U.S. 1st Division infantrymen fighting in the Viet Cong-dominated war zone D, 47 miles northeast of Saigon.

The men fall into foxholes and quickly sink knee deep into the mud. Jumping off assault helicopters, many stumbled into mud holes cratered by bombs. U.S fighter-bombers saturated the landing zone to destroy any enemy mines planted there and to clear the immediate area of Communist troops.

The mud is worst in the landing zones and other open areas. Most of zone D is thick jungle, and it is only muddy under the canopy where bombs have penetrated the thick undergrowth.

Three companies of the 16th Infantry's 1st Battalion have put down in Landing Zone Rufe. Each day two companies fan out into the jungle to seek out the enemy.

A Company, working about 1,000 yards southwest of the landing zone, spotted four Viet Cong at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday. The enemy ran and left five packs behind. An air strike was called down on the fleeing Viet Cong.

Nearly two hours later, to the north of A Company, Viet Cong troops hidden by the thick jungle opened fire from all directions on B Company.

B Company pulled back and called for artillery fire on the Communist positions. The Americans moved forward again and once more ran into heavy fire. Six infantrymen were killed and 12 wounded.

They pulled back a second time, dragging their wounded and dead through the thick mud to a small opening cratered by American bombs from which helicopters could take the wounded out.

The Viet Cong kept firing and wounded three more Americans.

The helicopters arrived but couldn't land because the opening in the trees was too small. They hovered overhead and lowered a litter.

The Viet Cong opened up on the helicopters. One was hit and just made it back to the battalion command post 1,000 yards away.

A second helicopter came in and managed to lift out one wounded man under heavy fire. It, too, was hit and barely made it back to the command post.

Big Chinook helicopters had to carry both of the damaged helicopters back to Lai Khe.

By then it was 7:30 p.m. and darkness had fallen. It was impossible to take the wounded out by helicopter. The company had to walk through the jungle back to the battalion command post, carrying their dead and wounded.

As the men moved through the black night, artillery shells and bombs dropped behind them to protect their rear. Some shell fragments landed only a few feet away from the troops, but no more Americans were hurt.

Half an hour before midnight, the company reached the command post. Helicopters were there waiting to take the wounded out.

U.S. Command in Saigon said 60 Viet Cong were killed, but B Company saw no enemy bodies on the battlefield.

Late one evening I was wearily correcting a set of fourth-grade papers when I noticed a better - than - average offering from a student who had shown a weakness in the subject being tested. I penciled in red across the top of the page what was intended to be the word "Good!"

The following day I sent the marked papers home to be read, signed and returned by the parents. As I checked them over later for signatures, I noticed with chagrin, that on the particular sheet mentioned I had left an "o" out of my word of appraisal.

Down below, in small, neat writing under the parent's signature, was this notation: "I was surprised, too."

SAVING ON IMPULSE

STOCKHOLM AP -- Saving on impulse is the new fad here. If you have a one krona piece (20 U. S. cents) burning in your pocket, all you have to do is step up to an automat, drop the coin and you get a stamp. The stamps are pasted on a savings card. When it's full (15 kronor or $3), you sign the card and place it in the automat. The bank credits your savings account.

Firemen Hot Under Collar

WEST MIDDLESEX, Pa. (AP) — Tempers are growing hotter after police shut down a bingo game at a firemen's carnival and now it looks as if there may be no one around to put out fires.

The firemen are so incensed they are threatening to resign on July 14 unless the borough council gets rid of the mayor, who backed the police action.

Mayor Arthur Pantall says bingo is illegal and the firemen will have to raise money for a new firehouse in some other way.

In our parish, realization of the vitality of English in the Mass startled the congregation. It was the Sunday within the Octave of Christmas. A young mother was having a difficult time with her "active-participating" offspring. To the relief of the entire congregation, she decided to leave shortly after the Communion. As she neared a side door the celebrant intoned the Communion antiphon in loud and intelligible vernacular: "Take the child and his mother and go into the land of Israel, for those who sought the child's life are dead!"

Q&A
on cigarette smoking and heart disease

Q Can some people smoke a few cigarettes without getting the habit?

A YES. But most people cannot restrict themselves to a few cigarettes now and then. Researchers tell us that the smoker who begins in his teens with a few cigarettes is likely to become a habitual smoker. The best way to avoid the habit is to refuse the first cigarette you're offered.

(M.Missing) (T.Trace)

From the world of Iron Curtain humor comes the story of a young musician traveling by train from Warsaw to Moscow. As he sat in his compartment reading a musical score, a fellow passenger, actually in the secret police, attempted to decipher it. Unable to do so, the agent arrested the musician for espionage, claiming that the score was a secret code.

"But it's only a fugue by Bach," protested the musician as he was dragged off.

The next day, still protesting his innocence, he was brought before the commissar of police, "Well, comrade, you might as well talk," said the commissar. "Bach has already confessed."

Man Wishes He Had Lawn To Mow Now

RICHMOND, B.C. (AP) — Curtis Eystone decided replacing some of his lawn with concrete would cut down on his mowing. Now he has a lake and wishes he had some lawn left to mow.

Eystone planned to fill in a big chunk of his half-acre lawn with a large, curved driveway leading from a new bridge over a ditch in front of his property.

As the last load of concrete arrived Tuesday, the old wooden bridge collapsed under the 21-ton truck.

Firemen arrived and began trying to wash out the six tons of hardening concrete.

A crane tried to lift the truck and the cable snapped, plunging the truck, nose down, deeper into the ditch.

Two more cranes came and moved the truck. But in the process they chewed up the driveway, knocked down fences, uprooted trees — and broke the water main leading to the house, creating the lake.

When Eystone's wife and 2-month-old son Michael got home, they found about 200 spectators outside and no water inside. They moved to a hotel.

The lake in Eystone's front yard still was growing Wednesday night, fed by water from the main flowing down foot-deep ruts.

"We don't know where the main broke," Eystone said, "so we're going to have to dig about 170 feet from the main to the house, and there goes what's left of the lawn.

"My yards looks like a second world war battlefield. Damage is about $5,000 to the place, and $25,000 to the truck, but the trucking firm says to go ahead and have repairs made, so that's one problem off our minds.

"I don't like mowing grass, and I don't like concrete any more, either, but I haven't figured out which is worse."

Better Tea

Altitudes of 3,000 to 7,000 feet produce the finest quality of tea. The moderate temperatures at these heights produce a smaller leaf with less water content and more flavor.

About Our Schools

By Lynn Twitty

The Board of Education is scheduled to receive bids on the first unit of the schools' building program on June 29th. Included in this phase are the enlargement of the library, the kitchen and cafeteria at Senior High, the construction of two additional classrooms of the science-math complex and eight new shops and classrooms for the trade-technical school.

These were given priority as they are most needed in our educational program and as these particular facilities are most crowded at present. The preparation of plans for the second and/or third phase of the program are proceeding with the expectation that they will be completed and ready for prospective bidders possibly in August. This phase will include the elementary school, planned for the Ables Road location, and the field house to be placed on the Senior High School campus.

Reports from other schools indicate that building prices continue to advance. Several schools have had the lowest bid to come in 20-25% above their original estimates. The primary reason for this increase is the continued escalation of labor scales, especially in this area controlled by St. Louis labor union jurisdiction. The labor scale is set by the state and federal governments and even though union rates for labor are lower in our immediate area, St. Louis rate scales must be met. We can only hope that our costs are within the amounts of money we have available for the building program. When the bond issue was voted, our estimated were well within our resources, but later labor cost increases will, of course, affect our program.

Bill Sikes, who is in charge of our Manpower Development Training Program, and who has other administrative assignments in our schools, was a featured speaker and consultant at a meeting on post-school programs held at Topeka, Kansas recently. He appeared on both a morning and afternoon sessions and spoke on the topic: Comprehensive Adult Education Programs, followed by a lengthy question and answer session.

The program of adult education conducted by our Board of Education, under several different full or partially federally financed titles, is one of the largest and most comprehensive in the nation and those of our administrators and teachers, directly concerned, are becoming in demand for advice and consultation on this type of education.

Some of the items included in our summer maintenance and repair program are to: re-roof the Lincoln School gymnasium-auditorium; a new roof on the Middle School gymnasium-auditorium; to repair the roof on the main building at Middle School; to begin the installation of new metal windows at Bailey; the installation of florescent lights at Bailey; to repair the Lee Hunter roof; re-decoracent lights at Bailey; to repair the Lee Hunter roof; re-decoration of the interior of Matthews Elementary; to construct parking facilities in connection with the proposed field house, and also for student and faculty use, to enlarge faculty and parking facilities; to re-surface the tennis courts; to partially redecorate the Middle School building and cafeteria and numerous other painting, repairs, cleaning and refurbishing at all schools. Obviously we do not have time or money enough to do all of these but they will be taken up in the order of their importance to the educational and community programs.

The maintenance of existing facilities is a continuous expense and somehow seems to be increasingly more costly as materials and labor costs go up. Our income, from all sources, does not increase at the same rate.

It is probable that the Missouri General Assembly will pass legislation providing for some state financing for a kindergarten program. This is not the case at present. The bill, under consideration, provides for state money to pay almost one-half of the cost of operating a kindergarten program. It would pay nothing toward the costs of getting started, i.e.: buildings, equipment, etc. We estimate that to operate a program here for the number of children whom we would likely serve, would cost about $65,000 per year, in addition to the state aid, and not to include cost of buildings and other beginners of expenses. As most of our patrons are aware, we do not have $65,000 of unencumbered funds in the present budget under our current tax structure.

Unquestionably a public school kindergarten would add greatly to our educational program. However, its value, in relation to the additional money required, is a decision which we believe should be left up to our patrons. We are convinced that the small additional tax levy required to pay for it would be justified. However, we are only one voter and one opportunity to make this decision, if and when the legislature provides for some state financial support.

It would not be possible to organize a kindergarten program, including hiring the qualified teachers which are required, and in the face of a general teacher-shortage, to get started by next fall. But, this is a matter of providing better schooling for our children which we should be considering for a future decision.

A preliminary study of the results of our annual standardized testing program indicates that our elementary children range from an average of three months above national average standards at the end of the first grade to about eight months above at the fifth grade level. We do not yet have the scores on the Middle or Senior High School students but indications are that, here also, we still continue to score above national average. While our results are not nearly as good as we would like them to be, and as we don't consider national averages to be very high, we are at least getting these results at about $150.00 per pupil less cost than is the national average per pupil expenditures. We are not proud of this fact, but it is merely one of the facts of life. We simply don't have any more money. We are pleased that our teachers are doing more, with less, and their efforts deserve full credit for any results which we may get. We will give you more information as to the quality of education in our schools, the results we are getting for the taxpayers' dollar-and this is our only reason for existence - to teach children, when all of the test resulted are scored.

Established TV Writers Well Paid

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Q. Is a television comedy writer's life a happy one?

A. Mine is. Most writers are happy guys. We live ordinary, everyday lives and go home to our wives and kids.

Q. Is there a trend in TV comedy?

A. The public is becoming much more difficult to please—which is good. Whether it's slapstick, farce or legit, if it's done well, it can succeed.

The witness: Sam Denoff, 38. He won an Emmy June 4 for helping to write last April's Sid Caesar variety special. So did four other writers including his partner, Bill Persky, 35.

Denoff-Persky previously won two Emmys apiece writing the Dick Van Dyke show and are creators-writers-producers of a new fall comedy series, "Good Morning, World!"

Q. Does winning an Emmy mean a pay raise for a writer?

A. No, but it helps you maintain a reputation.

Q. I guess it would be an effrontery to ask how much you make.

A. Ask my ex-wife—or her lawyer.

Q. But how much do top writers in general make?

A. A good writer of situation comedy can make $3,500 per half-hour script—and write 20 or 30 of them a season if he really works at it. He also gets residuals, as I do from the Van Dyke show. In the variety field you can make $2,000 to $3,000 a week. A lot make $1,000, which is good, too.

Q. How does a young fellow with talent get started earning this kind of gravy?

A. Writing, believe it or not, is the easiest branch of show business to get into. All you have to do is sit down and write. We look at everything that comes in—if it's accompanied by a release to indemnify us from a plagiarism suit by an unscrupulous person. It takes time, but you can tell in about three pages if a script has anything.

Q. How did you and Persky get started?

A. We wrote programs, publicity and jingles for WNEW, New York, for five years.

Q. Any show business in your backgrounds?

A. No. Bill's father still owns an auction gallery on the Atlantic City Boardwalk. My father, who's retired, had a ladies' hosiery store in Brooklyn.

Q. Do people have a preconceived idea of what writers look like?

A. Yes; short, fat, bald and smoking a cigar. As you can see, I'm 6-2, slim, red-haired—and smoking a cigar.

Battle Waged In Mud

By HENRI HUET
AP Photographer

PHUOC VINH, South Vietnam (AP) — The wounded GI pressed his body into the thick mud behind a log, his bandages smeared with muck.

Another GI slid his mud-splattered M16 rifle over the log and began firing back at Viet Cong hidden in the nearby trees.

Some American infantrymen crawled through the mud on their bellies, sliding behind poncho-wrapped dead men for cover.

Fifteen men took cover in a huge mud hole left by bombs dropped from U.S. planes supporting the infantrymen. Others dragged the wounded through the mud on ponchos to the rear of the line.

Mud churned up by American bombs during the monsoon rains is another enemy for U.S. 1st Division infantrymen fighting in the Viet Cong-dominated war zone D, 47 miles northeast of Saigon.

The men fall into foxholes and quickly sink knee deep into the mud. Jumping off assault helicopters, many stumbled into mud holes cratered by bombs. U.S fighter-bombers saturated the landing zone to destroy any enemy mines planted there and to clear the immediate area of Communist troops.

The mud is worst in the landing zones and other open areas. Most of zone D is thick jungle, and it is only muddy under the canopy where bombs have penetrated the thick undergrowth.

Three companies of the 16th Infantry's 1st Battalion have put down in Landing Zone Rufe. Each day two companies fan out into the jungle to seek out the enemy.

A Company, working about 1,000 yards southwest of the landing zone, spotted four Viet Cong at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday. The enemy ran and left five packs behind. An air strike was called down on the fleeing Viet Cong.

Nearly two hours later, to the north of A Company, Viet Cong troops hidden by the thick jungle opened fire from all directions on B Company.

B Company pulled back and called for artillery fire on the Communist positions. The Americans moved forward again and once more ran into heavy fire. Six infantrymen were killed and 12 wounded.

They pulled back a second time, dragging their wounded and dead through the thick mud to a small opening cratered by American bombs from which helicopters could take the wounded out.

The Viet Cong kept firing and wounded three more Americans.

The helicopters arrived but couldn't land because the opening in the trees was too small. They hovered overhead and lowered a litter.

The Viet Cong opened up on the helicopters. One was hit and just made it back to the battalion command post 1,000 yards away.

A second helicopter came in and managed to lift out one wounded man under heavy fire. It, too, was hit and barely made it back to the command post.

Big Chinook helicopters had to carry both of the damaged helicopters back to Lai Khe.

By then it was 7:30 p.m. and darkness had fallen. It was impossible to take the wounded out by helicopter. The company had to walk through the jungle back to the battalion command post, carrying their dead and wounded.

As the men moved through the black night, artillery shells and bombs dropped behind them to protect their rear. Some shell fragments landed only a few feet away from the troops, but no more Americans were hurt.

Half an hour before midnight, the company reached the command post. Helicopters were there waiting to take the wounded out.

U.S. Command in Saigon said 60 Viet Cong were killed, but B Company saw no enemy bodies on the battlefield.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Farmer of Jackson, Tenn. and Mr. Albert Rice of Calif., visited over the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Allen Rice and daughters and Mrs. Bonnie Rice.

Late one evening I was wearily correcting a set of fourth-grade papers when I noticed a better - than - average offering from a student who had shown a weakness in the subject being tested. I penciled in red across the top of the page what was intended to be the word "Good!"

The following day I sent the marked papers home to be read, signed and returned by the parents. As I checked them over later for signatures, I noticed with chagrin, that on the particular sheet mentioned I had left an "o" out of my word of appraisal.

Down below, in small, neat writing under the parent's signature, was this notation: "I was surprised, too."

SAVING ON IMPULSE

STOCKHOLM AP -- Saving on impulse is the new fad here. If you have a one krona piece (20 U. S. cents) burning in your pocket, all you have to do is step up to an automat, drop the coin and you get a stamp. The stamps are pasted on a savings card. When it's full (15 kronor or $3), you sign the card and place it in the automat. The bank credits your savings account.

The machines are being placed in schools and canteens as an experiment by the Swedish Commercial bank.

Firemen Hot Under Collar

WEST MIDDLESEX, Pa. (AP) — Tempers are growing hotter after police shut down a bingo game at a firemen's carnival and now it looks as if there may be no one around to put out fires.

The firemen are so incensed they are threatening to resign on July 14 unless the borough council gets rid of the mayor, who backed the police action.

Mayor Arthur Pantall says bingo is illegal and the firemen will have to raise money for a new firehouse in some other way.

In our parish, realization of the vitality of English in the Mass startled the congregation. It was the Sunday within the Octave of Christmas. A young mother was having a difficult time with her "active-participating" offspring. To the relief of the entire congregation, she decided to leave shortly after the Communion. As she neared a side door the celebrant intoned the Communion antiphon in loud and intelligible vernacular: "Take the child and his mother and go into the land of Israel, for those who sought the child's life are dead!"

on cigarette smoking and heart disease

Q Can some people smoke a few cigarettes without getting the habit?

A YES. But most people cannot restrict themselves to a few cigarettes now and then. Researchers tell us that the smoker who begins in his teens with a few cigarettes is likely to become a habitual smoker. The best way to avoid the habit is to refuse the first cigarette you're offered.

(M.Missing) (T.Trace)

From the world of Iron Curtain humor comes the story of a young musician traveling by train from Warsaw to Moscow. As he sat in his compartment reading a musical score, a fellow passenger, actually in the secret police, attempted to decipher it. Unable to do so, the agent arrested the musician for espionage, claiming that the score was a secret code.

"But it's only a fugue by Bach," protested the musician as he was dragged off.

The next day, still protesting his innocence, he was brought before the commissar of police, "Well, comrade, you might as well talk," said the commissar. "Bach has already confessed."

Tarheels Adopted a Fresh Approach

In spite of the high standard of living in the United States today, there are those in every state who are poverty - stricken.

They are the people who huddle together in slum tenements, who have no jobs, and who have no way of lifting themselves out of the mire of poverty and despair. The state of North Carolina has recognized the problem of poverty and has taken steps on the local level to combat it.

First, a few facts about North Carolina. It has not stood near the forefront in education. It has a large non-white population, and its per capital income ranks well below the national average. In some areas of the state, poverty and unemployment have been of much concern. How to lift the level of earnings of the entire state has been of major interest to the leaders over the past several years. Many efforts have been made to boast its economy.

A determined attempt to bring additional industry to the state has resulted in much industrial growth and thousands of new factory jobs. In the past four years, North Carolina's rate of growth has far exceeded that of the nation as a whole; but problems of poverty and unemployment still remain. To attack these problems, the state's leadership has adopted a fresh approach and is launching an all - out effort to determine the causes of unemployment and poverty, and to work for the elimination of these causes.

Significantly, the state is launching its own program and will not depend upon any nation-wide bureaucracy. The state's leaders went to some of the nation's large foundations and sought help in financing the fight on poverty. A total of $7 million was obtained from these sources, to be matched by funds from other sources. Thus the grand total available was $14 million.

An organization has been set up independent of the state's executive branch - but functions in coordination with it. Headed by private citizens, its purpose is to wage war on poverty.

One of the first conclusions reached by the group was that much of the state's unemployment has its foundation in the large number of high school dropouts. In this day of automation, and highly skilled workers, there are limited opportunities for uneducated and unskilled workers.

This is almost the same conclusion reached about the nation-wide unemployment and which prompted the federal attack on school dropouts. Reports indicate that little real progress has been made nationally. Even though many former dropouts went back to school, they again "dropped out." The basic causes behind their action were not recognized, and they are back on street corners, once more adding to the problem of juvenile delinquency.

The North Carolina group, however, decided that much of the basis for later school dropouts could be traced back to the primary grades. Accordingly, the first allocation of money to fight poverty was $2 million for use in primary schools on special programs aimed at eliminating the early causative factors that lead to the decision to leave school.

School officials are asked to map plans and programs which would eliminate these factors, and to submit them to the committee on fighting poverty. The plans which the committee believes to have the greatest potential in stopping dropouts will receive grants from the fund.

The committee and local school officials point out that this effort is still in the planning stage, and that it is only experimental. But a great part of its significance lies in the fact that efforts are being made on the local and state level to meet a problem which many big government advocates have contended should be fought only at the national level.

This effort is in contrast to the growing trend in some areas to hand out security and subsistence as a dole, to have government try to take care of its citizens from the highchair to the headstone.

Nearly two years ago Jenkin Lloyd Jones, noted Tulsa, Oklahoma, newspaper editor, commented sagely but sadly, "Relief is gradually becoming an honorable career in America."

No moral person desires anyone to suffer from the ravages of poverty. Certainly, our society must take care of those who are unable to provide for themselves.

However, the obligation of all is to determine and eradicate the causes of poverty, school dropouts, and unemployment.

Another example of enlightened effort against unemployment was displayed by the Aluminum Company of America at its Badin, N.C. plant. It is now engaged in constructing a modern smelting plant on the site of an old smelter. Many of its employees, with the company 25 years or longer, had sufficient skills to do their jobs in the old plant, but were not prepared to operate the automatic machinery in the new plant. Did the company serve notice on these men that they would be laid off when the new plant was opened?

On the contrary, the company hired instructors to teach the fundamentals of reading, writing and arithmetic, thus enabling the workers to continue as useful employees in the new plant.

Instead of handouts and relief rolls, we need to open the doors of opportunity. Some states and large corporations are now recognizing this problem. Some local schools and communities are seeking to find a solution.

These communities and corporations are to be commended for their efforts. Once again, this is the American way of meeting a problem on the local and state level. If the communities, states, and coprorations meet their responsibilities, we need not fear a federal welfare state.

Construction Wonders Of America

(1910-1964)

IN NEW YORK and much of America before World War I, the tortured "gingerbread-ness" of the earlier Victorian period was by now "passe'." Construction of public buildings in a neo-classical style -- a form readily welcomed by many who felt a keen affinity for our European and Mediterranean heritage -- was flourishing.

Pre-eminent were the architects who had studied at Eastern schools and even the Beaux Arts in Paris -- as had Charles Follen McKim, who had spent long hours admiring the Baths of Caracalla in Rome, and who is said to have agreed (over a glass of luncheon claret) on building a stupendous replica of it as the Pennsylvania Railroad's New York City terminus.

Because of their training and longing to transplant old-world beauty into our still "underdeveloped" America, such men could not resist thinking in terms of grandiose design and structural form first -- instead of giving prime attention to the most efficient layout for a building's specific purpose. So by now, New York's running battle with the new and up-and-coming "functional" school for commercial structures which was blowing in from out of Chicago was waxing furious.

Not a true public building, Penn Station (located in one of the world's highest tax-rate areas) was already doomed at the time of its dedication 55 years ago. The developing automobile -- with the dwindling rail traffic that it, trucks, and trailer vans operating on public highways eventually brought about -- was the main culprit.

Penn Station has now fallen beneath the wrecker's ball and is being replaced by a high income-producing office building. Thus pass the glories of the commercial construction world --especially those that turn out to be economically unsound with the passing of time.

Out Of The Mule's Mouth

He Would Have More Relevance on Missouri State Seal Than the Bears Now on It

From Missouri Heritage Column
by Lew Larkin in
The Kansas City Star

I thought it was about time that feller who writes about Missouri heritage got around to us who had a lot to do with it. This writin' feller uses an anniversary peg for humans. Well, I'm loaded with his kind of ammunition.

1. It was 141 years ago that the first jack was sold in Missouri. It was at Columbia and owned by Thomas D. Grant and his name was Tontalegro. (Don't laugh -- we've got Spanish ancestors!)

2. Capt. William Becknell, who blazed the Santa Fe Trail in 1821, brought back jacks and jennets which were the founding stock for mules.

3. By 1857 Missouri had become the mule capital of the world. In that year James H. Adams of Clay county offered to wager $1000 he could show six mules at the St. Louis World Fair that would be judged better than any six of the same class in the United States. No takers. His Mules won 10 premiums, and they kept on winning ever afterwards.

Read your history of the Santa Fe trail and later the covered wagon routes to the West. Oxen were used first but they were slow and got sore feet.

Our cousin, the horse, could clop along faster than the oxen, but at the first signs of Indians, arrows or gunfire, he skittered. Us? They said we were too dumb to know better, but the Indians kept their distance from us because we never got accustomed to all that paint and feathers. Those wagon train drivers preferred mules.

Wars? Mules proved their worth in the war with Mexico. Col. Alexander Doniphan, also Missourian, used them in his army and Gen. Zachary Taylor always insisted on them. In the Civil War Gen.. Grant asked for Missouri soldiers and mules. The Confederates liked mules, too. The Southern minstrels sang, "There isn't a halter strong enough to hold Jo Shelby's mules."

In the Boer war Britain set up a mile buying center at Lathrop, Mo., and bought 115,000 animals and sent them to South Africa. The British called us "ard tails." In its war with Japan, Russia bought thousands of mules, most of them from Missouri.

During the Spanish - American war the government spent $530,000 for Missouri mules. When the first World War started, Britain again sent representatives to Lathrop to buy mules. The total number of Missouri mules sent to Europe in that war was 232,475.

An Englishman, wrote in 1914, "Missouri entered the war on Aug. 4, 1914, because from that date the Missouri mule has been one of the most important factors of the British Army. I have been engaged in France, Egypt, Palestine, the Dardanelles and Saloniki, and everywhere the Missouri mule was the beast of the burden. I hope Missourians will be as obstinate as their mules when the day comes for the diplomats to sit around the peace table and Germany asks for mercy."

During World War I Missouri mules kept the artillery moving, got by on a small oats ration, waded through the mud, fell into shell holes, sniffed the gas and were killed by the thousands. We didn't have too much to do in World War II, but George Patton could hee- haw louder than a top sergeant when one of his tanks turned on its side and we had to right it.

Back in 1903 when a mail carrier at Macon, Mo., tried out one of those new-fangled, smoke - belching gasoline buggies on his route and came back to his sturdy mule, he wrote: "A Missouri mule will go where no automobile in the land would dare go. Nothing will discourage him. You never have to stop and fix him. You don't need a monkey wrench and kit of tools. Difficult roads only enthuse him to greater efforts. A mule eats more than an automobile but he gives greater results."

West Point always has a mule for a mascot. The people of Hannibal, Mo., began the practice of sending a horse to West Point as a mascot but switched to mules 'way back in 1861!'

I'd suggest that someone redesign the Missouri state seal, and instead of two bears put mules on it.

What did bears do for Missouri heritage? Besides, they're extinct in Missouri now. We're almost that way, too. Please, let not the writer of Missouri heritage say in some future column that the Missouri mule is only a "forgotten hybrid."

Byrd Asks If This Is Way To Run War - Answer Is No

in the Commercial Appeal.

WASHINGTON -- Senator Harry Byrd, Jr., (D-Va.), now in his second congressional session as a member of the Armed Services Committee, has behaved like a newspaperman -- which he is in private life -- and has asked questions of the experts.

Byrd recently told the Senate: "I have put this question to our military leaders: 'If you were ordered to conduct the war in such a way as to bring it to an early conclusion with the least possible American casualties, would you follow the present operating procedures?' The answer was No. The military commanders would remove the restrictions on air and naval bombardment of the vital military targets in North Vietnam."

ALL OF US who question military officials are familiar with these views, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff from time to time blurt out something of the sort. But the value of Byrd's contribution is that he sits in the secret council and is quite familiar with the arguments by President Johnson and Secretary McNamara that support the other side of the case.

Moreover, Byrd was applying and relating his information to a very broad spectrum of world relationships. He finds that the United States is wasting its time if it looks to the United Nations to ever back up our resistance to Communist aggression in Vietnam. Either from fear of the communist bloc or indifference to other people's freedom, the United Nations is as gutless as a diplomatic dinner cream puff. Byrd has asked some questions in those quarters, too, and he says:

"Those American officials most closely connected with the UN state privately, if not publicly that of the 122 members of the world organization, perhaps 30 are sympathetic with the United States action in Vietnam."

WHAT, THEN, are we up against? Byrd puts it succinctly. In our over-all strategy, we have the option of making this a short war or a long one. If we aim to get it victoriously over with, then we ought to use our superior air power and our supreme Navy power to obliterate the military targets in North Vietnam. Never were the risks so small of intervention by Red China and Red Russia as they are now.

But if we continue to shape our strategy to a war of attrition and a prolonged conflict, we may avoid risks of enlargement but we are doing what suits the purposes of world communism.

"I am convinced . . ." Byrd told his colleagues, "that the Vietnam War is dragging along to the advantage of both the Soviet Union and Communist China."

It's apparent to hearers and readers of the senator's speech that he did not pick his opinions off the wall. His conclusions, he said, were reached after talks with high officials "including the American ambassador to the UN."

The reference was to Ambassador Arthur Goldberg who is in a good position to tell the President whether the Russians desire peace -- or just desire to talk about it.

Disney Missed But Empire Goes on

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Six months ago today, Walt Disney died, leaving an entertainment empire without the creative force that shaped its destinies for 40 eventful years.

Walter Elias Disney had been the innovator and driving genius behind an enterprise that grew from Mickey Mouse cartoons to diversified entertainment for uncounted millions in almost every nation.

To many observers, his loss seemed crucial to the company that he and brother Roy founded. Yet such was his restlessly forward-looking nature that his plans continue to propel the Disney empire, and will for years.

There have been changes, of course. Key decisions do not come with the crackle of finality, as when Walt was in charge. Now policy matters go to committee, with consequent delay and watering down.

Yet top executives are still so attuned to Walt's way of thinking that decisions hew to his philosophy. Brother Roy, 74 next week, admits the committee system has faults:

"It is not logical for the long pull, but it is logical for this period we are going through. The system is working, and everyone is in perfect harmony. As long as that continues, we're all right.

"But some day one of the guys may grab a project and skyrocket with it. Then we'll turn and make him leader. But he won't be another Walt; I don't think anyone will ever be."

Roy continues as president and board chairman of Walt Disney Productions, and makes command decisions that once were Walt's. Roy was always the moneyman, content to remain in the shadow of his spotlighted younger brother. His new position as solo head has required adjustments.

"I've tried hard not to do anything that I didn't do before, but it hasn't always been easy," said the bespectacled balding Roy.

"I want to stay out of the show world; that's not my field. I couldn't possibly fit in Walt's shoes."

The committee on which he relies for decisions in the show world field consists of eight men, all studio bred. During most of their adult lives they worked closely with Walt; all are passionately devoted to the Disney cause. Two are related to the Disney family.

The committee:

Bill Anderson, long No. 1 aide to Walt in the movie field and now vice president in charge of production.

Roy E. Disney, son of the president and well-versed in studio departments.

Ron Miller, husband of Walt's daughter and now a producer.

Winston Hibbler, expert in nature films, which he narrates.

Bill Walsh, who assisted in creation of the Mickey Mouse Club, "Shaggy Dog" and "Mary Poppins."

Jim Algar, a cartoonist turned producer.

Harry Tytle, a 30-year veteran now producing television shows.

Card Walker, marketing vice president with vast knowledge of what will and will not sell.

"The system is working well," says Bill Anderson, the hearty chief of production. "We've had a couple of knockdown, drag-out fights, but that's healthy. We had 'em with Walt, too. Walt taught us how to fight and get along.

"There is no back-biting here, there are no cliques. That's something Walt would never allow."

The loss of Walt as a decision maker is felt by many of the studio hierarchy.

"We all miss the man," remarked Ron Miller, who has the size of a professional footballer which he was and the profile of an actor which he wasn't.

"If any of us had a major problem, we could take it to Walt and all of a sudden we had no problem. He solved it."

In another office of the animation building you can find producer Bill Walsh, director Robert Stevenson and story man Don DaGradi working on a new fantasy, "Boy-Car-Girl."

DaGradi laughed as he recalled how Walt stayed ahead of his film creators: "We used to be puzzled that he seemed to understand the storyboards—pinned-up—sketches of proposed scenes before we could explain them—or he would ignore whole sections of them.

"Finally he admitted that he would come into our offices the night before and look at the storyboards to see what we were up to. He even went through the wastebaskets!"

"Walt had the habit of coming up with properties that nobody had ever heard of," continued British-born Stevenson. "Just when it seemed that we had nothing to work on, he'd reach into his bottom drawer and produce something worthwhile."

Walt's office, at the far end of the third floor, remains unchanged since his death last Dec. 15. Likewise the studio he built is unchanged in form and operation. That situation is likely to continue until a strong new leader emerges to take charge of the empire that started with a mouse.

$28,725 in Dividends Go To Farmers

Farmers in Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard and Cape Girardeau counties are receiving checks totaling $28,725.80, as dividends on their stock in the Federal Land Bank Association of Sikeston, Hal F. Robertson, manager, said today.

The dividend was declared by directors payable to member-stockholders of record at the close of business May 31.

Payment of this dividend by the association has the effect of reducing the average interest rate paid this year by association members on their loans.

The payment was made possible by a dividend received on association stock in the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis.

During the first five months the association made land bank loans totaling $1,743,014.

Light Quake Rocks Los Angeles Area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sprawling Los Angeles area was rocked by an earthquake late Wednesday night. No serious damage was reported.

Police said plaster fell from the ceiling of a house in north Los Angeles.

In Long Beach, south of the metropolitan center, and west of Los Angeles, residents said windows shook. The tremor was felt on the beaches.

Dr. Charles Richter, seismologist at the California Institute of Technology's seismological laboratory, said the shock was small — with a reading of about 4 on his 10-point scale.

Irish JFK Trip Guide For Jackie

SHANNON, Ireland (AP) — With an Irishman named John F. Kennedy pointing out the sights, Mrs. John F. Kennedy and her two children drove through the Irish countryside in a large bus with big glass windows to give the people of her late husband's ancestral homeland a glimpse of his family.

Mrs. Kennedy, 9-year-old Caroline and 6-year-old John arrived by Irish airliner at Shannon airport to begin a vacation in Ireland.

"There are thousands of people who want to see you," Foreign Minister Frank Aiken told the President's widow. "we have a large bus with big glass windows. It's very comfortable and it would be very gracious of you, Mrs. Kennedy, if you should decide to travel by the bus."

Smiling, Mrs. Kennedy readily agreed and took the first seat beside the door for the 85-mile ride to Waterford. There she and her children will stay at Woodstown House, 10 miles down the Barrow River from Dunganstown, from which the President's great-grandfather Patrick Kennedy emigrated to America.

The 34-year-old John F. Kenney in charge of the bus claimed no close kinship to Mrs. Kenneday's husband, but airport officials said he had recently visited the United States and had seen members of the Kennedy family.

Mrs. Kennedy's plane from New York was delayed 40 minutes by fog.

Stepping off in a belted blue coat with the hem three inches above her knees, she told an airport crowd of 300 to 500:

"I'm just happy to be here with my children in the land my husband loved so much.

"It's a bit like coming home. I do hope we will come back again and again."

Danish Group To Visit U.S.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Approximately 845 Danes of all ages and occupations will visit Americans at their homes, their jobs and their recreation areas this summer through the People to People program.

They will begin arriving at New York June 30 on flights from Copenhagen.

In return, 500 Americans visiting Scandanavia this summer will be received in Danish homes.

About half the Danes coming to the United States through People to People will make from five to eight-day visits at homes in the East, Midwest and West. The others will make their own travel arrangements.

The visiting delegations are expected to stop in the following states: New York, New Jersey, Florida, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Minnesota, Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas, California, Oregon and Washington.

Harold W. Sundstrom, the head of People to People's Scandinavian division, said state and city chapters of People to People in those states will arrange for the visitors to stay in homes, meet people, tour business and industry and take part in community activities.

The Danish groups will include housewives, farmers, clerks, teachers, students, engineers, truck drivers, realtors, factory workers, nurses, doctors and other professional men. All will pay their own expenses.

People to People, which has its international headquarters at Kansas City, was founded by former President Eisenhower to promote friendship and exchanges between individuals of all nations.

Bank Customer Squares Account

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was only a small bank holdup — $41.98.

Police said the bandit was a customer, who told a teller Wednesday that he had a complaint.

A court order delivered earlier to the bank attached the man's account and the bank deducted a check for $41.98 as a result.

"I want my money back," the man demanded.

When the teller refused, he left but returned with a pistol, took the $41.98 at gunpoint and fled.

Presbyterians Adopt Paper Questioning War

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP)— The 107th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. concluded its meeting by adopting a paper questioning the war in Vietnam.

The assembly also reaffirmed its stand on civil disobedience before adjourning Wednesday.

A paper, entitled "Vietnam: Some Questions for Christians," was adopted by voice vote. A statement reaffirming loyalty to the United States was added before the final vote was cast.

The document said the denomination is "deeply perplexed and anguished by the tragic war" and as "Chrstians we ask ourselves what responsibility God means for us to bear in his universal work.

"We direct these questions to ourselves and to the churches rather than to our government," the statement read.

Among the questions posed are these: "Are we as much in agony for the death of one Vietnamese as for the death of one American? Should a government ever draw back from inflicting damage to its enemies at the possible price of military defeat?"

The Rev. John S. McMullen of Columbia, Mo., chairman of the Committee on Church and Society, urged support of the document.

"It is not an echo of any other church, but seeks to be an echo of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S.," he said.

"It does not attempt to make any answers, but to ask some of the right questions."

The Assembly reaffirmed its stand on civil disobedience by rejecting several overtures or bills which sought additional action on stands taken by previous assemblies.

Thus it upheld a statement adopted last year which said Presbyterians have "an obligation...to support and regard with compassion those who practice civil disobedience" whenever legal recourse has been exhausted and when the act is "in Christian conscience and allegiance to almighty God."

GIVEAWAY. When a man came around collecting old suits for a society for the blind, Mrs. David Brinkley, wife of the NBC commentator, donated two suits she'd never seen her husband wear. She assumed he didn't like them. As it turned out, he'd never worn them because he had just bought them.

LONDON (AP) — John Mosley Turner, Britain's oldest man, is 111 today.

He said he has one main ambition left — "I want to celebrate my 112th birthday."

Freedom Short-Lived

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Leslie Norwood Carter, 21, of Memphis, who walked away from state prison Tuesday during a baseball game, was hitchhiking through Nashville Wednesday when a motorist stopped for him.

The driver was Allen Berry, a correctional officer at the prison. Carter was back behind bars a short time later.

My wife was attempting a quick defrosting job on our old refrigerator with a new electric defroster. It was more effective than she anticipated, and when she opened the refrigerator she was greeted with steam -- and two pounds of melted butter streaming down the door. I walked in just in time to hear her call to the children, "Start popping popcorn -- the butter's ready."

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why are the people of Greece referred to as Hellenes?

A—The name stems from Hellen, son of Deucalion and Pyrrha, legendary ancestor of the true Greeks.

Q—Who discovered the Pacific Ocean?

A—Vasco Balboa, the Spanish navigator, but Ferdinand Magellan, the Portuguese navigator, gave it its name.

Q—Is Bonsai an ancient art?

A—Yes. The earliest authentic record of Bonsai is found on a Japanese scroll of 1310, with pictures of dwarfed trees in containers.

Q—What country has no true rivers?

A—Saudi Arabia. Not a single river crosses it, only dry riverbeds called "wadis" which quickly carry away the little rain that falls.

Q—Who was the first European to cross Africa from ocean to ocean?

A—David Livingstone, African explorer and missionary, who completed the journey in 1856.

Tragic April, 1865

By Jim Dan Hill
in the Commercial Appeal

The First Weeks of April, 1865, are the saddest in the history of our Nation - North and South. For the States of the Confederacy, the handwriting was on the wall. But only a few were near enough to see the wall.

M. H. Clark, chief clerk in the office of President Jefferson Davis, could read the words. He spent 24 hours through the day and night of Saturday, 1 April, 1865, sorting out papers. Some he destroyed. Others he packed.

Sunday, 2 April, President and Mrs. Davis were attending services at St. Paul's, Richmond. Dr. C. F. E. Minnegerode did not pause in his soothing sermon as a military aide entered with a note. But all eyes were on the aide. The note was for Mr. Davis.

All of Lee's reserves were in the defense lines. Grant was outflanking him south and west of Petersburg. Lee, to avoid being surrounded, reported he was pulling out while he could. Richmond, capital of the Confederacy, was about to be lost.

President Davis remembered: "I quietly rose and left the church . . .went to my office . . assembled the heads of the departments . . .gave the needful instructions for our removal that night."

The daily newspaper, "Richmond Whig" reported: "Suddenly the streets became filled with men . . .behind them excited negroes with trunks, bundles and luggage . . .All over the city it was the same - wagons, trunks, bandboxes . . "

Mr. M. H. Clark was indeed a forehanded office manager. The Government Train, Richmond and Danville R.R. rolled late that evening, laden with the Confederate President, his cabinet, essential records and all the hard money of the entire Treasury Department - $500,000 in $20 gold coins, bars of gold, ingots of silver, and Mexican coins.

The train escort consisted of sixty boys, midshipmen from the Confederate Naval Academy school ship. Until Davis was captured, 40 days later, the Confederate government was on wheels.

With victory in sight, there should have been joy in the North. And such was the case briefly!

In a masterful withdrawal, Lee's army appeared to be escaping. But at Appomattox, Palm Sunday, 9 April, Lee unexpectedly found his retreat route blocked. Sheridan's army in the Shenandoah Valley had overwhelmed Southern forces there for an unobstructed encirclement.

Joy was unrestrained in Washington. At Ford's Theater a top flight actress, Laura Keene, was making a smash hit of a third rate drama entitled "Our American Cousin." By 13 April General Grant was in Washington. His purpose was an oral report defending the charitable attitude toward Lee and his men. All had been paroled by Grant and sent home without prejudice.

If course, Grant had his earlier orders from Lincoln, who had already initiated in Tennessee, Louisiana, and other "liberated" areas a "Reconstruction" program of mild forgiving, generosity.

This was in spite of vindictive fire brands who were complaining that treason was not being made odious.

The Washington newspapers reported General and Mrs. Grant would be guests of the Lincolns at the Ford Theater, the Good Friday evening of 14 April.

Entire books, thick and ponderous, have been written of that fatal Good Friday. Questions dominate the books. For example, why did the Grants cancel out? The Lincolns went with a young major and his fiancee.

Some books view everyone with dark suspicion. Some even suggest the Secretary of War was in the plot. Other books exonerate almost everybody except John Wilkes Booth, a most famous and highly paid actor of his day.

That afternoon Lincoln was told that Jacob Thompson, erstwhile Mississippi congressman and Secretary of the Interior under President Buchanan, was escaping to England through a Northern port. He had been identified as the secret agent who from Canada had instigated sabotage and arson in Northern cities. Should Thompson be arrested?

"No, I rather think not," Lincoln drawled. "When you have an elephant by the hind leg, and he is trying to run away, it is best to let him run." It was Lincoln's last of many generous decisions to be sustained by humorous logic.

Shock and sorrow swept the nation. The results were far more tragic for the South than for the North.

And Jacob Thompson, last beneficiary of the Lincolnian clemency, what of him? He did "escape" and lived in Canada and England for a time. He returned about three years later to practice law in Memphis. There he died about 1885, but not until he had taken persecution and abuse by Federal officials through the Grant Administration.

Must Competitors Be Equalized In Money Skills?

by David Lawrence

IN PUBLIC ADDRESSES recently, the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice has been arguing, in effect, that a large business in competition with a smaller company should not be allowed to spend more money on salesmanship and promotion of the merits of its products than the competitor is able to do.

This is supposed to be a way to squelch "unfair competition" and to attempt to equalize the economic status of companies striving to get a larger part of the market. Actually, it is not less than the introduction of a technique of governmental regulation which might be understandable in a socialistic state but which comes as a surprise in a country that has faced so well without such totalitarian rules.

For freedom of salesmanship has made possible the growth and success of the American system and to forbid the use of too large an amount of ingenuity could lead conceivably to a limitation on the number or kind of inventions for which a company might acquire patents. Had such a restriction been applied in past decades, it might have been ruled that the airplens hould not be allowed to take business away from the railroads and that trucks should be permitted to make only a limited use of the highways so as not to injure competing methods of transporation.

Might it not be contended also that a large company enjoys an unfair advantage in being able to employ a considerable amount of brain power--not only by engaging many efficient executives but by increasing the number of salesmen -- whereas the smaller company find it too expensive to hire as big a staff?

"UNFAIR COMPETITION" is a phrase that has often been interpreted in the past to mean the use of unfair devices, such as mirepresentation. It is a proper function of Government to ascertain whether any fraudulent claims are made in either the spoke or written words of salesmanship in the promotion of a product or service. But it is certainly not "unfair" to be more skillful or to use more intensive sales methods than those of a competitor.

The various media through which such promotion is conveyed to the public is probably would not be advertsely, affected, because presumably what the larger company may employ or the amount of printed or spoken words it may use to sell its wares will not stimulate but will retard free enterprise. For this is a trend toward the socialist doctrines which today are proving so ineffective even in Communist countries.

Hippity Saddens Schoolmates by Hopping Away

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Twenty-five kindergarten pupils graduate from the West Side Elementary School today with heavy hearts.

They're saddened because their class pet— a grasshopper— is missing.

Nicknamed "Hippity-Hoppity" by the children, the grasshopper first appeared in the classroom three months ago.

His egg was apparently in some plants the teacher, Mary Jackson, brought to the classroom. Then one morning Hippity appeared, a quarter of an inch in length. He grew to one-and-one-half inches.

The first thing the children did when they arrived each morning was look for Hippity. After a few minutes of calling, Hippity appeared, received a few blades of grass from the children, and then spent most of the morning bouncing around geraniums and window ledges.

But Hippity's favorite activity seemed to be jumping on the children, crawling along their arms and sometimes onto their foreheads.

"The children loved it," Mrs. Jackson said. "They all drew pictures of him. Even the children from the other classes visited Hippity."

But then during a heat spell this week a door was left ajar and apparently Hippity hopped out.

The children gingerly canvassed the lawn looking for their pet but to no avail.

Thy Bright Waters

By Brigadier Christine E. McMillan

It was low tide. The sea had retreated a long way out. Between the shore and the thin silver line of the sea lay the muddy flats. Ancient scows and hulks of ships long forgotten seemed to lift themselves heavily from the ooze in which they were embedded. Spars raised ghostly arms and the ribs of a little rowboat gleamed whitely like a skeleton. Old cans, old boxes, dirt, muck, debris -- and far, far out, the dancing silver sea, so clean, so fresh, so wholesome.

Dusk came, and silently, almost unnoticed, the tide turned and the sea came in. Gently at first it came, until it gained momentum. Then the little ripples became waves, and the inch of water was a foot, and soon where had been mud and ugliness was now water, swirling, curling, rushing, hurrying to reach the shore.

"No more the lonely gray-ribbed wreck
And spectral spars offend the eye,
The river is a wide, wide sea;
Deep o'er the flats the waters flow
White shining in the silver light
As if it were a fall of snow."

And looking at the scene of wonder and of beauty, we saw the drab, the sordid, the ugly and the offending swallowed up in the swift-flowing sea, the waters pure, abundant and clear.

Watching with delight that miracle of transforming beauty, we thought it resembled certain revealing moments that come in the life of the spirit. Perhaps we have thought that nothing was the matter with our lives. We have been busy here and there, then suddenly we have caught an inward glimpse, and, to our amazement, have seen that the tide is out -- and what a revelation! How ghastly to see exposed to view the muddy flats of a defeated spirit; the hideous wreckage of submerged sins, only hidden, not conquered; the sordid little bits of flotsam and jetsam, pride, envy, lies, selfishness, all lying open to our horrified gaze. The tide had gone out so slowly that we had no idea it was gone; the waters of God's grace had been gradually ebbing, and we had not known.

And seeing that scene of ruin and desolation in our own spirit, we have turned in anguish to the great Fountainhead, crying:

"Tonight my sins seem all in view,
My life one wreck - strewn waste and wide;
Thou love of God, flow in, deep,
A sea that all my sins shall hide!
And thou, O Christ, our Light, look down
In all the luster of Thy grace,
Till every wave as mirror hold
And image of Thy shining face."

Then the waters came in, not just to cover and hide, but to cleanse and purify, bringing power and grace and strength and beauty.

Mirrored in those crysal depths is the shining of His lovely face, the ineffable radiance of His beautiful spirit which takes possession of the cleansed and purified heart, not only satisfying the soul with beauty and goodness and peace but, by its exquisite grace, drawing other lives to seek that same cleansing and that same indwelling.

Thinking these thoughts, as we stood by the shore, now flooded by the swift, onrushing sea, we remembered other versus:

"O sweet flowing river of mercy and love,
Whose waters are drawn by a bright world above,
We weary earth- pilgrims thy quietude crave,
Our desolate places thy bright waters love.
Dark, dark is the valley where runs not thy stream,
Flow on , mighty river! Earth's deserts redeem. Bear out thy bossom our sorrow and care, Give springs in the dry place, and graces all fair."

Q&A
on cigarette smoking and heart disease

Q Do cigarettes hurt teenagers?

A YES. Even in youth, cigarettes can irritate the throat, cause a hacking cough, cut down on your wind. Most athletes don't smoke because they know it reduces their fitness and endurance. And the earlier you start smoking, and the more cigarettes you smoke daily, the greater your risk of lung disease or heart attacks when you reach your 30's or 40's.

Educators Opposed to Church Rule

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptist colleges and universities are in danger of losing accreditation because of controls exercised by the various state Baptist Conventions, a report said Wednesday night.

The warning was included in a report to the Baptist Education Study Task Conference by a sectional committee on college - denominational relationships.

Leon McBeth, a professor at Southwestern Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth, Tex., said his committee "was especially insistent that a Convention in session should never attempt to regulate internal college affairs.

"To do so," he said, "violates the charter, endangers accreditation, and abrogates the principles of trusteeship."

The committee contended that control of the various Baptist schools should rest with the individuals Boards of Trustees-not with the state Conventions which give financial support.

Robert Alley, a professor at the University of Richmond, said a school's accreditation is endangered when a convention attempts to enforce regulations either "on something peripheral like dancing or something basic like federal aid to education."

The contention was disputed by some of the 300 Baptists attending the nationwide education conference.

Frank A. Hooper of Atlanta, Ga., said Conventions own the various schools, support them financially and have the right to control their internal affairs.

"If we ever forget the fact that Baptists are the ones which both own and control the schools we're in for trouble," Hooper said.

Gordon W. Blackman of Greenville, S. C., president of Furman University, took issue with Hooper and said college accrediting agencies specify that schools must be controlled by Boards of Trustees.

"A Convention giving one or two hours to higher education simply can't determine policy," Blackman said.

The Furman president added that "Baptist schools would have been bankrupt long ago" if they depended on the denomination for all their support.

Missouri Heritage

In The Kansas City Times

Thomas Clement Fletcher, who served as Missouri's 18th governor during one of the state's most perilous periods, was the state's first native-born chief executive, the first Republican and, at 37, the youngest to be elected to the office.

He was born 140 years ago at Herculaneum, the seat of Jefferson County, the descendant of a Maryland slave - owning family. At the age of 17 he went to work in the circuit clerk's office and on May 25, 1846, he was appointed deputy citcuit clerk. Three years later, at 22, he was elected circuit clerk.

He read law and in 1855 he was admitted to the Missouri bar. A year later he became land agent for a railroad, moved to St. Louis and a short time later he and his brother-in-law, Louis J. Rankin, laid out the city of De Soto in Jefferson County.

The slavery question worried the young man. His family had owned slaves. He had been an ardent Benton Democrat but he made the break, joined the Republican party, became an ardent supporter of Abraham Lincoln and a delegate to the national Republican convention in 1860.

The Civil war had much to do with shaping his political future although this all came about in an oblique manner.

He was appointed provost marshal - general at St. Louis at the start of the war. In 1862 he was a colonel in the 31st Missouri infantry, wounded and captured at Chickasaw Bayou, December 29, 1862, confined to Libby prison and released in May 1863, on an exchange of prisoners.

He returned to his Missouri regiment and was present at the fall of Vicksburg and the battle of Chattanooga. While he commanded a brigade under General Sherman in the latter's march through the South, the Radical Republicans back in Missouri nominated him as a candidate for governor.

He became ill and Sherman released him. He returned to Missouri, recovered, organized two regiments and was second in command at Pilot Knob when Sterling Price's dash across Missouri, recovered, organized two regiments and was second in command at Pilot Knob Sterling Price's dash across Missouri was delayed. Lincoln brevetted him a brigadier general.

Fletcher had little time to campaign but it seemingly was not necessary. He carried Missouri by a 42,000 majority, 2,000 more than President Lincoln's majority, defeating Thomas L. Price, a former lieutenant governor and first mayor of Jefferson City.

Fletcher said in his inaugural address, "In the name of truth, of justice, of freedom and of progress, God has permitted us a political triumph, bringing with it the solemn responsibility of promoting those great principles by an enforcement of the fundamental law for securing the peace, happiness and prosperity of the people of the state. Being victorious everywhere, let magnaminity now distinguish our action, and having nothing more to ask for party let us, forgetful of our past differences, seek only to promote the general good of the poeple of the whole commonwealth."

Although Fletcher was a Radical Republican, he wasn't as "radical" as many believed. He felt that the new constitution placed too many limitations on the power of the people, that some provisions might become inapplicable to a progressive people, that certain clauses discriminated against the Negroes and that the suffrage qualifications would disenfranchise loyal men.

A short time after taking office he recommended repeal of the odious test oath of loyalty as it applied to ministers, lawyers, teachers and professional people.

He reduced the state debt, raised taxes, improved the public school system, drew the first general revenue appropiration from the Legislature for the University of Missouri, recommended state training schools for teachers and sold railroads that had failed to pay interest on state -guaranteed bonds.

Wife to husband: "Cheer up — I'm sure in time the anti-poverty program will help people making only $14.00 a year."

Tragic April, 1865

By Jim Dan Hill
in the Commercial Appeal

The First Weeks of April, 1865, are the saddest in the history of our Nation - North and South. For the States of the Confederacy, the handwriting was on the wall. But only a few were near enough to see the wall.

M. H. Clark, chief clerk in the office of President Jefferson Davis, could read the words. He spent 24 hours through the day and night of Saturday, 1 April, 1865, sorting out papers. Some he destroyed. Others he packed.

Sunday, 2 April, President and Mrs. Davis were attending services at St. Paul's, Richmond. Dr. C. F. E. Minnegerode did not pause in his soothing sermon as a military aide entered with a note. But all eyes were on the aide. The note was for Mr. Davis.

All of Lee's reserves were in the defense lines. Grant was outflanking him south and west of Petersburg. Lee, to avoid being surrounded, reported he was pulling out while he could. Richmond, capital of the Confederacy, was about to be lost.

President Davis remembered: "I quietly rose and left the church . . .went to my office . . assembled the heads of the departments . . .gave the needful instructions for our removal that night."

The daily newspaper, "Richmond Whig" reported: "Suddenly the streets became filled with men . . .behind them excited negroes with trunks, bundles and luggage . . .All over the city it was the same - wagons, trunks, bandboxes . . "

Mr. M. H. Clark was indeed a forehanded office manager. The Government Train, Richmond and Danville R.R. rolled late that evening, laden with the Confederate President, his cabinet, essential records and all the hard money of the entire Treasury Department - $500,000 in $20 gold coins, bars of gold, ingots of silver, and Mexican coins.

The train escort consisted of sixty boys, midshipmen from the Confederate Naval Academy school ship. Until Davis was captured, 40 days later, the Confederate government was on wheels.

With victory in sight, there should have been joy in the North. And such was the case briefly!

In a masterful withdrawal, Lee's army appeared to be escaping. But at Appomattox, Palm Sunday, 9 April, Lee unexpectedly found his retreat route blocked. Sheridan's army in the Shenandoah Valley had overwhelmed Southern forces there for an unobstructed encirclement.

Joy was unrestrained in Washington. At Ford's Theater a top flight actress, Laura Keene, was making a smash hit of a third rate drama entitled "Our American Cousin." This was in spite of vindictive fire brands who were complaining that treason was not being made odious.

The Washington newspapers reported General and Mrs. Grant would be guests of the Lincolns at the Ford Theater, the Good Friday evening of 14 April.

Entire books, thick and ponderous, have been written of that fatal Good Friday. Questions dominate the books. For example, why did the Grants cancel out? The Lincolns went with a young major and his fiancee.

Some books view everyone with dark suspicion. Some even suggest the Secretary of War was in the plot. Other books exonerate almost everybody except John Wilkes Booth, a most famous and highly paid actor of his day.

That afternoon Lincoln was told that Jacob Thompson, erstwhile Mississippi congressman and Secretary of the Interior under President Buchanan, was escaping to England through a Northern port. He had been identified as the secret agent who from Canada had instigated sabotage and arson in Northern cities. Should Thompson be arrested?

"No, I rather think not," Lincoln drawled. "When you have an elephant by the hind leg, and he is trying to run away, it is best to let him run." It was Lincoln's last of many generous decisions to be sustained by humorous logic.

Shock and sorrow swept the nation. The results were far more tragic for the South than for the North.

And Jacob Thompson, last beneficiary of the Lincolnian clemency, what of him? He did "escape" and lived in Canada and England for a time. He returned about three years later to practice law in Memphis. There he died about 1885, but not until he had taken persecution and abuse by Federal officials through the Grant Administration.

Must Competitors Be Equalized In Money Skills?

by David Lawrence

IN PUBLIC ADDRESSES recently, the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice has been arguing, in effect, that a large business in competition with a smaller company should not be allowed to spend more money on salesmanship and promotion of the merits of its products than the competitor is able to do.

This is supposed to be a way to squelch "unfair competition" and to attempt to equalize the economic status of companies striving to get a larger part of the market. Actually, it is not less than the introduction of a technique of governmental regulation which might be understandable in a socialistic state but which comes as a surprise in a country that has faced so well without such totalitarian rules.

For freedom of salesmanship has made possible the growth and success of the American system and to forbid the use of too large an amount of ingenuity could lead conceivably to a limitation on the number or kind of inventions for which a company might acquire patents. Had such a restriction been applied in past decades, it might have been ruled that the airplens hould not be allowed to take business away from the railroads and that trucks should be permitted to make only a limited use of the highways so as not to injure competing methods of transporation.

Might it not be contended also that a large company enjoys an unfair advantage in being able to employ a considerable amount of brain power--not only by engaging many efficient executives but by increasing the number of salesmen -- whereas the smaller company find it too expensive to hire as big a staff?

"UNFAIR COMPETITION" is a phrase that has often been interpreted in the past to mean the use of unfair devices, such as mirepresentation. It is a proper function of Government to ascertain whether any fraudulent claims are made in either the spoke or written words of salesmanship in the promotion of a product or service. But it is certainly not "unfair" to be more skillful or to use more intensive sales methods than those of a competitor.

The various media through which such promotion is conveyed to the public is probably would not be advertsely, affected, because presumably what the larger company was restrained from spending would be offset to some extent by the increase in selling effort that the smaller business might eventualy be able to make. But the proposed acts of governmental interference could be an ominous development.

Thus, he chief of the Antitrust Divison says that, while promotional expenditures in themselves "were and are lawful," limitations now should be imposed as a penalty in remedial decrees whenever violations of other phases of the antitrust laws are found.

Furthermore, the Antitrust official says that current policies dealing with monopoly "may well need to be supplemented by those concerned directly with the adverse influences of advertising and other promotional efforts on competition."

But what is "monopoly"? We have seen rulings handed down which hold that, when two or more grocery chains merge -- even though they have less than ten per cent of the total market of a city -- the consolidation is "incipient monopoly."

The owners of large businesses today are no longer a few persons but a vast number of stockholders. If they have invested their money in a company which has sufficient brain power to gain more of the market, is the Federal Government justified in subsidizing the less fortunate group of stockholders of a competing company? Is "risk capital" to be subject now to a further hazard -- governmental intervention?

The main objective of Communism is equalization, irrespective of individual ability. The businesses in the Communist state are subject to the decrees of government which set the pay and allocate the markets in which products may be sold.

Government regulation of business in America has already begun to affect the national economy. The Government uses its power to influence prices, though there is no law authorizing such a procedure. By the allocation of defense contracts and by the dumping on the market of huge quanities of surplus products, pressures have been exerted by Government in the last few years to control prices.

Government can be helpful in encouraging free enterprise, but it also can be disruptive and demoralizing. Attempts to limit the sales force a company may employ or the amount of printed or spoken words it may use to sell its wares will not stimulate but will retard free enterprise. For this is a trend toward the socialist doctrines which today are proving so ineffective even in Communist countries.

Educators Opposed to Church Rule

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptist colleges and universities are in danger of losing accreditation because of controls exercised by the various state Baptist Conventions, a report said Wednesday night.

The warning was included in a report to the Baptist Education Study Task Conference by a sectional committee on college - denominational relationships.

Leon McBeth, a professor at Southwestern Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth, Tex., said his committee "was especially insistent that a Convention in session should never attempt to regulate internal college affairs.

"To do so," he said, "violates the charter, endangers accreditation, and abrogates the principles of trusteeship."

The committee contended that control of the various Baptist schools should rest with the individuals Boards of Trustees-not with the state Conventions which give financial support.

Robert Alley, a professor at the University of Richmond, said a school's accreditation is endangered when a convention attempts to enforce regulations either "on something peripheral like dancing or something basic like federal aid to education."

The contention was disputed by some of the 300 Baptists attending the nationwide education conference.

Frank A. Hooper of Atlanta, Ga., said Conventions own the various schools, support them financially and have the right to control their internal affairs.

"If we ever forget the fact that Baptists are the ones which both own and control the schools we're in for trouble," Hooper said.

Gordon W. Blackman of Greenville, S. C., president of Furman University, took issue with Hooper and said college accrediting agencies specify that schools must be controlled by Boards of Trustees.

"A Convention giving one or two hours to higher education simply can't determine policy," Blackman said.

The Furman president added that "Baptist schools would have been bankrupt long ago" if they depended on the denomination for all their support.

Missouri Heritage

By Lew Larkin
In The Kansas City Times

Thomas Clement Fletcher, who served as Missouri's 18th governor during one of the state's most perilous periods, was the state's first native-born chief executive, the first Republican and, at 37, the youngest to be elected to the office.

He was born 140 years ago at Herculaneum, the seat of Jefferson County, the descendant of a Maryland slave - owning family. At the age of 17 he went to work in the circuit clerk's office and on May 25, 1846, he was appointed deputy citcuit clerk. Three years later, at 22, he was elected circuit clerk.

He read law and in 1855 he was admitted to the Missouri bar. A year later he became land agent for a railroad, moved to St. Louis and a short time later he and his brother-in-law, Louis J. Rankin, laid out the city of De Soto in Jefferson County.

The slavery question worried the young man. His family had owned slaves. He had been an ardent Benton Democrat but he made the break, joined the Republican party, became an ardent supporter of Abraham Lincoln and a delegate to the national Republican convention in 1860.

The Civil war had much to do with shaping his political future although this all came about in an oblique manner.

He was appointed provost marshal - general at St. Louis at the start of the war. In 1862 he was a colonel in the 31st Missouri infantry, wounded and captured at Chickasaw Bayou, December 29, 1862, confined to Libby prison and released in May 1863, on an exchange of prisoners.

He returned to his Missouri regiment and was present at the fall of Vicksburg and the battle of Chattanooga. While he commanded a brigade under General Sherman in the latter's march through the South, the Radical Republicans back in Missouri nominated him as a candidate for governor.

He became ill and Sherman released him. He returned to Missouri, recovered, organized two regiments and was second in command at Pilot Knob when Sterling Price's dash across Missouri, recovered, organized two regiments and was second in command at Pilot Knob Sterling Price's dash across Missouri was delayed. Lincoln brevetted him a brigadier general.

Fletcher had little time to campaign but it seemingly was not necessary. He carried Missouri by a 42,000 majority, 2,000 more than President Lincoln's majority, defeating Thomas L. Price, a former lieutenant governor and first mayor of Jefferson City.

Fletcher said in his inaugural address, "In the name of truth, of justice, of freedom and of progress, God has permitted us a political triumph, bringing with it the solemn responsibility of promoting those great principles by an enforcement of the fundamental law for securing the peace, happiness and prosperity of the people of the state. Being victorious everywhere, let magnaminity now distinguish our action, and having nothing more to ask for party let us, forgetful of our past differences, seek only to promote the general good of the poeple of the whole commonwealth."

Although Fletcher was a Radical Republican, he wasn't as "radical" as many believed. He felt that the new constitution placed too many limitations on the power of the people, that some provisions might become inapplicable to a progressive people, that certain clauses discriminated against the Negroes and that the suffrage qualifications would disenfranchise loyal men.

A short time after taking office he recommended repeal of the odious test oath of loyalty as it applied to ministers, lawyers, teachers and professional people.

He reduced the state debt, raised taxes, improved the public school system, drew the first general revenue appropiration from the Legislature for the University of Missouri, recommended state training schools for teachers and sold railroads that had failed to pay interest on state -guaranteed bonds.

Q&A
on cigarette smoking and heart disease

Q Do cigarettes hurt teenagers?

A YES. Even in youth, cigarettes can irritate the throat, cause a hacking cough, cut down on your wind. Most athletes don't smoke because they know it reduces their fitness and endurance. And the earlier you start smoking, and the more cigarettes you smoke daily, the greater your risk of lung disease or heart attacks when you reach your 30's or 40's.

Man, The Magnificent

By Brigadier Christine E. McMillan

IT's all rather odd actually, for this man is quite unknown to me in the usual sense. I have never seen him, nor heard his voice, nor have I seen a picture of him or known anyone who ever knew him.

Yet I know what he thought about, what the purpose of his life was, and I think I know what he looked like. At times, as I read his burning yet reasoned words, I think I can hear his voice.

At first I only knew his name, Pico della Mirandola, said to be the loveliest name in any language.

Then I met him everywhere, and every time his name appeared, a new, bright facet of his being or thought was seen.

One day, in a dusty secondhand bookshop on Fourth Avenue in the heart of New York, I found a worn, slim volume with his magic name on the cover. It was a translation of his Oration on the Dignity of Man. What a find! His own words, written 500 years ago, to be had for almost a song!

He was young, he was handsome, he was brilliant. He came forth as with the sound of trumpets and viols and flutes from the fear, darkness and ignorance of the Middle Ages, into the dazzling glory of the Renaissance.

Born in 1463, he was a son of the princely house of Mirandola. From the moment he could read he devoted his life to the pursuit of knowledge. From the University of Bologna he wandered from university to university in Italy and France for seven years.

He felt, according to Pater, that there was a spirit of order and beauty in knowledge which would come down and unite what men's ignorance had divided, and renew what time had made dim.

The Renaissance saw a great and transcendent flowering of the arts. It is glorious also because man rose then from the night of fear and superstition, from a sense of helpless bondage to demonic powers, to an awareness of human dignity, of the splendor of the human condition, which may rise, if it will, all gold from its mortal cerements, reflecting the glory of its Creator and Father.

He was the first to proclaim, since the golden days of Greece, the dignity of man. By that, he meant, in his own words, "that high nobility of disciplined reason and imagination, human nature as redeemed by Christ, the uplifting of the truly human person though an exercise of soul and mind."

Few though his words were, they have come down to us and burn still with the clear, bright flame of youth and truth. Perhaps much of what he said then would not satisfy his mature mind, as it does not quite satisfy us. Nevertheless, he spoke to his times, and he speaks to ours, coming to us with immortal freshness and vitality, illuminating our minds by the "effulgence of truth."

He became a member of the Dominican Order at the last, dedicating his life, so he hoped, to walking barefoot through the countryside, proclaiming the glory and magnificance of man made in the image of God.

But that was not to be. At 31, supported by the sacraments and prayers of the great Savonarola, he died and was buried in Florence.

Nothing destroys truth nor dims its piercing light, nor negates its immortal value. The words of Socrates, of Mirandola, of Shakespeare, of Aesop speak to the condition of man and endure as long as man lives and thinks and remembers.

"No power can die that ever wrought for truth,
Thereby a law of Nature it became,
And lives unwithered in its sinewy youth,
When he that called it forth is but a name."

Water Resources Seen As Easing Water Shortages

"Ground water resources" is a subject you'll be hearing a lot about in 1967, as political, economic and civic leaders tackle the problem of what to do about our nation's water supply problems.

These problems have been growing in intensity, due to chronic droughts as well as the increasing contamination and pollution of surface waters - rivers, lakes and other streams- by industrial wastes and sewage. These water supply problems are multiplying at a time when the nation's water needs are more that doubling, due to population growth and the vast use of water in industrial and technological processes.

The oceans are a great potential source of water, but low-cost means of desalinization first must be found to make the use of these surface waters practical. So far, this has not been the case.

Ground water, as the name implies, is the fresh water found in underground rock formations. According to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, there is a virtually inexhaustible supply of such water. In fact, it accounts for more than 95 percent of the fresh water available in the United States today, and it is likely to play a growing role in our water management programs.

While efforts to make more of our surface water supply safe and usable will be intensified, the profusion of fresh water right under all of us is being rediscovered and the individual well is expected to enjoy a new "boom" in the next few years.

To 10 million American families representing 26 percent of the population, the individual well is old hat, since they depend upon it entirely for their water supply. New wells are being drilled at the rate of 1,000 a day. About 50,000 of the new wells drilled each year are in areas with municipal water supplies, and their owners use them as a supplemental source of water to help the family cope with recurring municipal water shortages. Their number is expected to at least double in the next few years.

As has been pointed out, one of the reasons for the growing popularity of the individual water system is the availability of ground water. Another is the tremendous progress made in recent years in well-drilling and pumping methods.

The modern pump is electrically operated, extremely compact and virtually maintenance-free. One of the fastest growing pumps is the submersible, which is about three feet long and four inches in diameter. It's installed right in the well, out of sight and sound.

Care And Cooking Of Country Ham

By Hoyt Alden

WHEN I WAS a kid in Arkansas the only kind of ham we had was country-cured ham and we just took it for granted along with fresh-laid eggs and cream so thick you had to dip it with a spoon.

Most city people, when they encounter country ham for the first time, are inclined to know why someone hasn't told them about it before and where can you get them?

It's become an "in" thing to serve country ham and there are New York restaurants that sell it as if it were caviar. One reason for that, of course, may be that nowadays it costs about as much as caviar, pound for pound.

Anyway, we've been getting inquiries about how to approach a country ham and we should warn anyone who doesn't know better that you don't just cover them with molasses and brown sugar and pop them in the oven as you do a packing house ham.

To begin with, don't be dismayed by its appearance. The older a country ham the better it is, and many a novice, viewing the leathery hide and the green mold which often forms on the outside is inclined to send it back with a note to the effect that he isn't about to eat spoiled ham.

IF YOU DO get your hands on a genuine country ham, we would suggest the Tennessee method, which is as follows:

Soak the ham overnight in cold water. Drain it and wipe it dry. If necessary, scrub it with a stiff brush.

Them mix a quart of corn meal, a cup of brown sugar and a tablespoon of pepper. Add just enough cold water to the roasting pan as needed, but don't baste the ham. When it comes out of the oven let it cool a little. Then remove the paste and skin the ham.

Next, sprinkle it with bread crumbs and put it back in the oven and let it bake until the bread crumbs are browned.

That's how they do it in Tennessee. In Virginia, where they claim to make the best smoked hams in the world, they have a different method. Virginians pride themselves on being connoisseurs of country ham and some of them are so particular they won't eat any but hams from the left leg of a hog, the theory being that a hog scratches himself with his right leg which makes it a little tougher than the left.

Soak it overnight. Then boil it in a quart of either Burgundy or claret mixed with half a pint of brandy and a quart of apple cider. Boil it gently until it is tender.

Remove the excess fat, stud it with cloves and coat it with moistened brown sugar. Put pineapple rings on top and then bake the ham in a hot oven for half an hour.

You don't have to bake country ham. It's wonderful fried. Just cut your slices, not too thick, and fry them in the skillet. Then pour in a little water to make red-eye gravy and if you happen to have some corn bread around you'll know it's true what they say about the South.

Country style ham and eggs are just about as good a breakfast as you can put together. Take a center slice of country ham about a quarter of an inch thick. Fry it slowly on one side and then turn it over. Break your eggs gently right on top of the ham. Sprinkle them with salt and pepper, cover the skillet, turn the heat down a little and let the eggs cook until they're set.

One of the best country hams I ever ate was cooked with brown sugar and green apples. After being soaked overnight it was placed in a pot of water with two pounds of brown sugar and a half dozen peeled green apples.

The 12-pound ham was boiled slowly for three hours and then allowed to cool in the stock. Then it was coated with a paste made of brown sugar and good sherry and flavored with a little dry mustard. Just enough of the paste to cover the ham with a thin layer.

Then bake it for an hour in a medium oven, basting frequently with the liquid in which it was boiled.

WE EVEN have one request for information on how to cure a ham. Well, here's how they do it in Maryland, which is also famous ham country.

"For 500 pounds of meat use one peck of fine salt rubbed well into all parts of the ham. Use all the salt. Lay them in a tight box, skin side down, one top of another, for four days. Take them out of the box, keeping all the salt that has not been absorbed. To every ham allow half a pound of brown sugar, half a teaspoon of black pepper and half a teaspoon of saltpeter ground fine. Into the hock rub fine red pepper, also around the hip joint. Rub the mixture of sugar, pepper and saltpeter well into the hams, packing back the salt not dissolved.

Put the hams back in the box, skin side down and let them stay for six weeks. Then hang them and smoke them with hickory wood for six days, five or six hours each day. Tie them in bags, dip them in a medium thin whitewash and hang them up again. They should be ready to eat in six months.

New Debt Ceiling Limit Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee proposed today a $22 billion increase in the national debt ceiling— $7 billion less than the increase rejected by the House last week.

It provided, however, for further increases later.

Approved by a straight party vote, the new $358 billion figure probably will be tested next week in the House, which rejected a $365 billion ceiling by a 13-vote margin June 7.

Republicans announced they oppose the new bill.

To End In A Bang?

By Brigadier Christine E. McMillan (R)

THE TAXI driver must have had a bad day. "Too many people," he muttered, weaving his way through the evening rush-hour traffic.

As if to himself, he went on: "I don't know anymore what it's all about. . .all this rushing and building and going to the moon. . . There's nothin' to it because it's all goin' to end in the big bang anyway".

Our valiant though futile attempt to solve the riddle of mankind and of life in about three minutes was not successful.

"If God's around why don't He do something then?"

We felt disturbed and troubled afterwards, realizing that he is only one of untold thousands who feel the same way, men and women who, beset by doubt and nearly floored by the general sense of malaise abroad in the world today, shrug their shoulders and say, "What's the use?"

Thinking about this and wondering what, beside platitudes, the believer has to offer in affirmation of faith, we turned to a new book -- new to us, although published some years ago. It is The Shaking of the Foundations by Paul Tillich.

Admittedly, Tillich makes rough going for the lay reader. One struggles on, feeling one should listen to this great contemporary voice, yet only able to catch glimpses of the truths he is speaking.

This book, however, is different. It is a collection of sermons prepared for the laity by one "who is struggling to understand the work of the Eternal in the events of time and circumstances."

The first chapter is on the shaking of the foundations and is prefaced by two extracts from Jeremiah 4:23 - 30, and Isaiah 23:18-20, wherein both writers speak of the utter ruin and desolation of the earth. . . "the land in flight. . . every city abandoned. . . earth breaks in pieces. . . the foundations of the earth do shake."

As Tillich points out, in centuries past these words meant little or nothing. Today men now living have experienced their full horror. "This is no longer vision; it has become physics."

Not only is this shaking and crumbling seen in the physical world, but in the ordinary, everyday living of mankind, chaos and confusion reign.

The Church, taken unawares by a startling advance of scientific knowledge, is going through a period of torturous reappraisal.

A lot of rubbish has been written about God being dead. This has unsettled and disturbed many. The values, ethics, and morals by which men lived are no longer what they were. The foundations are shaken.

"My kindness shall not depart from thee, nor shall the convenant of my peace be removed. . .the world itself shall crumble but my righteousness shall be forever and my salvation knows no end." He is the foundation on which all foundations are laid, and this foundation cannot be shaken.

Lord, in Thy light, may we see through the crumbling of a world, the Rock of eternity and the salvation which has no end.

By Hoyt Alden

WHEN I WAS a kid in Arkansas the only kind of ham we had was country-cured ham and we just took it for granted along with fresh-laid eggs and cream so thick you had to dip it with a spoon.

Most city people, when they encounter country ham for the first time, are inclined to know why someone hasn't told them about it before and where can you get them?

It's become an "in" thing to serve country ham and there are New York restaurants that sell it as if it were caviar. One reason for that, of course, may be that nowadays it costs about as much as caviar, pound for pound.

Anyway, we've been getting inquiries about how to approach a country ham and we should warn anyone who doesn't know better that you don't just cover them with molasses and brown sugar and pop them in the oven as you do a packing house ham.

To begin with, don't be dismayed by its appearance. The older a country ham the better it is, and many a novice, viewing the leathery hide and the green mold which often forms on the outside is inclined to send it back with a note to the effect that he isn't about to eat spoiled ham.

IF YOU DO get your hands on a genuine country ham, we would suggest the Tennessee method, which is as follows:

Soak the ham overnight in cold water. Drain it and wipe it dry. If necessary, scrub it with a stiff brush.

Them mix a quart of corn meal, a cup of brown sugar and a tablespoon of pepper. Add just enough cold water to the roasting pan as needed, but don't baste the ham. When it comes out of the oven let it cool a little. Then remove the paste and skin the ham.

Next, sprinkle it with bread crumbs and put it back in the oven and let it bake until the bread crumbs are browned.

That's how they do it in Tennessee. In Virginia, where they claim to make the best smoked hams in the world, they have a different method. Virginians pride themselves on being connoisseurs of country ham and some of them are so particular they won't eat any but hams from the left leg of a hog, the theory being that a hog scratches himself with his right leg which makes it a little tougher than the left.

Soak it overnight. Then boil it in a quart of either Burgundy or claret mixed with half a pint of brandy and a quart of apple cider. Boil it gently until it is tender.

Remove the excess fat, stud it with cloves and coat it with moistened brown sugar. Put pineapple rings on top and then bake the ham in a hot oven for half an hour.

You don't have to bake country ham. It's wonderful fried. Just cut your slices, not too thick, and fry them in the skillet. Then pour in a little water to make red-eye gravy and if you happen to have some corn bread around you'll know it's true what they say about the South.

Country style ham and eggs are just about as good a breakfast as you can put together. Take a center slice of country ham about a quarter of an inch thick. Fry it slowly on one side and then turn it over. Break your eggs gently right on top of the ham. Sprinkle them with salt and pepper, cover the skillet, turn the heat down a little and let the eggs cook until they're set.

One of the best country hams I ever ate was cooked with brown sugar and green apples. After being soaked overnight it was placed in a pot of water with two pounds of brown sugar and a half dozen peeled green apples.

The 12-pound ham was boiled slowly for three hours and then allowed to cool in the stock. Then it was coated with a paste made of brown sugar and good sherry and flavored with a little dry mustard. Just enough of the paste to cover the ham with a thin layer.

Then bake it for an hour in a medium oven, basting frequently with the liquid in which it was boiled.

WE EVEN have one request for information on how to cure a ham. Well, here's how they do it in Maryland, which is also famous ham country.

"For 500 pounds of meat use one peck of fine salt rubbed well into all parts of the ham. Use all the salt. Lay them in a tight box, skin side down, one top of another, for four days. Take them out of the box, keeping all the salt that has not been absorbed. To every ham allow half a pound of brown sugar, half a teaspoon of black pepper and half a teaspoon of saltpeter ground fine. Into the hock rub fine red pepper, also around the hip joint. Rub the mixture of sugar, pepper and saltpeter well into the hams, packing back the salt not dissolved.

Put the hams back in the box, skin side down and let them stay for six weeks. Then hang them and smoke them with hickory wood for six days, five or six hours each day. Tie them in bags, dip them in a medium thin whitewash and hang them up again. They should be ready to eat in six months.

New Debt Ceiling Limit Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee proposed today a $22 billion increase in the national debt ceiling— $7 billion less than the increase rejected by the House last week.

It provided, however, for further increases later.

Approved by a straight party vote, the new $358 billion figure probably will be tested next week in the House, which rejected a $365 billion ceiling by a 13-vote margin June 7.

Republicans announced they oppose the new bill.

To End In A Bang?

By Brigadier Christine E. McMillan (R)

THE TAXI driver must have had a bad day. "Too many people," he muttered, weaving his way through the evening rush-hour traffic.

As if to himself, he went on: "I don't know anymore what it's all about. . .all this rushing and building and going to the moon. . . There's nothin' to it because it's all goin' to end in the big bang anyway".

Our valiant though futile attempt to solve the riddle of mankind and of life in about three minutes was not successful.

"If God's around why don't He do something then?"

We felt disturbed and troubled afterwards, realizing that he is only one of untold thousands who feel the same way, men and women who, beset by doubt and nearly floored by the general sense of malaise abroad in the world today, shrug their shoulders and say, "What's the use?"

Thinking about this and wondering what, beside platitudes, the believer has to offer in affirmation of faith, we turned to a new book -- new to us, although published some years ago. It is The Shaking of the Foundations by Paul Tillich.

Admittedly, Tillich makes rough going for the lay reader. One struggles on, feeling one should listen to this great contemporary voice, yet only able to catch glimpses of the truths he is speaking.

This book, however, is different. It is a collection of sermons prepared for the laity by one "who is struggling to understand the work of the Eternal in the events of time and circumstances."

The first chapter is on the shaking of the foundations and is prefaced by two extracts from Jeremiah 4:23 - 30, and Isaiah 23:18-20, wherein both writers speak of the utter ruin and desolation of the earth. . . "the land in flight. . . every city abandoned. . . earth breaks in pieces. . . the foundations of the earth do shake."

As Tillich points out, in centuries past these words meant little or nothing. Today men now living have experienced their full horror. "This is no longer vision; it has become physics."

Not only is this shaking and crumbling seen in the physical world, but in the ordinary, everyday living of mankind, chaos and confusion reign.

The Church, taken unawares by a startling advance of scientific knowledge, is going through a period of torturous reappraisal.

A lot of rubbish has been written about God being dead. This has unsettled and disturbed many. The values, ethics, and morals by which men lived are no longer what they were. The foundations are shaken.

"My kindness shall not depart from thee, nor shall the convenant of my peace be removed. . .the world itself shall crumble but my righteousness shall be forever and my salvation knows no end." He is the foundation on which all foundations are laid, and this foundation cannot be shaken.

Lord, in Thy light, may we see through the crumbling of a world, the Rock of eternity and the salvation which has no end.

Steaks--Which Are The Broilables

Steaks are undoubtedly one of this country's favorite cuts of beef -- and a leading choice for outdoor cooking.

But you can't just walk into a food store and pick up any steak and expect the desired juicy, tender, flavorful results. Nutritionaly, one steak is as good as the next, and they all taste great when properly cooked. But, there are broilables . . . and there are others.

For best results, advises the Consumer and Marketing Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, look for the U.S. grade mark. U. S. Prime and U. S. Choice grades of beef make fine outdoor cookery subjects.

These higher grades have a greater proportion of meat to bone. Also, they are characteristically juicy, tender and flavorful.

Some U.S. Good meat can be broiled, but you should not expect the same fine eating as the higher grades will provide. Marinating is advised, as this grade will not be as tender nor as juicy as Prime or Choice.

Now you are ready to look over the kinds of steak offered.

PORTERHOUSE generally is considered the "best" steak -- the one to serve to company you want to impress. It probably is the highest priced steak, but broils perfectly. Look for porterhouse to have a T-shaped bone, plus tenderloin.

T-BONE steaks have less tenderloin than porterhouse, but are otherwise very similar. The bone for which they are named makes these broilables easy to spot.

CLUB steaks have no tenderloin, so usually sell for a little less than their "cousin" cuts, porterhouse and T-bone. They are sized well for individual servings.

SIRLOIN are more variable in tenderness and amount of bone than the previously mentioned steaks. Choose carefully for minimum of bone. Because this steak is quite large it is sometimes sold by halves. Top sirloin is more tender than bottom sirloin.

RIB or RIB EYE steaks compare well with others. They boast the tenderness and flavor of the highly valued rib roast.

ROUND steak is an economical cut, having little waste. U. S. Prime grade can be broiled if you desire, but because it is less tender than other steaks, lower grades give better results when braised.

For very special occasions, you might want to consider a strictly tenderloin steak -- no bone -- FILET MIGNON.

One final suggestion: no matter what kind of steak you decide upon, choose one at least an inch thick. Thinner cuts won't be as juicy.

Inadequate Defense Against World War III

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

What's the use, it may be asked, of spending billions on a "Great Society" when it can be demolished overnight by a nuclear was initiated by a potential enemy - a reckless dictatorship in Moscow?

American military officers, including the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, are worried and anxious today because the Soviet Union is developing an antimissile system which could weaken our deterrent power. The Administration has been wavering because about 30 billion dollars would have to be spent in the next few years by the United States to get an effective means of intercepting enemy missiles.

The argument is offered, on the other hand, by Secretary McNamara that, for the time being at least, we have enough offensive missiles to inflict a measure of destruction which would be too damaging for an enemy to accept. But the awesome fact is that there is under way a build-up of antimissile defenses by the Soviets. They have a three-year lead now. If not overtaken and a sudden attack comes, this could mean a loss of 130 million American lives.

Ironically enough, the United Nations - supported by American policy - is concentrating today not on the menace of nuclear force by major powers but on the enforcement of sanctions designed to repress a white minority in Rhodesia. By contrast, not a thing is being done to emancipate the hundreds of millions of enslaved people in Eastern Europe and Asia.

Why is the United Nations, including the United States Government, so ready to punish the white minority in Rhodesia but unwilling to impose a trade embargo in analogous situations? Majorities are being oppressed by minority rule in East Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. This is the case also with the 250 million people in Red China who are being deprived of the right of self-determination.

The United Nation's Charter, moreover, is being repeatedly violated by both the Soviet Union and Red China as they assist the aggressor from North Vietnam in the effort to conquer South Vietnam.

The Soviet Union and Red China indeed are openly participating in the aggression in Southeast Asia. The troops which they arm are being deployed against the forces of the United States and its allies who are striving to preserve the freedom of small nations.

Even though the American and allied armies are engaged in an idealistic mission to protect the people of South Vietnam, the United Nations is indifferent to the Communist aggression. Also, the free governments of Western Europe are not speaking out in defense of the very principles which were at stake in two world wars and were vindicated by huge sacrifices.

In Europe there is disunity. Why is General de Gaulle unwilling to join in the defense plans of free nations, though France itself has twice been saved by the sacrifices of other countries, particularly the United States? Why are the people of Great Britain willing to trade with an enemy which is helping to kill American boys today? Why is there no concerted action by the Western Alliance? We hear only about the disintegration of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The press in many lands is filled, meanwhile, with accusations against the United States as if America were herself engaged in a war of aggression instead of in an altruistic endeavor for the benefit of the whole world.

The threats to world peace are plain to see. The cupidity and ambition of minority groups which rule the Soviet Union and Red China, respectively, are all too apparent. When will the eyes of the world be focused on the true enemies - the cliques of irresponsible men who can pull the trigger at any moment or can intimidate vast numbers of people on the European and Asiatic continents and cause them to bow to the will of a tyrannical regime?

Under these disturbing conditions, why is there no discussion publicly in the United Nations about the possible consequences - a third world war? It is the function of the United Nations and of every government to speak up in defense of human liberty.

The best hope for peace lies not in appeasing dictatorial rulers but in reaching the hearts and minds of peoples. Compared to the billions of dollars being spent for the "Great Society," only paltry sums are being appropriated by Congress to improve the means of communication between the peoples of this and other countries.

Circumstances similar to those which preceded World War I and World War II are visible all around us, both in Europe and in Asia. This is why it is pertinent to ask: Why are we in America neglecting the construction of an antimissile system of defense? And why are we not warning the people everywhere of the growing danger of a third world war?

Widows Haunted By Fire

EDITOR'S NOTE— Just when they think the pain is finally fading, it comes back to hurt again. And then the everlasting, lonely nights start over. They are the widows— and the orphans— of 12 firemen who perished Oct. 17, 1966, in the worst tragedy in the history of the New York Fire Department. Fathers Day is June 18, but in 12 New York homes, at least, the usual gaiety will be absent.

By JEAN HELLER

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's a strange feeling, thinking he's just at work and tonight maybe he'll be home. Then the night comes and the house is quiet. The kids are in bed. But he doesn't come home. He never comes home."

And Virginia Higgens knows he never will.

Walter Higgens, battalion chief, New York City Fire Department, died last Oct. 17 with 11 other firemen in the worst tragedy in the department's history.

In the boiling black smoke and the stench of burning chemicals, the weakened floor of a 75-year-old building collapsed into an incinerating fire, dropping the men in after it.

The block-long scar of gutted buildings at Broadway and 22nd Street has long since been healed by bulldozers and covered over with an asphalt parking lot.

But for 12 widows and 36 children, the pain cannot be pushed away or covered over.

"It's the way they died, that's what keeps you awake," said Mrs. Joseph Priore. "That was the hardest adjustment to make."

Jeanette Kaminsky, who lost her husband, Rudolph, after 15 years of marriage, has found some comfort in her two daughters, Glorianne, 12, and Rose Marie, 13, who have done their best to make the adjustment easier.

"Rose Marie isn't the type to break down, but every once in a while she goes to her room and closes the door," Mrs. Kaminsky said. "It got to Glorianne too. Her father used to have pet names for her and once, by mistake, I called her by one of those names. She said, 'Mommy, please don't call me that. That was Daddy's name for me.'

"They hear in school what their friends are doing with their fathers and they come home and tell me. That's when I can see their misery although they try to hide it because they're trying to bolster me. It's especially bad now that Fathers Day is coming. That used to be such a celebration in our house."

Daniel Rey, 26, was a probationary fireman who followed his father and older brother into the department. He had never been called out on a big fire before.

For eight months, Virginia Rey has been haunted by the question, "How did he know?"

She recalled: "He used to say to me, 'You know honey, I know that when the first big fire comes, I won't come home. I know I'll never come back.' He knew he was going to die in the Fire Department.

"The night of the fire his mother called him at the fire house. He told her, 'Nothing big has happened yet but I have the feeling it'll be tonight. The big one's going to come tonight.'

"How did he know?"

People who never knew that a Walter Higgens or a Thomas Reilly or a William McCarron or a Carl Lee had existed lined the streets to pay respects— and sometimes to weep— as flag-draped fire engines bore their bodies to funeral sites.

People who had never met John Finley, John Berry, James Galanaugh, Bernard Tepper or Joseph Kelly felt instinctively that their wives and children might need help.

Thousands sent their checks and their dollars and their coins to help ease the financial crisis. The resulting fund, which now totals more than $646,000, will provide an average of nearly $54,000 per family.

But along with these thousands of people, there also was a share of sick ones, the type who make anonymous, profane and insulting telephone calls.

Several women reported a rash of them after the fire. Dorothy Tepper changed her telephone number three times and finally had it unlisted.

But in comparison to those who genuinely wanted to help, the sick ones were few.

The fund, plus Social Security and pension payments, will permit most of the women to remain with their children instead of going to work. But in some cases, that freedom also gives the women too much idle time to think.

Ethel and John Finley celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary last Oct. 14. Three days later their marriage died in the fire. Three of the four Finley children are grown and away from home. Only Joseph, 11, remains.

"There just wasn't enough for me to do," Mrs. Finley said. "I'd sit around and be miserable most of the time. So I took a job two days a week as a volunteer nurses aide. It helps to get your mind off your own grief and concentrate on somebody else's pain."

For Marie Reilly and Dorothy Tepper, remembering is so terrible that they won't talk about it. "We still expect him to come home," Mrs. Reilly said. "I'd rather not talk about it. I'm not that strong yet."

Some who think they have the strength, find that they're wrong.

"Yesterday I saw the monument on his grave for the first time," Grace Priore said softly. "You think you have full control and then something like that comes up. It's the little things that shake you."

Often the little things are the children.

Winifred McCarron has three sons, the youngest aged 3.

"The baby talks about him constantly," she said. "It doesn't bother me unless I'm having one of my bad days. Then I'll break."

Ann Kelly's son, Darin, is 6.

"I thought he was still too young to really know," Mrs. Kelly said. "But once in a while he'll come across things we have in the house that remind him of his father. He remembers how his father taught him how to move the typewriter carriage back and forth. Sometimes he walks to the desk and just stands there moving it, over and over.

"Those are the times I think he hurts."

Terrence Lee is 7. His brother Lance is 6.

These moments of anguish, the women all say, become fewer and fewer with the passing of time.

Fathers Day is June 18, but in 12 New York homes, at least, the usual gaiety will be absent.

By JEAN HELLER

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's a strange feeling, thinking he's just at work and tonight maybe he'll be home. Then the night comes and the house is quiet. The kids are in bed. But he doesn't come home. He never comes home."

And Virginia Higgens knows he never will.

Walter Higgens, battalion chief, New York City Fire Department, died last Oct. 17 with 11 other firemen in the worst tragedy in the department's history.

In the boiling black smoke and the stench of burning chemicals, the weakened floor of a 75-year-old building collapsed into an incinerating fire, dropping the men in after it.

The block-long scar of gutted buildings at Broadway and 22nd Street has long since been healed by bulldozers and covered over with an asphalt parking lot.

But for 12 widows and 36 children, the pain cannot be pushed away or covered over.

"It's the way they died, that's what keeps you awake," said Mrs. Joseph Priore. "That was the hardest adjustment to make."

Jeanette Kaminsky, who lost her husband, Rudolph, after 15 years of marriage, has found some comfort in her two daughters, Glorianne, 12, and Rose Marie, 13, who have done their best to make the adjustment easier.

"Rose Marie isn't the type to break down, but every once in a while she goes to her room and closes the door," Mrs. Kaminsky said. "It got to Glorianne too. Her father used to have pet names for her and once, by mistake, I called her by one of those names. She said, 'Mommy, please don't call me that. That was Daddy's name for me.'

"They hear in school what their friends are doing with their fathers and they come home and tell me. That's when I can see their misery although they try to hide it because they're trying to bolster me. It's especially bad now that Fathers Day is coming. That used to be such a celebration in our house."

Daniel Rey, 26, was a probationary fireman who followed his father and older brother into the department. He had never been called out on a big fire before.

For eight months, Virginia Rey has been haunted by the question, "How did he know?"

She recalled: "He used to say to me, 'You know honey, I know that when the first big fire comes, I won't come home. I know I'll never come back.' He knew he was going to die in the Fire Department.

"The night of the fire his mother called him at the fire house. He told her, 'Nothing big has happened yet but I have the feeling it'll be tonight. The big one's going to come tonight.'

"How did he know?"

People who never knew that a Walter Higgens or a Thomas Reilly or a William McCarron or a Carl Lee had existed lined the streets to pay respects—and sometimes to weep—as flag-draped fire engines bore their bodies to funeral sites.

People who had never met John Finley, John Berry, James Galanaugh, Bernard Tepper or Joseph Kelly felt instinctively that their wives and children might need help.

Thousands sent their checks and their dollars and their coins to help ease the financial crisis. The resulting fund, which now totals more than $646,000, will provide an average of nearly $54,000 per family.

But along with these thousands of people, there also was a share of sick ones, the type who make anonymous, profane and insulting telephone calls.

Several women reported a rash of them after the fire. Dorothy Tepper changed her telephone number three times and finally had it unlisted.

But in comparison to those who genuinely wanted to help, the sick ones were few.

The fund, plus Social Security and pension payments, will permit most of the women to remain with their children instead of going to work. But in some cases, that freedom also gives the women too much idle time to think.

Ethel and John Finley celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary last Oct. 14. Three days later their marriage died in the fire. Three of the four Finley children are grown and away from home. Only Joseph, 11, remains.

"There just wasn't enough for me to do," Mrs. Finley said. "I'd sit around and be miserable most of the time. So I took a job two days a week as a volunteer nurses aide. It helps to get your mind off your own grief and concentrate on somebody else's pain."

For Marie Reilly and Dorothy Tepper, remembering is so terrible that they won't talk about it. "We still expect him to come home," Mrs. Reilly said. "I'd rather not talk about it. I'm not that strong yet."

Some who think they have the strength, find that they're wrong.

"Yesterday I saw the monument on his grave for the first time," Grace Priore said softly. "You think you have full control and then something like that comes up. It's the little things that shake you."

Often the little things are the children.

Winifred McCarron has three sons, the youngest aged 3.

"The baby talks about him constantly," she said. "It doesn't bother me unless I'm having one of my bad days. Then I'll break."

Ann Kelly's son, Darin, is 6.

"I thought he was still too young to really know," Mrs. Kelly said. "But once in a while he'll come across things we have in the house that remind him of his father. He remembers how his father taught him how to move the typewriter carriage back and forth. Sometimes he walks to the desk and just stands there moving it, over and over.

"Those are the times I think he hurts."

Terrence Lee is 7. His brother Lance is 6.

These moments of anguish, the women all say, become fewer and fewer with the passing of time.

Community Education Key to Success Of Bloomfield Girl Scout Day Camp

BY WARREN SOKOLIS

BLOOMFIELD - This week about 80 Brownie, Junior and Cadet Girl Scouts are participating in a day camp that combines camping skills with an education in community affairs.

This is the ninth annual Back 40 Day Camp at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Welborn.

At the day camp instruction is given in such traditional scouting skills as cooking, first aid, knot-tying, Morse code and crafts. In this respect the Back 40 camp resembles other scouting day camps.

However, the camp becomes unique with its emphasis on community affairs. The scouts are learning about local and county governments.

Included in the community affairs education were tours of the post office, city hall, fire station and the courthouse.

The recorder's office was one of the highlights of the courthouse tour. The girls were shown the files dating back to the 19th century when all records were written in ornate longhand.

At the post office the scouts had an opportunity to observe the process of handling mail and learned the importance of the zip code system.

At the new city hall, which was completed this year, Mayor Alvin Corbin conducted a tour of the city offices and explained the importance of each office in serving the needs of the community.

Scouts were taken to the county jail where Sheriff Ralph Temples explained the process of fingerprinting and then fingerprinted the scouts.

The purpose of these tours was to acquaint the scouts with the processes of government at the local and county levels, Mrs. Joe Welborn explained.

Community service is stressed in the year-around scouting program, she continued.

Mrs. Welborn, overall director of the Girl Scouts at Bloomfield, noted that the Girl Scouts assist in homemaking activities, the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, the community Thanksgiving project, Heart Fund drive, voter registration drive, the Medicare information drive and the council on the aging.

At Christmas the scouts make and repair toys for distribution to children from low-income families.

In special sessions of the city council the girls are given an opportunity to serve as city officials. This is an additional method of learning the process of local government, Mrs. Welborn pointed out.

The scouting program is designed with hopes that the girls will carry their training in community service over into their adult lives, she said.

The day camp has been successful throughout the years because of the cooperation from parents and community officials, she noted. They volunteer their time to help the scouting program to achieve its objectives.

The Brownie campsite, called "Puppeteers," is directed by Mrs. Charles Christian. She is assisted by Mrs. Vader Link and Senior Scouts Jackie Baker of Gideon and Brenda French.

The Junior Scout campsite, "Shady Oak," is directed by Mrs. Hugh Lay, Mrs. G. D. Scism, Mrs. Don Ross and Mrs. Edward McCoy. Senior Scout Elizabeth Welborn is assisting at this site.

The "Back 40 Bunnies" is the campsite name chosen by the Cadets. Mrs. Paul Ralaford is the director, assisted by Mrs. Bob Beal.

Boy Scouts are also on hand to help out with the camp. Rick Harper and Danny Gaines, both Explorers, and Steve Henry, Jackie Couger, and James Lintz, all Boy Scouts, have volunteered their time to make the camp a success.

Eagle Scout Briney Welborn is serving as an assistant official and is in charge of the inter-troop competition.

Welborn, who is national council representative of the Boy Scouts of America and Sioux district president, is helping at the site.

Even the youngest member of the Welborn family, R. Kip, 5, is participating in the week's activities. He had been assigned the duties of mascot and official bell ringer.

Mrs. John French is the day camp registrar and purchasing agent.

Others helping with the camp projects are:

Melvin Williams and Delmar Underwood, city aldermen; Cecil Swallows, a postal employee; E. W. Aslin, director of community housing; Mrs. Herb Crites, recorder of deeds, and the city fire department.

The activities tonight begin with a reception on the Welborn patio at 6:30 p.m. The public is invited to the reception.

Handiwork done by the scouts during the camp will be on display for public viewing at the campsites.

The closing flag ceremony will be followed by a program of song and dance presented by the scouts.

The value of the day camp was summed up by Sharon Christian, 9, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Christian, when she said; "We learn how to be nice to others, and we learn how to work with others."

Pearls from coconuts make up a curious chapter in gem lore today. A coconut is a giant seed; from a soft "eye" at one end, a growing sprout will emerge. Sometimes the eye is hard or missing (A "blind" nut) and growth will be inward; it may end in a hard nodule -- like a jumbo-size oyster pearl. So rare and valuable were cocnut pearls that any blind nut found by a native of Indonesian lands belonged, by decree, to the local rajah. Thus a learned Dutchman was told in the late 1600's during Dutch colonization, and he mentioned the cocnut pearl prominently in a book about Indies plants. Suspicions developed in the middle 1800's when chemical tests of two coconut pearls bought in Singapore showed them to be identical in composition, as well as appearance, with pearls from the big Tridacna clam of tropical seas. Evidently it was an old racket; WILY Oriental dealers unloaded, the Tridacna product -- a lusterless pearl of little valke -- at a rarity price on anybody who would believe the coconut story. It is still believed. Not many years ago, a leading American plant explorer had an armed policeman stand guard beside his precious coconut pearl exhibited at a charity bazaar; he had acquired it during a Pacific trip in 1940. The "pearl that grows on trees" continues to turn up in books and on radios. Unfortunately, like another rare gem - the jewel within a toad's head, of medieval legend -- it doesn't exist.

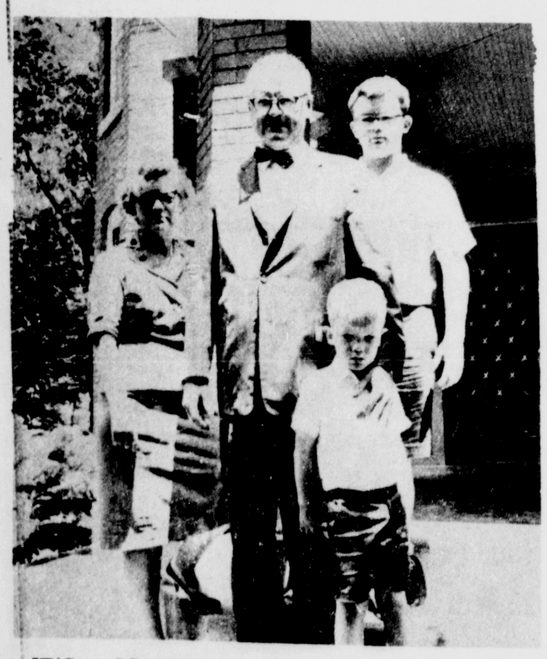
Mrs. Scism is a scout director. Miss Welborn is a senior scout and will represent Region 8 at the international gathering in England this summer.



IT'S A SCOUTING FAMILY. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Welborn and sons Briney and R. Kip (in front) have taken an active interest in scouting activities in the Bloomfield community. Mr. Welborn is national council representative of the Boy Scouts and president of the Sioux district. Mrs. Welborn directs the Girl Scout activities in Bloomfield. Briney, an Eagle Scout, represented the region at Boy Scout report to the nation activities. R. Kip is the mascot and official bell ringer for the Back 40 Day Camp, which is in session this week at the Welborn home. A daughter, Elizabeth, has been selected to represent the region at the Girl Scout international gathering in England.

Draft Revisions Only Two Steps From Enactment

WASHINGTON (AP) — New draft legislation requiring deferments for most college undergrads who request them and indirectly recommending that 19-year-olds be inducted first is two short steps from becoming law.

The compromise measure cleared the Senate Wednesday and shared priority in the House with a bill aimed at halting a railroad strike scheduled for next week.

House leaders hoped to pass both measures today, with the strike bill having the right of way. If the draft bill wasn't acted on today, the leaders said it would be considered next week.

After passage it would go to the President for signature.

The draft proposal would go into effect for four years starting July 1 and would make several basic changes in the Selective Service Act of 1948.

It would require local draft boards to grant deferments to undergraduate college students requesting them and meeting scholastic and other school requirements.

The deferment would end when the student reached age 24, left school or completed his undergraduate work, whichever came first. The student would then go to the top of the group available for induction, ahead of the 19-year-olds.

Dtudent deferments are discretionary with local draft boards under the present law.

While the legislation does not require the induction of 19-year-olds ahead of all others, Congress has endorsed in formal reports the President's announced plan to put them at the top of the priority list. This would be a reversal of the present system of first drafting older men in the 19 to 26 age group.

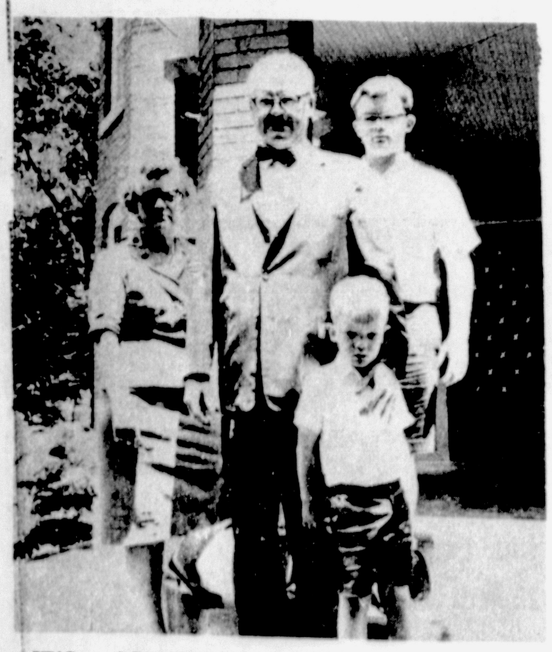
Mrs. Scism is a scout director. Miss Welborn is a senior scout and will represent Region 8 at the international gathering in England this summer.



IT'S A SCOUTING FAMILY. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Welborn and sons Briney and R. Kip (in front) have taken an active interest in scouting activities in the Bloomfield community. Mr. Welborn is national council representative of the Boy Scouts and president of the Sioux district. Mrs. Welborn directs the Girl Scout activities in Bloomfield. Briney, an Eagle Scout, represented the region at Boy Scout report to the nation activities. R. Kip is the mascot and official bell ringer for the Back 40 Day Camp, which is in session this week at the Welborn home. A daughter, Elizabeth, has been selected to represent the region at the Girl Scout international gathering in England.

Draft Revisions Only Two Steps From Enactment

WASHINGTON (AP) — New draft legislation requiring deferments for most college undergrads who request them and indirectly recommending that 19-year-olds be inducted first is two short steps from becoming law.

The compromise measure cleared the Senate Wednesday and shared priority in the House with a bill aimed at halting a railroad strike scheduled for next week.

House leaders hoped to pass both measures today, with the strike bill having the right of way. If the draft bill wasn't acted on today, the leaders said it would be considered next week.

After passage it would go to the President for signature.

The draft proposal would go into effect for four years starting July 1 and would make several basic changes in the Selective Service Act of 1948.

It would require local draft boards to grant deferments to undergraduate college students requesting them and meeting scholastic and other school requirements.

The deferment would end when the student reached age 24, left school or completed his undergraduate work, whichever came first. The student would then go to the top of the group available for induction, ahead of the 19-year-olds.

Dtudent deferments are discretionary with local draft boards under the present law.

While the legislation does not require the induction of 19-year-olds ahead of all others, Congress has endorsed in formal reports the President's announced plan to put them at the top of the priority list. This would be a reversal of the present system of first drafting older men in the 19 to 26 age group.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF SCOTT COUNTY AT BENTON, MISSOURI

CENTRAL MATERIALS CORPORATION, a Missouri corporation,

Plaintiff,

vs.

LOTTIE HARRIS, and WILLIE ROSS,

Defendant.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION OF NOTICE

THE STATE OF MISSOURI TO DEFENDANT: Lottie Harris and Willie Ross

You are hereby notified that an action has been commenced against you in the Circuit of Scott County, Missouri, the object and general nature of which is the foreclosure of Sikeston Special Tax Bill No. ACW-38 which affects the following described property:

Lot 1, Block 4, Sunset Second Addition to the City of Sikeston, Scott County, Missouri.

The names of all the parties to said suit are stated above in the caption hereof and the name and address of the attorneys for plaintiff is Spradling and Bradshaw, 1838 Broadway, Cape Girardeau, Missouri. You are further notified that unless you file an answer or other pleading or shall otherwise appear and defend against the aforesaid action within 45 days after the 15th day of June, 1967, judgment by default will be rendered against you.

IT IS ORDERED that a copy hereof be published according to law in The Sikeston Standard, a newspaper of general circulation publication in the County of Scott, State of Missouri.

A TRUE COPY FROM THE RECORD.

WITNESS my hand and the seal of the Circuit Court this 9th day of June, 1967.

Looking Back Over The Years

50 Years Ago
June 15, 1917

Maxine, the small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Finley, who has been seriously ill for some time, is now slowly improving.

Glenn Hoskins, Abbie Morrison, Addie Dover, Josephine Robinson, Mary Blanton, Eva Mae Hollister, Catherine Jewell, and Eva Mitchell, chaperoned by the Misses Margaret Dover, Clarice Burton and Myra Tanner, spent Tuesday at Little River near Morehouse.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Kornegger went to Puxico, Mo., Tuesday to spend the summer on their farm.

The Standard regrets to report the illness of Mrs. Jno. E. Marshall, who is suffering much with rheumatism. She has been confined to her room for the past two weeks.

Last Saturday the 16-year-old son of G. C. Catledge, about four miles south of Sikeston, met with a very severe accident. While leading a mule by a rope and halter, the mule became frightened and jerked the rope through the boy's right hand, and tore his thumb off.

Beginning July 1, there will be only two police on the Sikeston force, Chief Walter Kendall will be on in the day time and his assistant, Gid Daniels, will be on at night. This change was made due to infrequent arrests. During the past month, two arrests were made and they were for minor offenses.

The editor has had two suggestions handed in. One from a young woman that the baseball boys dust their seats just before the game! The other, that women folks should wear overalls or flannel bathing suits when they attend the games.

Oran -- Cletus Crader expects to open an ice cream parlor this week. He will handle Swift and Co. cream.

On the 24th of June the library will be moved from its present location in the Scott County Milling Co., building to the South Grade School and will be open there at the usual hours on the following Saturday morning, June 26.

Mary Ann Tomerlin, the small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Tomerlin, while playing at the swimming pool Thursday afternoon, ran into a board and cut a gash in her head. A short session in a doctor's office closed the wound and left her ready for another swim.

Miss Lucille Stubblefield left Wednesday morning for Boulder, Colo., where she will enroll in the University of Colorado, for the summer term.

20 Years Ago
June 15, 1947

Harvey H. Gaskins, Spanish-American War Veteran, and former resident of Sikeston, passed away at his home in Creal Springs, Ill., June 1.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. John Shuppert of Sikeston, daughter on Sunday.

Teen Tricks by Genie Blanton. Hope Edwards had a scavenger hunt Thursday night and from what we hear it was really swell. It was held in honor of Norma Walker, who returned to her home in St. Louis.

Harvey Edward Morrison, a resident of Sikeston for the past 64 years, died June 11th, at his home, 319 Moore, following a period of ill health.

Harold Fowler Moore, born October 19, 1913, in Columbus, Ky., died at his home on Center street June 11 following an extended illness of lead poisoning.

Mystery Illness Closes Plant

OLIVETTE, Mo. (AP) — A mysterious illness that has affected women employes of an ordnance assembly plant in the St. Louis suburb of Olivette has caused the plant to be shut down.

Seven women were stricken last Friday, 10 Monday, and six Tuesday at the Carter Carburetor Division of A.C.F. Industries. The women have reported feeling ill and some have fainted.

The women work in one end of the plant, assembling mortar and artillery shell fuse components. Company officials say the illnesses are puzzling. A spokesman for a hospital where laboratory tests were taken on the women reported no conclusive findings.

Head Start Enrollment Set

BELL CITY -- Enrollment for Head Start sponsored by the Bell City public schools will be Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the elementary principal's office.

Classes will begin June 26 and last eight weeks.

GUEST LIST . . . FOR A WEDDING
By Grace V. Watkins

You list the names of relatives and friends,
Warm-hearted neighbors cherished many a year.
But oh, before your time of listing ends,
Be sure you add another name in clear
And shining letters, beautiful and bright,
The name of One who is the living light.

And, though you will not mail an invitation
To Him, oh, pray that bride and groom and all
Who hear their solemn words of dedication
Shall feel that He is there, shall sense the full,
Deep holiness of His redeeming power,
Those moments and in every future hour.

UP A TREE!

A little thought for people who
Think automation's drastic;
What are the termites going to do
When wood's replaced by plastic?

S. S. Biddle.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: How can you be so positive your advice is ALWAYS right? I did what you advised, Ann, and now I am not sure it was the wise decision.

Our daughter had a baby out of wedlock three months ago. The social worker, our minister, our doctor -- everyone -- said she should put the baby up for adoption. She was barely 16 and the boy 17. Marriage was out of the question.

I went to the hospital and stayed with my daughter until her child was born. Her little girl was the most beautiful baby I'd ever seen. Now that the ordeal is over things are back to normal and my daughter is reasonably happy. The bad dream is over for her, but it will never be over for me. I am bitter and depressed. I have a dull ache in my heart for my first grandchild who is lost to me forever. I wish I had said "To hell with society" and taken that baby home and raised it as best I could. -- HEARTSICK.

Dear Heartsick: You did what was best for the baby, best for your daughter and best for the father of the child. And it was best for you, too, although you may not believe it now. You will believe it one day, however, when your daughter is married and has a family. When that day comes, please let me know.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 16-year-old girl who has a father problem. He is a wonderful man but he has the crazy idea that he must keep proving how much he loves me by kissing me all the time.

I get embarrassed in front of my friends when he pulls me on his lap, or kisses me on the neck but I hate to say anything for fear of hurting his feelings. Is it my mother's place to tell him, or do you think I should mention it? I am the only girl in a family of four boys and I know my father favors me, but I wish he would stop putting on such a show for everybody. What should I do? --OVERLOVED.

Dear Overloved: Tell your dad that you are a big girl now and you don't want to be smooched by daddy. A hello or good-bye kiss is just fine, but that should be it.

Dear Ann Landers: Please help me. I am a 15-year-old boy who hates school. I am not learning anything. When the teachers talk I block out their voices and thing of other things.

Homework is a bore and all the stuff they try to cram into our heads is a waste of time. Most of the things they teach in school these days will not help a person make a living. Why should I knock myself out trying to memorize Spanish words when I know I will never go to Spain? Who needs it?

In two months I will be 16 which is the legal age a kid can quit school in this state. I plan to dog it until my birthday, and then take a powder. I promised my dad I would write to you so I am doing it. I am not promising I will pay attention to your advice. -- FED UP TO HERE

Dear Fed: Stay in school and get your diploma. If you think you are bored NOW, just wait until you get trapped in a nothing little job at the bottom of the pay scale and discover you are stuck there for the rest of your life.

Not a day goes by that I don't get a dozen letters from kids 19 and 20 -- begging me to tell high schoolers to stick with it. So-- I tell 'em, and I hope they listen.

When romantic glances turn to warm embraces is it love or chemistry? Send for the booklet "Love Or Sex And How To Tell The Difference," by Ann Landers. Enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 35¢ in coin with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

THE CASE OF RODGER THE LODGER

Rodger made his annual fall trip to his hunting lodge only to discover when he got there that is was already occupied by Mr. Bimple. And, even more aggravating to Rodger, Mr. Bimple insisted that he had rented the lodge from the owner and refused to permit owner Rodger from even crossing the threshold.

The real payoff came, however, when Mr. Bimple locked the door in Rodger's face. Absolutely flabbergasted, Rodger's temper began to soar like a thermometer. Grunting with rage, he quickly battered down the door with his shoulder. Instead of spending the night in the lodge, however, he spent it in jail. Mr. Bimple had him arrested for breaking in.

"It's absurd," Rodger growled in court. "A man can't be arrested for breaking into his own house. It's like trying to give a man a ticket for overtime parking in his own garage."

"It doesn't make any difference whose house it was," responded the district attorney. "Breaking down doors just isn't permitted."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you give lodge owner Rodger lodgings in the local jail?

This is how the judge ruled: Rodger went to jail. The judge held that the law seeks to prevent fights, violence and other breaches of the peace; that while a person is permitted to recover his property, if he cannot do it peacefully, he must resort to legal means.

Wholesale Industry Big Income Source

COLUMBIA - Missouri's wholesale industry is the State's most important source of personal income, followed closely by Federal payrolls and the transportation services. These three industries were responsible for the generation of 34 percent, or $2.93 billion of the $8.5 billion of personal income received by residents of Missouri in 1958. In each of these three between $8 million and $1.2 million was generated.

That information is brought out in a statistical study of the inter-industry structure and relationships of Missouri published by the Business and Public Administration Research Center at the University of Missouri, Columbia.

The 156-page monograph points out that the next level of industries in importance in generating personal income, which to residents of the State is the real reason for economic activity, generated between $220 million and $525 million each. That level included the meat processing, aircraft, electrical machinery, miscellaneous food products. chemicals, industrial machinery, metal products, motor vehicles, grain mill products, and construction industries, which were responsible for the generation of $3.45 billion, or 40 percent of the total.

Exports from other industry sources were responsible for the generation of the remaining 26 percent of the income received by residents of the state, the study reports.

The study is based on the industrial picture for 1958, the latest year for which final and complete statistics were available. It was prepared by Dr. Floyd K. Harmston, professor of economics and program director for research assistant, as an input-output analysis of the state. It covers a total value of $28,111,740,000 consisting of the gross income of agriculture, mining, manufacturing and services and the operating margins of wholesaling and retailing.

In their conclusions the authors, under the heading of "income," report:

"The cash income of the household, or personal income, in the state during 1958 amounted to $8.5 billion. Revenues of state and local government amounted to $953 million. The income of the various industrial and business sectors varied widely. Six of the sectors had incomes above $1.0 billion; retail trade margins being the largest ($1.7 billion). Seven others had incomes between $250 million and $449 million. Eleven had incomes between $250 mollion and $449 million. Three of the groups had incomes under $100 million; mining being the smallest ($87 million).

On exports, or sales outside the state, the monograph says:

"Sales of goods and services to residents of other states and regions, plus expenditures of the federal government and long term private investment amounted to $7.7 billion in 1958. This money has been designated as the basic income of the state, or the new money introduced into the economy during the year. This leaves a total of $20.3 billion which represents the economic activity associated with supplying the needs of industry and residents of the state. It can be labeled the local market."

Also discussed are imports, or "leakage," which affect the amount of money from industrial activities retained in the state's economy. The authors suggest in the conclusion that the development of local sources for the imports from out of state would have a positive effect on the personal income from Missouri industry.

With reference to the indirect effects of export, the report comments "A firm may be selling heavily on the local market but its products may be inputs to other firms whose markets are in the export sector. As an example, agriculture made 32 percent of its sales to meat processing which in turn sold 69 percent of its product out-of-state. Mining sold 34 percent of its output to primary metals which depended upon the export market for 61 percent of its sales. Thus, a sector may be indirectly affected by the export market to a substantial degree."

The study is the tenth in a series of studies defining the problems and prospects for the state's economy which are being conducted by the Research Center as segments of a long-term project sponsored by more than 30 Missouri business and industrial firms.

For purposes of organizing and relating the analysis the authors have assigned the industries of the state to 34 sectors or categories, each made up of individual firms whose products have some features in common. In addition, a household sector which reflects the contribution of local labor, capital and management to the state's economy, and a sector for the activities of state and local government have been included.

Four tables that are the basis of the analysis and numerous figures break down into detail the statistical aspects of Missouri industrial interrelationships. The authors discuss the various sectors individually in brief texts supplementing the figures, presenting in three separate chapters the purchasing relationships, sales relationships, and generation of the local market. Sources of data for the tables and a bibliography are included.

In a foreword to the report Dr. Robert W. Paterson, director of the Center, reports that "So far as is known this study represents one of the first full-blown publications of a state inter-industry analysis.

"The results of the work," he continues, "provide detailed information about local markets which are useful to industry officials for product planning, to economic theorists interested in the detailed workings of the market system, and, when more than one period of time is analyzed, the work is useful to forecasters who seek to pinpoint the effects of an increase in gross national product on each of several sectors making up the market flows."

Dear Mr. Bruce,

I just want to write you a note of appreciation expressing my personal thanks for the fine way in which your men conducted our Vacation Bible School parade through Sikeston last Friday morning.

I have organized several VBS parades and worked with several different city policemen but the Sikeston police did the best at keeping the parade moving and taking us over the suggested parade route that I've ever had the privilege of working with.

I thank each of you very much. Because of your excellent cooperation, and skillful handling of the parade our Vacation Bible School will even be more successful.

Please express my appreciation and personal thanks to each of the men who assisted.

We have the mind of Christ. —(I Cor. 2:16).

One meaning of the word mind is "to tend," as when we mind the baby. We have a responsibility at all times to tend, or mind our mind. We should control our thinking, keep our thoughts centered in God and on the good. Let us remember that it is Divine Mind we are privileged to be using, for there is only one Mind—God's. He is love, order and peace, and our thoughts should flow in similar channels.

Mystery Illness Closes Plant

OLIVETTE, Mo. (AP) — A mysterious illness that has affected women employes of an ordnance assembly plant in the St. Louis suburb of Olivette has caused the plant to be shut down.

Seven women were stricken last Friday, 10 Monday, and six Tuesday at the Carter Carburetor Division of A.C.F. Industries. The women have reported feeling ill and some have fainted.

The women work in one end of the plant, assembling mortar and artillery shell fuse components. Company officials say the illnesses are puzzling. A spokesman for a hospital where laboratory tests were taken on the women reported no conclusive findings.

GUEST LIST . . . FOR A WEDDING
By Grace V. Watkins

You list the names of relatives and friends,
Warm-hearted neighbors cherished many a year.
But oh, before your time of listing ends,
Be sure you add another name in clear
And shining letters, beautiful and bright,
The name of One who is the living light.

And, though you will not mail an invitation
To Him, oh, pray that bride and groom and all
Who hear their solemn words of dedication
Shall feel that He is there, shall sense the full,
Deep holiness of His redeeming power,
Those moments and in every future hour.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: How can you be so positive your advice is ALWAYS right? I did what you advised, Ann, and now I am not sure it was the wise decision.

Our daughter had a baby out of wedlock three months ago. The social worker, our minister, our doctor -- everyone -- said she should put the baby up for adoption. She was barely 16 and the boy 17. Marriage was out of the question.

I went to the hospital and stayed with my daughter until her child was born. Her little girl was the most beautiful baby I'd ever seen. Now that the ordeal is over things are back to normal and my daughter is reasonably happy. The bad dream is over for her, but it will never be over for me. I am bitter and depressed. I have a dull ache in my heart for my first grandchild who is lost to me forever. I wish I had said "To hell with society" and taken that baby home and raised it as best I could. -- HEARTSICK.

Dear Heartsick: You did what was best for the baby, best for your daughter and best for the father of the child. And it was best for you, too, although you may not believe it now. You will believe it one day, however, when your daughter is married and has a family. When that day comes, please let me know.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 16-year-old girl who has a father problem. He is a wonderful man but he has the crazy idea that he must keep proving how much he loves me by kissing me all the time.

I get embarrassed in front of my friends when he pulls me on his lap, or kisses me on the neck but I hate to say anything for fear of hurting his feelings. Is it my mother's place to tell him, or do you think I should mention it? I am the only girl in a family of four boys and I know my father favors me, but I wish he would stop putting on such a show for everybody. What should I do? --OVERLOVED.

Dear Overloved: Tell your dad that you are a big girl now and you don't want to be smooched by daddy. A hello or good-bye kiss is just fine, but that should be it.

Dear Ann Landers: Please help me. I am a 15-year-old boy who hates school. I am not learning anything. When the teachers talk I block out their voices and thing of other things.

Homework is a bore and all the stuff they try to cram into our heads is a waste of time. Most of the things they teach in school these days will not help a person make a living. Why should I knock myself out trying to memorize Spanish words when I know I will never go to Spain? Who needs it?

In two months I will be 16 which is the legal age a kid can quit school in this state. I plan to dog it until my birthday, and then take a powder. I promised my dad I would write to you so I am doing it. I am not promising I will pay attention to your advice. -- FED UP TO HERE

Dear Fed: Stay in school and get your diploma. If you think you are bored NOW, just wait until you get trapped in a nothing little job at the bottom of the pay scale and discover you are stuck there for the rest of your life.

Not a day goes by that I don't get a dozen letters from kids 19 and 20 -- begging me to tell high schoolers to stick with it. So-- I tell 'em, and I hope they listen.

If You Were The Judge
BY Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF RODGER THE LODGER

Rodger made his annual fall trip to his hunting lodge only to discover when he got there that is was already occupied by Mr. Bimple. And, even more aggravating to Rodger, Mr. Bimple insisted that he had rented the lodge from the owner and refused to permit owner Rodger from even crossing the threshold.

The real payoff came, however, when Mr. Bimple locked the door in Rodger's face. Absolutely flabbergasted, Rodger's temper began to soar like a thermometer. Grunting with rage, he quickly battered down the door with his shoulder. Instead of spending the night in the lodge, however, he spent it in jail. Mr. Bimple had him arrested for breaking in.

"It's absurd," Rodger growled in court. "A man can't be arrested for breaking into his own house. It's like trying to give a man a ticket for overtime parking in his own garage."

"It doesn't make any difference whose house it was," responded the district attorney. "Breaking down doors just isn't permitted."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you give lodge owner Rodger lodgings in the local jail?

This is how the judge ruled: Rodger went to jail. The judge held that the law seeks to prevent fights, violence and other breaches of the peace; that while a person is permitted to recover his property, if he cannot do it peacefully, he must resort to legal means.

Wholesale Industry Big Income Source

COLUMBIA - Missouri's wholesale industry is the State's most important source of personal income, followed closely by Federal payrolls and the transportation services. These three industries were responsible for the generation of 34 percent, or $2.93 billion of the $8.5 billion of personal income received by residents of Missouri in 1958. In each of these three between $8 million and $1.2 million was generated.

That information is brought out in a statistical study of the inter-industry structure and relationships of Missouri published by the Business and Public Administration Research Center at the University of Missouri, Columbia.

The 156-page monograph points out that the next level of industries in importance in generating personal income, which to residents of the State is the real reason for economic activity, generated between $220 million and $525 million each. That level included the meat processing, aircraft, electrical machinery, miscellaneous food products. chemicals, industrial machinery, metal products, motor vehicles, grain mill products, and construction industries, which were responsible for the generation of $3.45 billion, or 40 percent of the total.

Exports from other industry sources were responsible for the generation of the remaining 26 percent of the income received by residents of the state, the study reports.

The study is based on the industrial picture for 1958, the latest year for which final and complete statistics were available. It was prepared by Dr. Floyd K. Harmston, professor of economics and program director for research assistant, as an input-output analysis of the state. It covers a total value of $28,111,740,000 consisting of the gross income of agriculture, mining, manufacturing and services and the operating margins of wholesaling and retailing.

In their conclusions the authors, under the heading of "income," report:

"The cash income of the household, or personal income, in the state during 1958 amounted to $8.5 billion. Revenues of state and local government amounted to $953 million. The income of the various industrial and business sectors varied widely. Six of the sectors had incomes above $1.0 billion; retail trade margins being the largest ($1.7 billion). Seven others had incomes between $250 million and $449 million. Eleven had incomes between $250 mollion and $449 million. Three of the groups had incomes under $100 million; mining being the smallest ($87 million)."

On exports, or sales outside the state, the monograph says:

"Sales of goods and services to residents of other states and regions, plus expenditures of the federal government and long term private investment amounted to $7.7 billion in 1958. This money has been designated as the basic income of the state, or the new money introduced into the economy during the year. This leaves a total of $20.3 billion which represents the economic activity associated with supplying the needs of industry and residents of the state. It can be labeled the local market."

Also discussed are imports, or "leakage," which affect the amount of money from industrial activities retained in the state's economy. The authors suggest in the conclusion that the development of local sources for the imports from out of state would have a positive effect on the personal income from Missouri industry.

With reference to the indirect effects of export, the report comments "A firm may be selling heavily on the local market but its products may be inputs to other firms whose markets are in the export sector. As an example, agriculture made 32 percent of its sales to meat processing which in turn sold 69 percent of its product out-of-state. Mining sold 34 percent of its output to primary metals which depended upon the export market for 61 percent of its sales. Thus, a sector may be indirectly affected by the export market to a substantial degree."

The study is the tenth in a series of studies defining the problems and prospects for the state's economy which are being conducted by the Research Center as segments of a long-term project sponsored by more than 30 Missouri business and industrial firms.

For purposes of organizing and relating the analysis the authors have assigned the industries of the state to 34 sectors or categories, each made up of individual firms whose products have some features in common. In addition, a household sector which reflects the contribution of local labor, capital and management to the state's economy, and a sector for the activities of state and local government have been included.

Four tables that are the basis of the analysis and numerous figures break down into detail the statistical aspects of Missouri industrial interrelationships. The authors discuss the various sectors individually in brief texts supplementing the figures, presenting in three separate chapters the purchasing relationships, sales relationships, and generation of the local market. Sources of data for the tables and a bibliography are included.

In a foreword to the report Dr. Robert W. Paterson, director of the Center, reports that "So far as is known this study represents one of the first full-blown publications of a state inter-industry analysis.

"The results of the work," he continues, "provide detailed information about local markets which are useful to industry officials for product planning, to economic theorists interested in the detailed workings of the market system, and, when more than one period of time is analyzed, the work is useful to forecasters who seek to pinpoint the effects of an increase in gross national product on each of several sectors making up the market flows."

The Prayer
From The Upper Room

My son, attend to my words; incline thine ear unto my sayings. (Proverbs 4:20)

PRAYER: Our Father, we would fix our attention on things that are above, not alone on things that pass away. Bless us with understanding of Thy Word that it may be a joy to our life, strength in our weakness, the pathway to life eternal. In Christ's name we pray. Amen.

We have the mind of Christ. —(I Cor. 2:16).

One meaning of the word mind is "to tend," as when we mind the baby. We have a responsibility at all times to tend, or mind our mind. We should control our thinking, keep our thoughts centered in God and on the good. Let us remember that it is Divine Mind we are privileged to be using, for there is only one Mind—God's. He is love, order and peace, and our thoughts should flow in similar channels.

Dear Mr. Bruce,

I just want to write you a note of appreciation expressing my personal thanks for the fine way in which your men conducted our Vacation Bible School parade through Sikeston last Friday morning.

I have organized several VBS parades and worked with several different city policemen but the Sikeston police did the best at keeping the parade moving and taking us over the suggested parade route that I've ever had the privilege of working with.

I thank each of you very much. Because of your excellent cooperation, and skillful handling of the parade our Vacation Bible School will even be more successful.

Please express my appreciation and personal thanks to each of the men who assisted.

I suggest that Lyndon Johnson bring in the one-eyed general from Israel to tell Defense Secretary McNamara and his computers how to win a war. He gained more ground in three days than we have in three years under McNamara leadership in Vietnam.

Maybe the way to win a war is to turn it over to military men instead of computers and fuzzy-headed thinkers in the nation's capital.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—What is the traveler's tree?

A—A close relative of the banana tree in Malagasy, which collects good drinking water in a pocket at the base of each leaf stem. Travelers puncture the leaf stem close to the trunk and out spurts the water.

Q—Which is the smallest bird in the world?

A—The bee hummingbird of Cuba, measuring 2¼ inches in length.

Q—How much of the shell of a crab is shed at molting?

A—All of it, down to the tips of the legs and the feelers, and including even the lining of the stomach.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1215, the Magna Carta was signed by King John of England.

On this date:

In 1752, Benjamin Franklin demonstrated the relationship between electricity and lightning when he launched a kite at Philadelphia during a storm.

In 1775, George Washington accepted command of the Continental Army.

In 1836, Arkansas was admitted to the Union.

In 1904, more than 1,000 persons died in a fire aboard the steamboat General Slocum off New York's Manhattan Island.

In 1940, German armies outflanked France's Maginot Line.

In 1964, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the states must apportion their legislatures according to population.

Ten years ago — Britain told the Soviet Union full-scale disarmament could come only after the easing of political tensions.

Five years ago — The Soviet Union bitterly denounced the United States at the Geneva disarmament conference.

One year ago — The United States said it would bow to French demands and remove virtually all American troops from France in the next few months.

Sikeston Toll Routes Studied

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Members of the state highway commission and Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, who will make up the new toll road authority when it becomes a legal organization Oct. 13, met again with engineering firms Wednesday night to discuss preliminary work.

Hearnes' office announced the toll road authority had agreed through a letter of intent to retain three engineering firms to conduct preliminary studies.

Routes they will look into include the following:

1. From Kansas City south to the vicinity of Joplin with a possible extension from north of Baldwin in southeast to west of Springfield near Halltown.

2. From Kansas City to Springfield.

3. From Kansas City to the vicinity of Rolla, passing near the Lake of the Ozarks, then extending to the vicinity of Sikeston.

4. From near Kirksville through Jefferson City and on south to a connection with Interstate 44 near Rolla and on south to the Arkansas line.

5. From near Hannibal or any other point that may be the terminal of an Illinois turnpike west to Kansas City.

6. From North of Joplin southwest to the common boundary of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

7. From the vicinity of Joplin to a proposed Arkansas turnpike in the vicinity of Pea Ridge, Ark.

8. From the Hannibal-Louisiana area southwest to the Lake of the Ozarks passing near Jefferson City and on to the Joplin area.

9. From the Hannibal-Louisiana area to the vicinity of St. Charles.

10. From Springfield north to a connection with the Kansas City-Sikeston route.

11. From Sikeston west to Springfield.

12. Possible turnpike routes in St. Louis and Kansas City.

The preliminary studies will cost about $60,000 and will be paid from the sale of first revenue bonds with a formal contract to be signed after Oct. 13.

From these preliminary studies the turnpike authority can establish priority routes.

Truck Length Bill Amended

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri House spent nearly three hours today amending a Senate bill to allow truck rigs of up to 65 feet in length to travel all primary routes in the state.

Because of the House changes the bill will go back to the Senate.

The measure also would allow operators of the longer trucks to travel state maintained routes if they get special permission from the chief engineer of the highway commission.

The vote passing the bill and sending it back to the Senate was 99-47.

The Senate passed and sent to the governor, 22-5, a bill that would allow cities to sell industrial plants with revenue bonds at a price sufficient to pay off the bonds.

Cities already can sell plants with general obligation bonds. bonds.

Other bills sent to the governor would:

Make the closing time for liquor sales 1:30 a. m. Sunday uniform throughout the state but eliminate present liquor sale from midnight Sunday to 1:30 a. m. Monday.

Eliminate any reference to race in connection with state training schools. There formerly was a Negro girls' training school.

100 Clergymen Honor Ritter

ST. LOUIS (AP) — More than 100 high-ranking Catholic and Protestant clergymen gathered today in St. Louis Cathedral to do the final earthly honor to Joseph Cardinal Ritter, a good shepherd and friend.

Thousands of persons crowded into the massive cathedral and stood outside in the broiling sun during the solemn Pontifical Requiem Mass concelebrated by Cardinal-designate John Patrick Cody of Chicago and seven bishops closely connected with the St. Louis Archdiocese.

Four cardinals and four cardinals-designate joined 10 archbishops and 45 catholic bishops in the solemn funeral procession. Walking with them were 52 high-ranking church ministers and officials, some of whom were observers at the Vatican Council where Cardinal Ritter championed the ecumenical movement. Almost all of them acknowledged the gentle cardinal as the leader of the St. Louis religious community.

Sterling Silver

Charles Lewis Tiffany, the famous jeweler, was the first to establish the term "sterling" in the United States, thereby adding to the prestige of his firm. Tiffany had adopted the standards of English silver in 1851 in his jewelry manufacturing business, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

jungles of war zone D north of Saigon. Six Americans were killed and 12 wounded, most in the first few seconds, before artillery fire raked the Red positions. A U.S. spokesman said 60 Communists were killed and another American was killed and seven were wounded earlier in the operation.

The intensified ground fighting was matched by 129 air strikes against North Vietnam, many of them aimed again at rail lines north of Hanoi. One American Phantom jet was shot down by ground fire and the crew was listed as missing. It was the 583rd U.S. combat plane lost over the North.

The delta battle erupted in the paddyfields about 85 miles southwest of Saigon when the crack Viet Cong "Tay Do" battalion, escorted by local guerrillas, ran into two companies of South Vietnamese militia about 10 a.m.

The Viet Cong commander apparently was unaware that two battalions of the South Vietnamese 21st Division were only a few miles away.

By foot and helicopter, the men of the 21st swept onto the field and into blocking positions, pushing the Communist battalion into the open. There it was raked mercilessly by artillery and helicopter gunships.

One helicopter was shot down and landed in guerrilla territory. A big twin-rotor recovery helicopter came in to rescue the stricken chopper and was driven off by Viet Cong fire. Another gunship came in and silenced the Communists and the downed chopper was finally lifted out.

"We've never had a day like this before," said exultant helicopter gunner Dennis Bolton of Huntsville, Ark.

"That was really some sharp shooting," said his commander, Capt. Thomas Beauchamp of Bristol, Va.

The Americans had no casualties. The South Vietnamese had five dead and 60 wounded.

the session would begin Saturday.

Speculation continued that Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin would attend the session. Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in his letter requesting the meeting said the Soviet delegation would include "leading statesmen of the Soviet Union," and AP Correspondent Henry S. Bradsher reported from Moscow that Kosygin was likely to be among them.

The Soviet Union based its call for the emergency session on the "Uniting for Peace" resolution which the United States pushed through the assembly in 1950 to circumvent the Soviet veto in the Security Council.

The procedure permits assembly action on a threat to peace when the Security Council is paralyzed by lack of unanimity among the big powers. The Russians in the past called the procedure illegal.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg told the Security Council during its debate Wednesday that his government was "not interested in maneuvers" such as the Soviet move to the assembly but rather wanted to work in the council for real peace in the Middle East.

He said "the council has far from exhausted its possibility of contributing" to that end.

Goldberg went to Washington Wednesday afternoon to consult with the State Department.

The provision in the Soviet resolution to condemn Israel received the votes of only four council members—the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, India and Mali. The 11 other council members abstained.

The affirmative votes of nine members are required for adoption of a resolution.

The provision calling for Israel withdrawal was supported by six members—the four that voted for the first provision plus Ethiopia and Nigeria. The other nine council members again abstained.

The council gave unanimous approval, however, to a resolution sponsored by Argentina, Brazil and Ethiopia calling on all governments concerned to treat war prisoners and civilians caught in the war humanely. It also asked Israel to facilitate the return of refugees from the fighting.

As preparations for a Soviet-Arab push against Israel went forward at the United Nations, Cairo Radio announced that foreign ministers of the Arab nations would meet in Kuwait Saturday to plan an Arab summit conference.

The report said the foreign ministers would discuss plans for "eliminating the traces of aggression against the Arab countries."

No date or site has been announced for the summit meeting.

Egyptian officials were letting it be known that President Gamal Abdel Nasser's government would rather risk another military test with Israel than negotiate a Middle East settlement with their conquerors.

Unconfirmed reports in Cairo said Egypt had already begun receiving shipments of Communist arms and other military equipment. There were rumors that Soviet MIG17 fighters had been flown in, and Cairo newspapers printed dispatches from Moscow saying the Communist countries of Eastern Europe were discussing replacement of military equipment lost by the Arabs.

Egypt also was reported preparing an expanded boycott of Western companies, principally those of the United States and Britain, which deal with Israel.

Among the Arab leaders, Algerian President Houari Boumedienne's star appeared to be in the ascendant following his trip to Moscow early this week to seek renewed Soviet support for the Arabs. Some diplomats in Cairo considered this a boost for Boumedienne because he went instead of Nasser, and today Syrian President Nureddin el-Atassi arrived in Algiers to confer with Boumedienne.

Boumedienne's hand also was strengthened because his army never got into the fighting and thus came out of the war intact, while Nasser's was wrecked.

In London, sources in the oil industry reported that Kuwait had resumed oil shipments to all its customers except Britain and the United States after breaking a 10-day strike of oil terminal workers that began with the outbreak of the war.

Saudi Arabia also was allowing British and American tankers to load provided they were not headed for British or American ports.

Oilmen in Britain generally feel that British oil needs can be met from shipments to countries not under the Arab ban, which stemmed from allegations—vigorously denied—of U.S. and British support of Israel.

In Ankara, Turkey, a Soviet Embassy spokesman denounced as a "complete fabrication" a report that five Russian officers had been captured by the Israelis on the Syrian front. The spokesman said no Soviet military men or technicians took part in the war.

Israeli military sources had reported the capture of the five Russians, but a spokesman for the Israeli army quickly denied it.

President Johnson and Vice President Humphrey acted in good faith when they addressed fund-raising dinners for Dodd, and did not know the funds might be converted to personal use.

Johnson addressed Dodd testimonial dinners in 1961 and 1963 when he was vice president, and Humphrey spoke at a fund-raising event for Dodd in 1965.

Stennis took the floor to reply to Dodd's lengthy statement Wednesday that he was innocent of any wrongdoing.

The Senate entered the third day of debate on a committee resolution recommending that Dodd be censured for conduct that "tends to bring the Senate into dishonor and disrepute."

At the outset of today's debate, Dodd again turned to a charge that he had collected air fares from both the Senate and private organizations in seven instances from 1961 through 1965.

Dodd insisted there were 80 or more trips for which he could have double-billed, rather than just 10 as reported by the ethics committee.

Long, D-La., has said he knows "what this is all about" and hinted that in time he will disclose new facts in the case.

But when Dodd was asked about this, he said if Long has any surprise evidence, "I am not privy to it."

He said the committee mistakenly assumed he had only 10 opportunities for double billing.

Dodd said today that in the 1961-65 period he made 26 trips for which he was reimbursed by the Senate for his travel expenses and 54 for which he was reimbursed by private groups.

If he wanted to engage in double billing, he said, he would have "invented a government purpose" for the 54 trips paid for by private groups and would have developed a private engagement for the 26 trips made on Senate business.

Dodd says he knows of no surprises planned in his defense, but his self-appointed defender, Sen. Russell B. Long, is hinting that new facts may be unveiled.

Methodists Favor Religious Center Plan

FAYETTE (AP) -- The Missouri East Conference of the Methodist Church has approved plans for a special commission to work with other denominations in developing religious centers in resort and recreation areas and in urban neighborhoods.

The Missouri West Conference previously approved the proposal.

The commission will have a budget of $50,000 in its first year.

The East Missouri Conference also voted Wednesday to join the West Missouri Conference in setting up a Methodist Foundation for Missouri.

The foundation will urge church members to make bequests to Methodist agencies in their wills.

Sikeston Toll Routes Studied

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Members of the state highway commission and Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, who will make up the new toll road authority when it becomes a legal organization Oct. 13, met again with engineering firms Wednesday night to discuss preliminary work.

Hearnes' office announced the toll road authority had agreed through a letter of intent to retain three engineering firms to conduct preliminary studies.

Routes they will look into include the following:

1. From Kansas City south to the vicinity of Joplin with a possible extension from north of Baldwin in southeast to west of Springfield near Halltown.

2. From Kansas City to Springfield.

3. From Kansas City to the vicinity of Rolla, passing near the Lake of the Ozarks, then extending to the vicinity of Sikeston.

4. From near Kirksville through Jefferson City and on south to a connection with Interstate 44 near Rolla and on south to the Arkansas line.

5. From near Hannibal or any other point that may be the terminal of an Illinois turnpike west to Kansas City.

6. From North of Joplin southwest to the common boundary of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

7. From the vicinity of Joplin to a proposed Arkansas turnpike in the vicinity of Pea Ridge, Ark.

8. From the Hannibal-Louisiana area southwest to the Lake of the Ozarks passing near Jefferson City and on to the Joplin area.

9. From the Hannibal-Louisiana area to the vicinity of St. Charles.

10. From Springfield north to a connection with the Kansas City-Sikeston route.

11. From Sikeston west to Springfield.

12. Possible turnpike routes in St. Louis and Kansas City.

The preliminary studies will cost about $60,000 and will be paid from the sale of first revenue bonds with a formal contract to be signed after Oct. 13.

From these preliminary studies the turnpike authority can establish priority routes.

Truck Length Bill Amended

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri House spent nearly three hours today amending a Senate bill to allow truck rigs of up to 65 feet in length to travel all primary routes in the state.

Because of the House changes the bill will go back to the Senate.

The measure also would allow operators of the longer trucks to travel state maintained routes if they get special permission from the chief engineer of the highway commission.

The vote passing the bill and sending it back to the Senate was 99-47.

The Senate passed and sent to the governor, 22-5, a bill that would allow cities to sell industrial plants with revenue bonds at a price sufficient to pay off the bonds.

Cities already can sell plants with general obligation bonds. bonds.

Other bills sent to the governor would:

Make the closing time for liquor sales 1:30 a. m. Sunday uniform throughout the state but eliminate present liquor sale from midnight Sunday to 1:30 a. m. Monday.

Eliminate any reference to race in connection with state training schools. There formerly was a Negro girls' training school.

Sterling Silver

Charles Lewis Tiffany, the famous jeweler, was the first to establish the term "sterling" in the United States, thereby adding to the prestige of his firm. Tiffany had adopted the standards of English silver in 1851 in his jewelry manufacturing business, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

100 Clergymen Honor Ritter

ST. LOUIS (AP) — More than 100 high-ranking Catholic and Protestant clergymen gathered today in St. Louis Cathedral to do the final earthly honor to Joseph Cardinal Ritter, a good shepherd and friend.

Thousands of persons crowded into the massive cathedral and stood outside in the broiling sun during the solemn Pontifical Requiem Mass concelebrated by Cardinal-designate John Patrick Cody of Chicago and seven bishops closely connected with the St. Louis Archdiocese.

Four cardinals and four cardinals-designate joined 10 archbishops and 45 catholic bishops in the solemn funeral processional. Walking with them were 52 high-ranking church ministers and officials, some of whom were observers at the Vatican Council where Cardinal Ritter championed the ecumenical movement. Almost all of them acknowledged the gentle cardinal as the leader of the St. Louis religious community.

jungles of war zone D north of Saigon. Six Americans were killed and 12 wounded, most in the first few seconds, before artillery fire raked the Red positions. A U.S. spokesman said 60 Communists were killed and another American was killed and seven were wounded earlier in the operation.

The intensified ground fighting was matched by 129 air strikes against North Vietnam, many of them aimed again at rail lines north of Hanoi. One American Phantom jet was shot down by ground fire and the crew was listed as missing. It was the 583rd U.S. combat plane lost over the North.

Bradsher reported from Moscow that Kosygin was likely to be among them.

The Soviet Union based its call for the emergency session on the "Uniting for Peace" resolution which the United States pushed through the assembly in 1950 to circumvent the Soviet veto in the Security Council.

The procedure permits assembly action on a threat to peace when the Security Council is paralyzed by lack of unanimity among the big powers. The Russians in the past called the procedure illegal.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg told the Security Council during its debate Wednesday that his government was "not interested in maneuvers" such as the Soviet move to the assembly but rather wanted to work in the council for real peace in the Middle East.

He said "the council has far from exhausted its possibility of contributing" to that end.

Goldberg went to Washington Wednesday afternoon to consult with the State Department.

The provision in the Soviet resolution to condemn Israel received the votes of only four council members—the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, India and Mali. The 11 other council members abstained.

The affirmative votes of nine members are required for adoption of a resolution.

The provision calling for Israel withdrawal was supported by six members—the four that voted for the first provision plus Ethiopia and Nigeria. The other nine council members again abstained.

The council gave unanimous approval, however, to a resolution sponsored by Argentina, Brazil and Ethiopia calling on all governments concerned to treat war prisoners and civilians caught in the war humanely. It also asked Israel to facilitate the return of refugees from the fighting.

As preparations for a Soviet-Arab push against Israel went forward at the United Nations, Cairo Radio announced that foreign ministers of the Arab nations would meet in Kuwait Saturday to plan an Arab summit conference.

The report said the foreign ministers would discuss plans for "eliminating the traces of aggression against the Arab countries."

No date or site has been announced for the summit meeting.

Egyptian officials were letting it be known that President Gamal Abdel Nasser's government would rather risk another military test with Israel than negotiate a Middle East settlement with their conquerors.

Unconfirmed reports in Cairo said Egypt had already begun receiving shipments of Communist arms and other military equipment. There were rumors that Soviet MIG17 fighters had been flown in, and Cairo newspapers printed dispatches from Moscow saying the Communist countries of Eastern Europe were discussing replacement of military equipment lost by the Arabs.

Egypt also was reported preparing an expanded boycott of Western companies, principally those of the United States and Britain, which deal with Israel.

Among the Arab leaders, Algerian President Houari Boumedienne's star appeared to be in the ascendant following his trip to Moscow early this week to seek renewed Soviet support for the Arabs. Some diplomats in Cairo considered this a boost for Boumedienne because he went instead of Nasser, and today Syrian President Nureddin el-Atassi arrived in Algiers to confer with Boumedienne.

Boumedienne's hand also was strengthened because his army never got into the fighting and thus came out of the war intact, while Nasser's was wrecked.

In London, sources in the oil industry reported that Kuwait had resumed oil shipments to all its customers except Britain and the United States after breaking a 10-day strike of oil terminal workers that began with the outbreak of the war.

Saudi Arabia also was allowing British and American tankers to load provided they were not headed for British or American ports.

Oilmen in Britain generally feel that British oil needs can be met from shipments to countries not under the Arab ban, which stemmed from allegations—vigorously denied—of U.S. and British support of Israel.

In Ankara, Turkey, a Soviet Embassy spokesman denounced as a "complete fabrication" a report that five Russian officers had been captured by the Israelis on the Syrian front. The spokesman said no Soviet military men or technicians took part in the war.

Israeli military sources had reported the capture of the five Russians, but a spokesman for the Israeli army quickly denied it.

President Johnson and Vice President Humphrey acted in good faith when they addressed fund-raising dinners for Dodd, and did not know the funds might be converted to personal use.

Johnson addressed Dodd testimonial dinners in 1961 and 1963 when he was vice president, and Humphrey spoke at a fund-raising event for Dodd in 1965.

Stennis took the floor to reply to Dodd's lengthy statement Wednesday that he was innocent of any wrongdoing.

The Senate entered the third day of debate on a committee resolution recommending that Dodd be censured for conduct that "tends to bring the Senate into dishonor and disrepute."

At the outset of today's debate, Dodd again turned to a charge that he had collected air fares from both the Senate and private organizations in seven instances from 1961 through 1965.

Dodd insisted there were 80 or more trips for which he could have double-billed, rather than just 10 as reported by the ethics committee.

Long, D-La., has said he knows "what this is all about" and hinted that in time he will disclose new facts in the case.

But when Dodd was asked about this, he said if Long has any surprise evidence, "I am not privy to it."

He said the committee mistakenly assumed he had only 10 opportunities for double billing.

Dodd said today that in the 1961-65 period he made 26 trips for which he was reimbursed by the Senate for his travel expenses and 54 for which he was reimbursed by private groups.

If he wanted to engage in double billing, he said, he would have "invented a government purpose" for the 54 trips paid for by private groups and would have developed a private engagement for the 26 trips made on Senate business.

Dodd says he knows of no surprises planned in his defense, but his self-appointed defender, Sen. Russell B. Long, is hinting that new facts may be unveiled.

Methodists Favor Religious Center Plan

FAYETTE (AP) -- The Missouri East Conference of the Methodist Church has approved plans for a special commission to work with other denominations in developing religious centers in resort and recreation areas and in urban neighborhoods.

The Missouri West Conference previously approved the proposal.

The commission will have a budget of $50,000 in its first year.

The East Missouri Conference also voted Wednesday to join the West Missouri Conference in setting up a Methodist Foundation for Missouri.

The foundation will urge church members to make bequests to Methodist agencies in their wills.
